

POLICE NAB NAIT CRIMINALS

Forestry's Winning Float in MUK-LUK Parade

NAIT students in a hurry to get to school received an unpleasant surprise on Tuesday morning. Members of Edmonton's finest were up bright and early waiting to pounce upon that dreaded offender, THE JAY WALKER.

The exact number of $2 tickets issued is not known by the Nugget but the toll was quite high.

NAIT students aroused by this, the latest form of harassment by the police, planned to stage a 2,000 strong walk, back and forth, at the corner by the Menorah, during 5 p.m. rush hour traffic as a protest against the tickets.

Saner heads prevailed, however, and after some discussion between Mr. Saunders and the police it is now hoped that all tickets will be cancelled. Thus, any student offenders should take their tickets to the NAITSA offices as soon as possible.

It is hoped that there will not be another police attack on NAIT JAY WALKERS but just to be on the safe side, students are asked to cross at the corners legally from now on. It is doubtful if the police will be as generous next time.

NAIT FLYING CLUB TO BE FORMED

The objects of the club are:

- To provide members with flying training, leading to a pilot's licence at lowest possible cost. Such training shall use government approved courses and equipment and follow all appropriate safety practices.
- To provide members with continuing flying training leading to endorsements and licence upgrading and opportunities to enjoy the privileges of a pilot's licence.
- To provide members with opportunities to meet and discuss matters appertaining to flying training and aviation in general.
- To provide for the recreation of the members and to promote and afford opportunity for friendly and social activities.
- Generally to encourage and foster among its members (both flying and non-flying) appreciation of aviation as a way of life and the enjoyments pertaining to people with such an association and common bond of interest.

MEMBERSHIP

Full membership shall be open to all NAIT alumni and staff and students on course. Associate membership shall be open to all persons desiring an associate membership.

The full membership fee shall be $5.00 a year payable in advance.

The associate membership shall be $2.00 a year payable in advance.

Next meeting Monday, February 20th, at 4:30 p.m. in room A-121.

Aftermath of SAIT's Visit

We all thank the SAIT invaders for the work they did and careful planning involved in taking care of stolen property. Oh and we can't thank SAIT's Commercial Cooking students for the beautiful writing on the washroom mirrors, showcase windows, and a few doors around the school. They really couldn't have thought up anything more childish and it was only luck for them that it was a commissionaire who caught them and not a few of our boys.

Remember SAIT's little escapade at NAIT the week after the Queen Week? That was the time, when along with our beautiful queen, eight trophies were stolen from the south entrance showcases. But guess what? The showcases were locked at the time of their removal and as a result $50 damage was done.

Through the careless handling of the incompetent, amateur trophy-snatching SAIT clowns, seven of the eight trophies were damaged. Needless to say, SAIT will be paying for the repairs on them. And what about our Ookpik? He disappeared with the other items and hasn't been returned yet. He won't be returned either. Rumor has it that our mascot was brutally stepped on and literally taken apart while in Calgary. Wasn't that nice of them?

EDITORIAL

During the 8 past weeks the newspaper office has been used for Employment Interviews. This has given the staff an opportunity to observe how others conduct themselves during these interviews. The results have been appalling, with the exception of the business students who are offered a course on how to conduct themselves during an interview.

Students have actually attended interviews wearing jeans and cowboy boots, unshaved and perhaps unwashed although I didn't care to venture close enough to find out. About the only thing in their favour was the lack of manure on their boots.

Thus we have taken it upon ourselves to publish an article from a book made available by an Insurance Company. It is hoped that this will be read and adhered to by the students in future interviews. After all, any contact with the public is a direct reflection on the image of NAIT. Please do not tarnish this image any further. Be a NAIT MAN not a GARBAGE MAN.

* * * * *

It seems as though the city police have nothing better to do than harrass NAIT students. The jay walking incident on Tuesday was just another link in a long chain of events this year. Those of us who drive along Kingsway and turn north onto Princess Elizabeth are all too familiar with the view of a number of Police vehicles and officers waiting at the Drive-In restaurant. These officers seem content to sit back while traffic piles up at this corner and also at the NAIT parking lot, and apprehend drivers making illegal turns. The bulk of these illegal turns being caused by the traffic jam which in turn is caused by the negligence of the police. I come from a part of the country where the police are respected by the public not looked upon as lazy, do-nothings that must stoop to sneaking around to insure their quota of summons.

