STUDENT V.S. DOOR

The old saying is "Rules are made to be broken." Rules and doors became confused on January 8th, much to the amazement of the student who walked through a one-way door. The only trouble was the door was shut, or half-shut, or half open, or opening... Well, anyway, both door and student suffered. The new glass is going to be tougher, so watch it, folks--you can't crash a party with crash-proof doors.

AUTOMOTIVE CORNER

QUESTION: Should automobile radiators be partially covered during severely cold weather, to increase the engine operating temperature?

ANSWER: After assuring that your automobile engine contains an efficient winter type thermostat, covering the radiator may prove detrimental as follows:

- (a) the radiator covering may be forgotten and the engine raised to destructive boiling temperature.
- (b) partially covering the radiator creates severe fan belt vibration, and breakage may destroy your radiator or puncture the hood.

Editor's Note: This will be a regular feature in future issues.

EDITORIAL

On last Wednesday the student council voted down the motion 9-4 to have meetings every Monday night. The council then turned around and voted in a motion to meet once every two weeks.

It is the opinion of the Editor that council has enough work to do to enable them to meet every Monday to iron out small problems that might be brought out at that time and go to the council meetings with a set program. This would enable the council and the executive to run more smoothly.

I know that the student council is working hard and I'm quite sure that more could be accomplished with less work if this were brought about.
