ONCE UPON A TIME

Once upon a time a long time ago and far far away there lived a young man. This young man was similar to most of the other people in the world in which he lived in that he got up every morning and went to work. When his day was over he would go home eat supper and then sit down to watch the T.V. set for the rest of the evening. When he got tired he would then go off to bed and then follow the same process over again the next day. This process went on for awhile till one day the man stopped himself in the street and said, "What the Hell am I doing this for. The jobs a dead end and theres not much room for advancement in this company." It was just a matter of days before the man quit his job.

After mopping around for awhile enjoying his new found freedom he decided that he'd better start to plan his future because he couldn't survive with no money. So he took a holiday so that he could decide his future. It was on this holiday that he decided that if he was ever to make anything of himself that he would have to go to post-secondary school. After arriving home from holidays this man looked into several colleges and universities before he finally decided to go to a college by the name of F.A.I.T. He felt that by taking a 2 year business program at F.A.I.T. he could prepare himself for any challenge the world had to throw at him.

His first year at F.A.I.T. was just one big party and as a result his marks suffered. He decided that he smarten up the second year though. Well as destiny would have it, his school F.A.I.T. got a real negative attitude going around the school early in the year. This man decided that he'd try to improve the spirit at F.A.I.T. by taking over the paper. It wasn't a total self-volunteering thing because he knew that if he didn't take over the paper that the paper would close down. He also knew that the paper would probably would eventually cost him a chance at his diploma because newspaper editors and colleges didn't go to well together.

Well his first year on the paper was a learning experience and a lot of mistakes were made by him and his staff. He did one smart thing during that year though and that was to break up his course load into 2 years. He figured that this would give him lots of time for classes as well as the newspaper. It didn't. He finished off his second year and said goodbye to his friends who were graduating. He spent the summer deciding how he was going to improve the paper even more the next year.

Good fortunes fell down upon the school of F.A.I.T. the next year in that the school spirit was up when the year started. As a result the paper staff increased. With an increased staff this meant that this man had more responsibilities and an increased work load because even though he didn't have to do as much writing, he had more management responsibilities in teaching his staff what to do.

As a result when he got his marks for the quarter he also received his eviction notice. It wasn't unexpected!

So what the man had expected would happen to him one day happened. All the long hours and days and weeks he spent trying to build up the newspaper into something respectable went down the tube. Not a word of thanks was issued for what he had done.

Well, the man walked away from F.A.I.T. much older and much wiser and he learned an important lesson about life. Don't waste you time helping others because they don't appreciate it and there not about to help you if you get in trouble.

Of course the above story is fictional and never could happen in the real world but just remember everything happens, "Once upon a time"...

WINTER - CYCLE

Winter is the time for quiet reflection on motorcycles. It is a time to think gentle and kind thoughts also at your machine instead of blazing about the streets trying to bend the needle off of the speedometer.

Major motorcycle companies using this fireside chat atmosphere to full advantage, choose, December to splash large color pictures of slinky women rubbing up against candy apple paint jobs across the center pages of motorcycle magazines.

They supply a single example of the new motorcycle to a local dealer and then forbid him to sell it for the next three months.

They want to wet your appetite, arouse your bizarre instincts, feed the greedy little demon in your mind, bring that socially irresponsible, speed crazed troll that skulls in the darkest holes of your head boiling to the surface.

Before you know it your baukeu is accosted by what appears to be a raving lunatic, with a large club in-hand and form about the nose and mouth demanding large quantities of fives tens and twenties within the next ten seconds.

Your hot breath wrinkles the bills as you burst into the showroom, swaying headily under the intoxicating power of borrowed money.

Honest citizens draw back, in alarm, drool stains the floor, grunts and snarls escape your lips as you totter towards you prize.

Then like a born again Christian kneeling before the one true God your gaze softens and one bended knee with tear filled eyes you offer your sweaty arm load of money to the high priest salesman and beg; yes, beg would be please consider you worthy of purchasing such a motorcycle. Whimper, snivel, grovel, lick.

And it's going to get worse. By February of 1978 every one of the big four motorcycle companies in Japan will have one the market, a bike capable of running an eleven second ¼ mile; stock, right out of the showroom.