The Editor-in-Chief,
THE NUGGET,
 Northern Alberta
 Institute of Technology/
 EDMONTON, Alberta

Dear Sir:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for the wonderful entertainment the Northern Alberta Institute of Technology has provided for two of our Queens. It is very much appreciated.

You must have some very affluent people on campus to be able to afford such expensive weekends for our Queens. We have on campus a large number of beautiful girls who would just love to spend a weekend in Edmonton at NAIT's expense. I'm quite sure you would not have to bother to kidnap them.

The Editor of the Emery Weal is not as well fixed money wise as he might be, and would also appreciate a free weekend in Edmonton. I can assure you that kidnapping would not be necessary as I would be more than glad to go. I am awaiting your invitation.

Yours truly

DAN LIND

CITADEL NEWS

A sparkling and human play which Alexander Woolcott once described as "the best comedy written for the English stage in the last 100 years", is the next presentation at The Citadel Theatre.

George Bernard Shaw's CANDIDA will open a 23-performance engagement beginning February 15 and running through to March 11.

Heading the cast is one of Canada's most distinguished actors, PETER DONAT. He has appeared in five Broadway plays, winning the Theatre World Award in 1957 as the best featured actor on Broadway for his role in THE FIRST GENTLEMAN.

His face is extremely familiar to Canadian television viewers, having appeared in scores of serials and specials ranging from Festival to the very popular coroner series, Wojeck.

Michael Learned will have the title role of Candida. Other performers will be Montgomery Davis of Toronto; Anne Anglin, John Wardwell and Jay Bonnell. The latter three performers have been seen in previous Citadel productions this season.

The play will be directed by DESMOND SCOTT, of Toronto, who once spent three seasons as resident director of the flourishing Manitoba Theatre Centre. The Citadel received an additional Canada Council grant for bringing him in as guest director.

PREPARATION FOR AN INTERVIEW

* * * * *

Some of the more observant members of our student body have noticed that there are students attending job interviews here who must think that because they are specialists, no one will notice or care how they look, act, or are dressed. For those unfortunate students who are laboring under this misconception, we offer the following valuable words of advice. You are a representative of NAIT while attending a job interview and a poor impression will have an adverse effect on the institute as well as yourself.

Some basic and proven principles on this matter have been reprinted here from a publication of a very reliable source.

The employment interview is one of the most important events in the average person's experience, for the obvious reason that the 20 or 30 minutes he spends with the interviewer may determine the entire future course of his life. Yet college recruiters are continually amazed at the number of applicants who drift into job interviews without any apparent preparation and only the vaguest idea of what they are going to say. Their manner says, "Well, here I am". And that's often the end of it, in more ways than one.

Others, although they undoubtedly do not intend to do so, create an impression of indifference by behaving as though they'd dropped in between coke dates. The young man who reports to an interview wearing saddle shoes and a sports coat — who leans back in his chair and lights up a cigarette — seems to be saying, "What can you do for me?"

At the other extreme, a few applicants get themselves into a state of mind where they feel as if they are being marched into a medieval inquisition chamber. When they arrive they are in the last stages of nervous fright and unable to do much but gulp and answer in monosyllables.

These marks of inexperience can be avoided by knowing a little of what actually is expected of you and by making a few simple preparations before the interview.

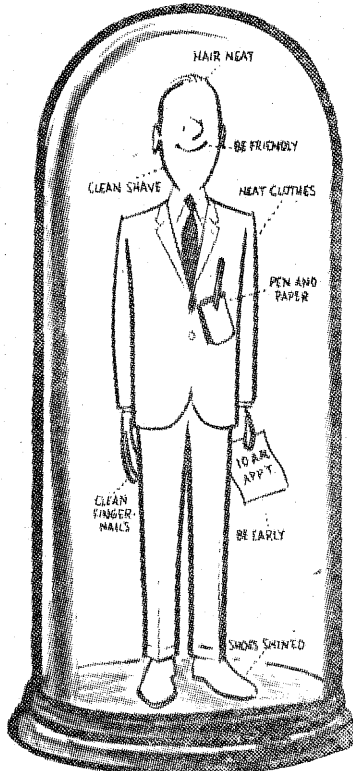

Here are some of the things you can do to get yourself ready:

1. Find out the exact place and time of the interview.
2. Write the time and place down and keep the notation with you.
3. Get the full name of the company straight, along with its address.
4. Be certain you have your interviewer's full name, and find out how to pronounce it if it looks difficult.
5. Do some research on the company interviewing you. Try to find out how old the company is, where its plants, offices or stores are located, what its products or services are, what its growth has been, and how its prospects look for the future. This will give you something besides yourself to talk about during your interview, and provide material to form the questions you should ask.