Just plunk down around $3,500 and rocket from the Edmonton Inn to the AMA in less time than it takes to say summons, subpoena, and Edmonton City Police.

If you want something that will lead you into temptation then smack you in the eye for letting it go to your head; something that will ravage your wallet and make your days glow with excitement, then stick around friend. For you lucky ones that tune in, 1978 will be the year of the bike and I for one can hardly wait.

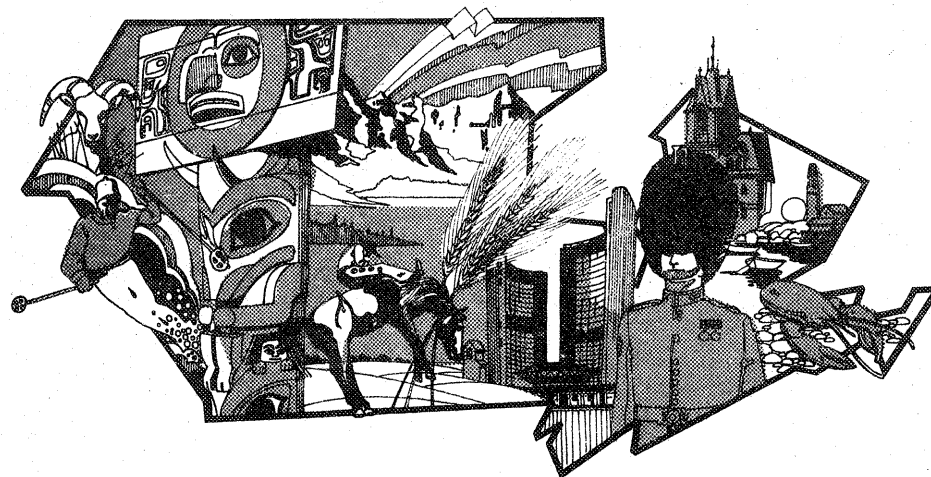

Our client, an Edmonton based company, requires a part time computer operator to work approximately 25 hours per week in evenings and weekends. Computer operations experience would be an asset, but is not essential as on-the-job training will be provided. This position could lead to full time summer employment through demonstrated acceptable performance. Those interested candidates should send their resume including salary expectations quoting file no. C77-05

Item: ATTENTION! The cabaret this Friday at 4:00 features Elder Dark. They are the best Calgary has to offer and our council has gone on a thin line to bring these guys here so, GET YOUR BUTTS OUT THERE!

Item: Why do we have to write final exams THE day after the Grey Cup game? Especially when our beloved Eskimos are involved. Not only do the parties take a heavy thump, but any chance of going to the game itself is destroyed. How about moving finals up one day when the Eks are in the big one?

Item: Why must we listen to that derelict juke box that pervades the atmosphere of the tower lounge? if and when it works, the quality of sound is humorous and the selection of music positively prehistoric. Why not run CHNR (our NAIT radio station) through the already existing speaker system? It is the patent solution to an obvious problem. Whoever is responsible and wherever you are, what are you doing?

Item: The movie in the Little Theatre this week is the Seven Per-Cent Solution. Arthur Conan Doyle might not approve of the way his premiere character Sherlock Holmes is portrayed in this psycho-drama, but he could certainly appreciate the end-product itself. Realizing certain self-destruction through the misuse of mystifying white powders, our detective is guided to resurrection by the powers of one Sigmund Freud.

Together they battle the doings of Doctor Moriarity and certain other deserved villains. Doctor Watson narrates the episode in his usual explicit manner and the entire production comes off as one amazing complication of the unexpected. It is the best offering of the year to date, don't miss it.

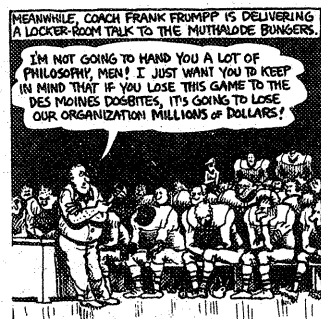

Comment: I took in one of the many ski trips run over the quarter break and through various slight-of-hand moves, am still able write this column. I narrowly avoided alcohol overdose on numerous occasions and severe frostbite on many others.