6. Prepare your questions before you go in for the interview. There are a number of publications which can help you research a company. Most of them can be found in any good-sized college or public library.
7. Bring a pencil with you and a pen that writes neatly.
8. Have some kind of note paper with you, out of sight.
9. Plan to arrive at the designated place at least 15 minutes early, if you can. Late arrival for a job interview is almost never considered excusable.
10. Clothes. Your own good taste is your best guide. Simply remember that you are looking for a job — not going to a party. A girl should wear conservative clothes — not dowdy ones. A young man should also dress conservatively and, ordinarily, in a suit. His accessories should complement his suit — not contrast with it. Sport shoes are not proper for a job interview. Of course your shoes should be well shined. If you are forced to rush to an interview directly from a job or a lab, a polite excuse for your attire will be accepted and the situation understood.
11. If you use after-shave lotion, wash your hands afterward so that the scent will not transfer to the recruiter's hands. And, since many college interviewing rooms are small and stuffy, such lotions should be used sparingly.
12. Each of the above suggestions is meant to be helpful, but it would be a mistake to become unduly worried over too many details. A genuinely attractive personality and a good school record will overcome most small errors. Be friendly, honest and sincere and you will always make a good impression.

Other hints on job interviews can be found in a booklet called, "Your Job Interview" published by New York Life Insurance Company.

"NORTHERN LITES" LIGHTS OUT

Friday, February 10, was the final performance of "Northern Lites" at the Jubilee Auditorium. If you read Barry Westgate's column in the Thursday edition of the Journal, you would have got the feeling that he wasn't too impressed with the show except for Rich Little. After yawning through most of the show, I can see that his conclusions were valid.

The first half of the show was much too short and, to the audience, must have been very confusing, for there was no program to tell what was coming next. The Cossack dancers lived things up with their excellent performance but the act following slowed down things again with a slowly sung waltz. The girls with the castanets did a very good job with their numbers and it was unfortunate that the sound system was a little shakey at the start of their act. Intermission came too soon and most of the audience just sat waiting for the next group to come on before realizing that it was time to enjoy a steaming cup of coffee, too hot to drink before the call came announcing the second half of the show.

For almost another hour the show dragged on. The songs from West Side Story, Funny Girl, and Dr. Zhivago were well done but the girl singing "People" from Funny Girl didn't realize proper etiquette as she, in tight-fitting, full-length evening gown, started walking off the stage, then broke into a trot which musn't have been too appealing to the audience. Just in time, Rich Little, bounced onto stage imitating the walks of Prime Minister Pearson and Mr. Diefenbaker. One of the funniest lines came in a conversation between the two when Mr. Pearson accused Mr. Diefenbaker's term of office as being "... a sex and security scandal", to which Mr. Diefenbaker replied, "At least it was a fun government". He also suggested that if Julia Kiniski teamed up with Charlotte Whitten they could "... rule the world". Little's impersonation of Dean Martin was done to a tee, including the famous leap onto the piano. Along with many other voices, Rich Little provided 40 minutes of fresh and funny humor which certainly made every person in the audience glad that they had come to see him.

STAFF SPOTLIGHT

MR. H. DAUM

Mr. H. Daum, department head of Business Administration and Computer Technology, is featured in the spotlight this week.

He has been the head of the Business Administration department since 1965; he took on the additional duties of department head of Computer Technology in 1966.

A native of Hanover, Germany, he has received all of his past secondary education in North America. He enrolled at Montana State University in 1958 graduating in 1961 with an A.S.C. majoring in Economics. Upon graduation from Montana State he worked as an economist for an international construction for 18 months. The University of Idaho granted him a B.Sc. in Business Administration Science in 1963. For the past few summers, he has been working on his Master of Science in Business Administration at the University of Idaho which he will receive this spring.

This summer he hopes to do some work towards his Ph.D. in economics at the London School of Economics. While in Europe he will also attend a number of seminars in Switzerland, Germany, and England.

Some of his outside activities are, first vice-president of the Edelweiss Club, soccer, skiing, travelling, photography, and coaching the Business Administration hockey team.

Not surprisingly for a person who is involved in education as much as he is, Mr. Daum holds some definite opinions on the industry.