This is more than I can say for a certain large Marketing student. Beset upon by three young ladies with malicious intent in mind and hot iron in hand, his escape from a curly doom was facilitated only through a slight timing error on their part. The company was excellent, the snow conditions beautiful and the lineups almost bearable. Congratulations Business Society on a well organized affair. The memories will linger.

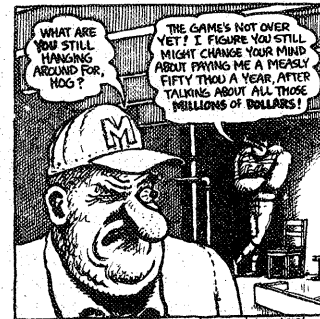

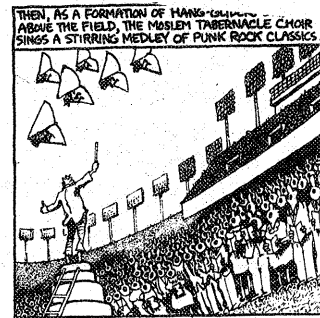

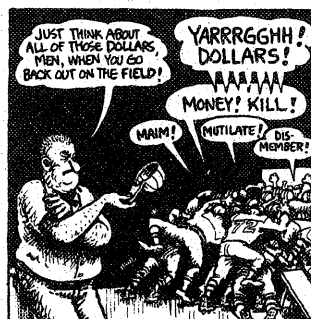

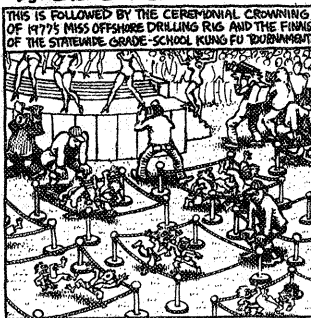

P.S. I finally found food that tasted worse and cost more than our own cafeteria. Try eating in the Marmot lodge sometime.

and snowshoeing and winter survival will be offered in the second quarter's out door education program. Most people are pleasantly surprised with their ability to adapt to winter outdoor, whether it be on skis or spending a night in a lean-too at 35 degree centigrad below zero. With the right kind of preparation, both mental and equipment wise, the hardship can be met with surprising ease.

A special offering, for those who have taken a basic survival course, or who have a good grasp of the skills, is an advanced survival course. The individual placed in a simulated survival situation. Either in pairs or by himself. The situation with provide the basics axe, knife, plastic shelter, sleeping bag and clothing plus a limited amount of food.

Each person(s) will be taken to an isolated campsite where they will setup their camp for two days and one night. Whistles will be provided in case of emergency and NAIT staff will be keeping close observation on the individuals.

These people will get a real chance... to be alone-to think-examine.

examine his or her position in a more direct contact with the natural world. The result may be some insight into the individuals personal space...just a side line to his or her ability to deal with a survival situation.

This past quarter has seen the Physical and Leisure Education Dept. offer a variety of basic outdoor recreation experience to you the students. The list of courses included; basic lake canoeing, fall camping, backpacking, basic survival skills, Nature Interpretation and an introduction to map and compass use. As co-ordinator of these programs I must say that I am pleased with the interest and efforts put out by those who attended the weekend sessions. These individuals were willing to venture forth and over come the "difficulties" of cold, sore muscles, heavy packs, wet feet or beyond, and other inconveniences to gain a number of satisfying rewards.

The most obvious of which is a skill developed. All individuals learned the basics of an outdoors skill: keeping a canoe straight in a wind, lighting a fire from available natural materials, how to for and icy river(fast) how to signal for help if lost in the bush, proper care of the use of a knife. All of these things demand concentration and physical co-ordination which can be quickly developed; providing an immediate reward.

As people develop basic skills there are two things present which make the experience more enjoyable. First of all you have 10-15 other individuals working away, each with his or her own personality and ability level so you can meet, share communicate with, and enjoy one another. Living and learning together, as a group, provides for the building of deeper and more meaningful relationship which are often times hard to establish in a vast social gathering such as NAIT. Talk to some one who has taken a weekend.

The second element you will find present, adding to the value of an outdoor experience, is the setting. The natural world, in an undisturbed state reveals much to the outdoor recreationist. Canoeing as quietly as possible a cross a smooth lake following a muskrat or beaver, skiing through a herd of bison, tracking a wolf through a valley over a pass and down watching the white caps come in behind you pushing your boat to shore, are some of the real challenging, and rewarding events in realm of those who participate in outdoor pursuits. It is enough to mention the clean air, earthy smells, soft colors, and silence that ran also be found, built in the background of this experience.

As you enjoy the activity, setting and fellow participants there is no doubt that your physical output will be increased as a matter of necessity, fending off the heart attack machine.

All these rewards combined with ultra-significant two credits in P.E. will be too much for most people to resist.

Fortunately this fall provided excellent weather for most things and I hope the winter will be as co-operative.

Speaking of winter; Cross Country Skiing, winter camping

SPORTS

Those Edmonton Eskimos sure were the shits,
They played like a bunch of stupid nit wits,
We knew they'd fall short in winning it all,
I wasn't surprised, I knew they would fall.

"Brucy Baby" was knocked out quite fast,
Of course you and I knew, he just couldn't last
It seems he never comes through in a crunch,
And "Tommys" a quarterback without any punch.

"Hughie" looked sick and very downhearted,
And he even looked worse when Dan Kepley farted,
As that was the big gist impression he made
It looked like the first time he'd ever played.

Six first downs in a grey cup game
Doesn't account for VERY much fame
And rushing for only fifty six yards
Will never give Strickland and Germany stars.

Davey Cutler felt badly, not booting the ball
But he couldn't call the quarter back calls.
He was lucky to get the lonely six Counter
He would of kicked more, if he'd been the punter.

As wide reciever, McGowan not bad
But for a grey cup game, he was really sad.
If they'd have forgotten old Georgie at home
Konihouski could catch the few that were thrown.

Oh yes Stew Lang was along with the team
I saw him just once, letting off some hot steam,
Larry Highbaugh made just one dash to get out of the cold.
Do you think he was weary or just growing old

Theres lots of guys that I didn't mention
But believe that they've all been put on a pension
Ron Estay, Bob Haves and Roger Scales
Where heard in the dressing room, letting out Wails

Pete Lavarato, Tom Townes and Ed Jones
Didn't give much but a few low key moans
Joe Holiman, David Boone and Bill Stevenson too
Should of hussled closer and been given a clue.

Farlinger, Santucci, Eric Upton and all
Can look forward next year to playing T. Ball.
Musr't forget, Charlie Turner the sissy
Don Warrington, Fennell and Hank Lessic
So to Hentchel, Smith, Dale Potter and all
Bye-Bye You pansy's -- Don't wait for a call.

The icy Conditions, the snow on the field
Please! no excuses, your wounds they will heal
Their was no pentration beyond Montreal's 30
And for that, you Eskimos won the birdie.

The ball they did lose, four times intercepted
The first one Harris, from Brucie Accepted
Strickland, he fumbled, Glen Weir he recovered
Both ended in scores for Montreal lovers

Forty one - Six is surley the Pits
For a Grey Cup game, its really the shits.

NOSTALGIA

Peggy Park, this years women's sports chairman, informs me that NAIT is finally going to have cheerleaders again. Our institute has been lacking any sort of organization of this kind for the past two seasons, and whether this reflects on the spirit of the girls at NAIT or whether the blame lies on the shoulders of those higher up in the past is unknown to me at this time. Nevertheless it has finally happened and I'm sure you will agree that it will be a great boost to the teams, not to mention the fans during this coming season.

OOKS UPSET

The Hockey Ookpiks after a tremendous start suddenly find themselves fighting for their lives when they should be walking away from the opposition. The Ooks have lost their last three games and find themselves ahead of only SAIT in the league standings.