Some of these views are that technical education as such, should be extended to three years, with labeled and the grade should be extended to three years, with the suggestion that this approach is not only a step towards a more comprehensive education but also a way to provide a more solid foundation for the student's future career.

The artificial limitations placed on Canadian education, such as not crediting top technical students credits at Universities and forcing older mature people of proven ability to have their senior matriculation, before they can enter a University is having an increasing effect on the present difficulties of the Canadian economy. He defines these problems as, lack of capital and a shortage of skilled and highly educated people.

The present stranglehold that Universities have on the secondary education system should be broken, by designing quality courses to fit either technical or academic education. A heavier stress should be placed on courses such as political science, heavier mathematics, straight history, English composition and literature in the high schools.

Some of the people that have influenced his thinking are a Dr. Grau, a former instructor of his, who was an advisor to President Hoover on South American affairs. Dr. Fiedler, a noted author and leading English professor who was his instructor at Montana State, left an impression as far as writing business letters. The general manager of Krupp, Mr. Beitz did much to shape his present belief that to be successful a person must be aggressive.

Mr. Daum projects the image of a person who is confident in his own ability. He is ambitious, energetic, bright, and young; all the qualities for a successful business career. Then what is he doing teaching? He freely admits that teaching is not his first love, but rather a stepping stone of his personal development. Teaching at a university for a few years is his immediate goal, but this only to satisfy his own ego.

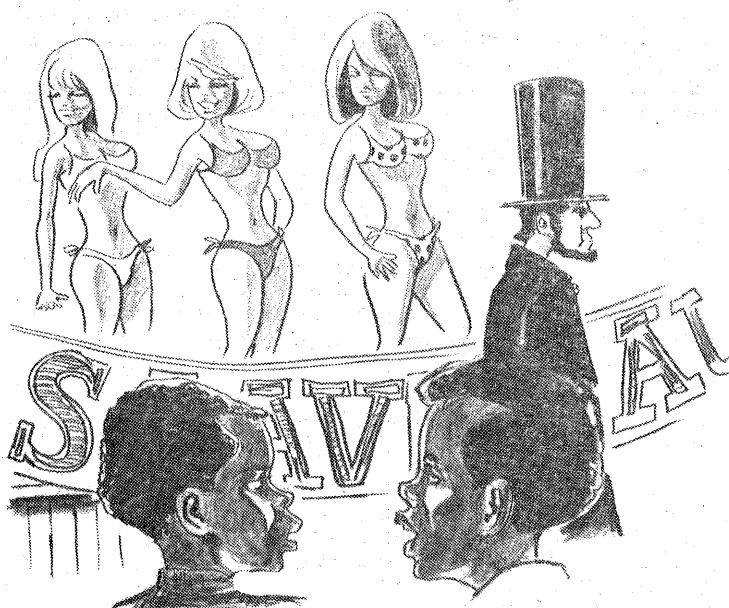

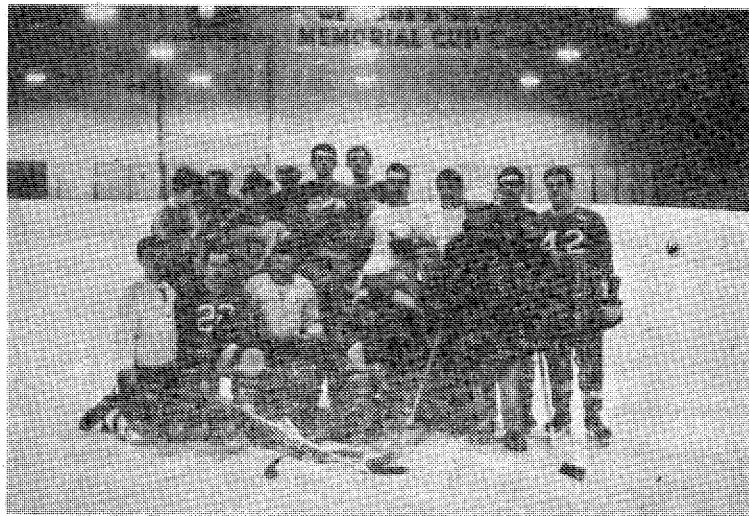

Being in a field that tends to produce more conformist-business. Surprisingly he classes himself as a rebel. He feels he is a non-conformist, but said "that he was realistic enough to recognize that a person must conform until he gets up high enough in an organization to be powerful enough to be a non-conformist". This may possibly be a reason that he is after that "Super Sheepskin" (Ph.D.).