The Ookpik defense was supposed to be a problem area for the team this year and it really hasn't been all that good, but too much of the blame is being put on the defensive players on the team. The entire team looked terribly disorganized against the SAIT Trojans on the weekend and as a result they were handed a good shellacking. Last time SAIT ventured into the NAIT Arena they were handed a 13-3 defeat, but they turned the tables on the Ooks this time with a 7 to 2 win. Coach Henwood has the people to ice a winning team but as yet they have failed to jell.

I think the blame has to be put on either the Coach or the players.

The coach, Dale Henwood had the team playing good hockey at the beginning of the season and he is using the same players as then, so maybe the problem is with the players.

They look very unorganized and they definately are not playing as a team, which is their biggest problem. Their is a lot of talent on this team, but until they start playing like a team rather than a bunch of individuals they will have trouble winning the amount of games that they should and are capable of.

This team has character and when the playoffs roll around your fans will be rewarded with a strong playoff team. So all the Ooks ask is to be patient and they will get their show together at the right time, so as to peak at playoff time.

COOKIN' BY TERRYP PAHOLEK

Back sometime ago the concept of Student Housing was toyed with by the men who make the decisions about these kinds of things. First there was a great disruption caused by the fact that some of the two unit dwellings along Princess Elizabeth Avenue were not rented out due to the decision that they should be used as housing for families, instead of students and someday would be torn down and replaced with a new addition to the Nait Campus. Then we started hearing from the owners of the small string of stores along 118 Ave. just south of the new Plaza 2 complex. Supposedly the Nait traffic does not come close to the traffic that abounded before Sears moved. The store owners are greatly in favour of a student campus. However Nait is expanding at a breathtaking rate with only a limited amount of space to expand to. We can't move to the west because of the airport; a new campus building is planned for the north parking lot; south is the Kingsway Garden Mall with its vast parking with rates only if they call a tow truck on you (not allowed to park there).

So... it looks like east is the only direction to take. The tradeoff lies within whether to sacrifice housing facilities for more people and raising the population of Nait or to retain the present population and increase their present available facilities.

The Dept. of Advanced Education shed a little light on why student housing does not place high on the priority list. It seems that more private residences have opened their doors and are more readily renting out basement suites or whatever the accommodation to students making things a bit easier.

Advanced Education feels that if they can't provide housing in the immediate area then they should be more concerned with providing housing on traffic routes which run almost directly to Nait. At the moment transportation to Nait is the problem. The bus service is slow but effective. Until anything new comes along we'll just have to put up with it.

Another reason for stalling the project is that the NAIT year lasts only 9 months. This means that 3 extra months costs must be absorbed. What about University residence? The difference is that in the months that the U of A is out for summer vacation, some of the extra units are used by summer students. The number of students NAIT has that need residence during the summer is lower per potential population than the University. This means the extra costs will be assimilated in the other 9 months.

Looks like the idea still has a few bugs.

Turning present dwellings into housing structures would be difficult as most of the buyable apartment buildings in the area are two and three bedroom. This is alright if you like roommates. But what about the economics of only one person in a bachelor or one bedroom suite? Will it cost more? Which students will be privileged? The most likely alternative is to build specifically for the problem. Innovations in this case look as though they would be costly not to mention complex in the manner of how to rent them. We are definitely in need of a more organized approach in order to decrease the number of problems present and future students have in finding housing.

The need is here, but Red Tape and discussion dominate over all and it may be a while before another closet in E wing is opened up and a student housing services sign is tacked on the door.

STUDENT EVICTED FROM RESIDENCE FOR GAMES

BRANDON (CUP) -- The 1979 Canada Winter Games will have a major impact on students at Brandon University.

Residence students will be required to vacate their rooms and will have their personal belongings moved out so that the athletes can stay in the residence. The Games will also mean a loss of one week of classes and it has not been determined how these classes will be made up.

The residence students will be provided with room and board in Brandon if they cannot return home during the Games. According to Hans Burmeister, a faculty member on the Games committee personal articles will be moved at no cost to the student.

The decision to use the university residence to house the athletes was made in 1975 by the Games committee. Robert Campbell, student union president and student representative on the committee at that time, supported the decision. Since then, other council members complained that Campbell never consulted them on the issue and they still felt left out of the Games committee activities.

The student representative are beginning to accept the residence decision as a fait accompli. However, they are pushing for more input into the planning of the housing scheme in order to minimize the inconvenience to students.

depressing gentlemen. Did you know tha the male population at NAIT outnumbers the female population 4 to 1. Did you also know that at cabarets, the male/female breakdown is about 6 or 7 to 1. I guess what I'm trying to say is why don't some of you guys try to get and hustle up a date for some of the cabarets, I know its hard to go up to a girl and say Hi, "How'd you like to go to the cabaret Friday night." Well Ol Franks got another brilliant idea. If you see a girl you like, catch her in the cafeteria someday or else in the hall and bump into her and knock whatever she has in her hands out of them. That will give you an excuse to start up a conversation with her. Then you can spring the question on her. Tell her that you'll even buy her way in as long as she buys the beer.

If none of that works, then tell her you don't like her face either.

P.S. You'd better smile when you say that last line.

Well, well, well. So finals are finished for another quarter. Ol Frank sure is happy about that cause him and finals don't ever seem to get along to well. I'm not saying that I'm stupid or anything like that but sometimes my intellectual capacity has been questioned. Why I remember the time back in 1971 when ...

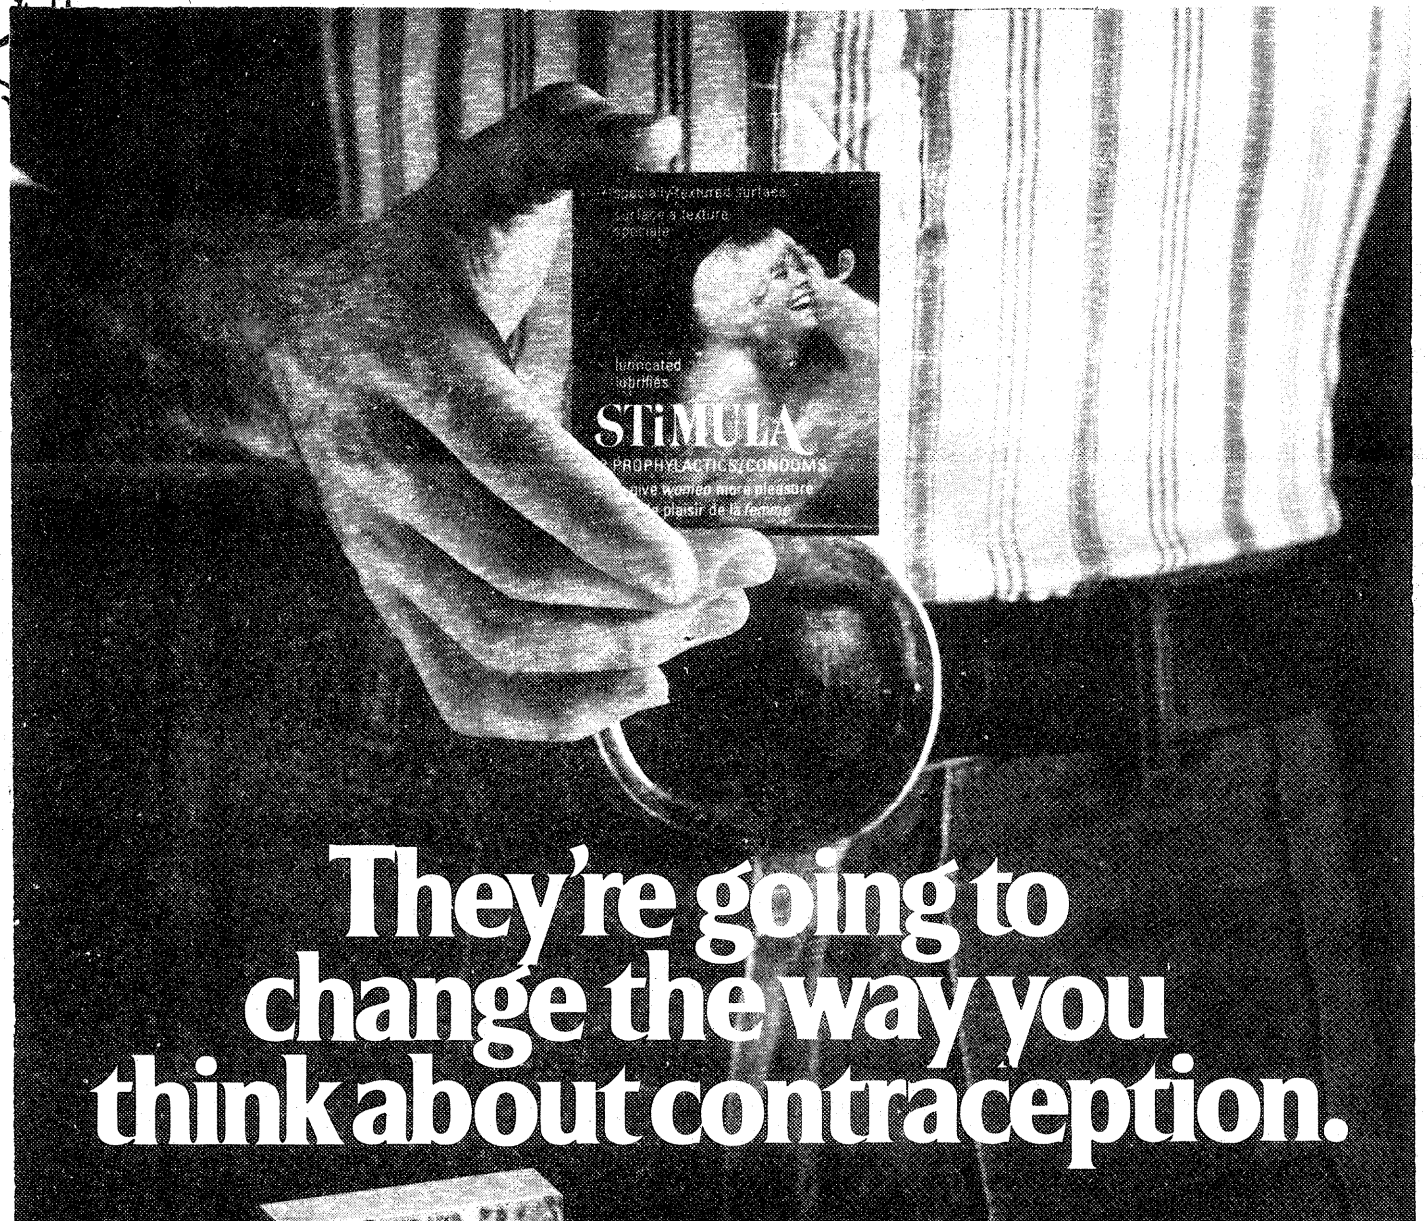

Did you hear about the lady getting caught between floors in the elevator the other day. It seems like one of the members of the other sex pushed a wrong button and got hung up between floors. I guess they had to call an elevator man in to get her out. I sort of look down on the whole idea as, "Lady Gets the Shaft".

Geez its cold outside. Thousands of hunks of frozen steel laying out on the city streets just because of the cold weather. I heard the editor of this here rag was driving into the city the other night when his old beast just froze up on him. Sorta put the freeae on him I'd say. I always figured him as the sort of guy who might overheat but never freezeup.

Talking about Rod, I guess the system is finally going to give him the boot, thats right there going to send him down that old highway called life. Its too bad cause he was doing a good job here as far as I'm concerned. I guess NAIT the type of school where education is the #1 priority and the system just won't understand when someone places something else as the #1 priority. I'm going to have to do a lot of thinking as to whether I'm going to stay on or not now.

I do know one thing for sure, and its going to depend an awful lot on who is chosen as new editor before I decide whether I'm going to stay on. I know that Knobber Bones decided to pack it in when he heard Rod was getting the boot. I don't think that was his only reason but it doesn't matter now. I wonder if Ol Franks got a chance for the job. man that old NUGGET would never be the same after I got finished with it.