People who are "yes men", who fawn and crawl on their bellies in the hope of getting promotion, are people he dislikes. It is his firm belief that society owes us nothing, that a person must be aggressive, particularly in business to carve a niche for himself.

While a person should be aggressive, he should not overlook the necessity of every day human relations. People should be considerate of other people's feelings; of your fellow worker or classmate. He cautions on being aggressive in a crude and obvious manner to people we are closely associated with, rather we should direct this aggression into molding people to work for us as a team.

As long time student some of the qualities he would like to see in a student are, an ability to think for himself, to take a situation and use it for his own benefit, to enjoy life, such as attending parties, meeting different people and travelling. He hastens to add that a student should be at least average in his academic studies.

BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION - DISTRIBUTIVE HOCKEY TEAM 1967

Mah! Times Shore Are Changing!

NAIT Looses To U. of A. In Broomball

The mighty NAIT Broomball team tasted bitter defeat for the first time this year as the U. of A. downed them 5-1. In a game scheduled as part of the grandstand show at Muk-Luk Mardi Gras the U. of A. completely out classed NAIT for the first time ever.

NAIT started out fast scoring the first goal late in the opening period. Pat Clarke was the marksman on a long hand shot.

The university team then proceeded to tie the score before the period ended, and went on to score 2 goals in each of the following periods.

The game was cleanly played and the only injuries were swollen rear ends (that ice was slippery!).

Team members were:

PAT CLARKE	Executive
GERRY NUFER	Executive
MIKE DONAHOE	B.A.S.
TONY WISPINSKI	Forestry
KEITH TILDEN	Dental
WAYNE CUDMORE	Dental
WALLY MYLES	Survey
PETE MacCLELLAND	Arch.
BERNIE KROPP	Instr.

By the way the reason for this being NAIT's only defeat this season or ever for that matter was it was the first time they ever played.

OOKPIKS WIN HOCKEY TITLE

Friday, February 10, NAIT Oookpiks won the WICC Hockey Championships by a score of 4 to 3. The series was planned for Friday and Saturday but the Visiting team refused to play Saturday.

Friday afternoon, at the Varsity arena Oookpiks and Mount Royal College squared off in the first of the two proposed games of the weekend. The first period was slow with no goals scored and only two penalties being called. Mount Royal were given both penalties, one a misconduct to the Cougar Captain. During the second period the goals started popping in — Zakietuk, Caton and Scoggins scored goals for NAIT as the Oookpiks took a 3-0 lead. Later in the period Petrey and McBain put Mount Royal on the score board. Oookpiks picked up three of the five penalties called during the middle frame.

In the third period each team scored one goal. Rick George scored NAIT's winner at the 6:55 mark and Boswell scored Cougars lone third period marker at 18:58 after a brilliant attempt by Rick Young to stop the puck with his forehead.

Saturday morning Oookpiks dressed and hit the ice at St. Mary's Arena. Half a dozen Cougars dressed but the coach and goalie refused to play. The scoresheet was filled out by Oookpiks, signed by the referees and scorekeeper and sent to WICC headquarters. Oookpiks assumed the win, had a small workout to give the fans their money's worth and went to gobble up Brian Scoggins fifty cent oranges.

This concluded league play for the Oookpiks who now hope to get in a few exhibition games in Edmonton and district centre.

This edition of the Nugget will feature the first of the "Know Your Oookpiks" series. This week we will concentrate on our goalie Rick Young. Rick is enrolled in first year Business Administration and plans on becoming Hugh Hephner's personnel director when he finishes next year. The hard headed goalie played 8 league and 1 playoff game and allowed 25 goals to slip past him. Rich is one of the Livelier members of the Oookpik squad and is known to have either taken all the money or keeps everyone awake on the road trips to Calgary. Rich hails from Vermillion and is known as one of the North East Albertans along with Ernie Joly and Brian Scoggins. Rich recorded one shutout this season and almost had another even though the doctor told him to watch his knees and he spent most of the year looking at his knee.

So next time you see a growing 19½ year old fella walking down the hall, knee looking, enquire about his abilities to keep the NAIT net clear but don't keep him from his classes. Rich doesn't believe in missing a minute of school if it can be helped.

In the next issues watch for more "Know Your Oookpiks" such as "NAIT's Tough Defensive Corps", or "Try get by me Stupid" and "Oookpik own UKE Line" of "Why the Coach combined the UKES".
