ROCKUMENTORY

BY Joe Sourburger

Well, how can one expiam the supreme feeling of being surrounded by an atmosphere of extreme emotional exhuberance pressing against the walls as if feeling for a crack to express itself? Actually this was my first encounter with a NAIT Beerfest. Speaking factually of Saturday last. It also describes my first encounter with Thelma "Thick-Lips" Rimm in the back seat of my 1964 Chevrolet Noltan. Seeing as how I would dislike to put Thelma's reputation to shame I will not divulge any of her closely guarded secrets(although she does take yoga, or anyone else who happens to be passing by) Let me speak mainly of the musical entertainment meaning of course the Fifth Avenue Bay City Rollers. I froliced to the tunes of 'Boz Scags, Eric Carmen and K.C. I swagged my beer cautiously in anticipation of a special seven minute rendition of the disco duck. As you must warmly remember the Disco-Duck fluttered to the top of charts last year only to be shot down by a multitude of unsympathetic rock squakers. I was disheartened when I came to the burning conclusion that the "Duck" was not to rear its cute falsetto tailfeathers. But also do not be driven frantically beyond hope. For the 5 AA played the coup de tene something resembling the Special Limited Edition Beach Boys Greatest Hits Album Vol. 309 Chapter 1121. At the end of the set I was left in a quagmar of emptiness and satisfaction. Although these chaps showed themselves as musicians of fine taste and character I still believe deep-down everybody is basically nice. Let a good time be had by all( who can get tickets.)

BEERFESTS

Well, the first beerfest for the year is now over and done with. However I did manage to see and hear about a number of problems which would be nice to have cleared up before the next one.

Before I get into some of the things I consider problem areas I would like to congratulate Miss Judy Morgan on her winning of the Miss Freshette title. The whole competition seemed to come off without too many problems and I think a hand should be extended to all the girls who participated.

ITEM: How come only 850 people were allowed into the beerfest when there were nearly 2000 applications for tickets during the week?

REPLY: I checked with Students Council in regards to this problem and apparently the Fire Marshalls are the guilty ones. (More details elsewhere in this paper)

POSSIBLE SOLUTION: How about Students Council looking into the possibility of building a new cabaret building. I understand there's a few bills that were unspent by previous councils presently growing mildew in some bank or trust company. I mean it shouldn't cost more than a few hundred thousand and the beerfests could be quadrupled in number. Everybody likes beer don't they? Okay, I guess we could have liquor once in while too.

ITEM: How come the candidates in the Miss Freshette contest weren't better informed of what was happening and when it was going to happen. One candidate didn't get her picture taken at either one of the sessions.

POSSIBLE SOLUTION: Since Miss Freshette competition have been going on for a number of years I can see no reason why the people in charge couldn't just give the girls some hint of what's happening and when. It's pretty bad when they find out about what's happening 30 seconds before it happens.

ITEM: How come it's just Student Council who get to vote on who should win the Miss Freshette title. There's no Competition at NAIT where just the students popular vote gets to pick the winner.

POSSIBLE SOLUTION: Since the QUEEN WEEK competition takes place over a full week with the techs competing against each other, why not make the Miss Freshette competition open and allow the students to pick the winner just by voting on the candidates.

ITEM: How come there's no cigarette machine in the general vicinity of the arena. I mean if the Fire Marshalls so worried about not having more than 850 in an area that's supposed to be NO SMOKING anyways why not give him something to worry about. I personally find that it's quite tough to burn cement anyways.

POSSIBLE SOLUTION: Give the students their own cabaret hall complete with cigarette machines, wine bottles and no FIRE MARSHALLS.

Beerfest! Why Can't I go? Sold Out

"SOLD OUT?" No way, it can't be. I just heard about it 5 minutes ago." Well that was a common reaction for most of last week. The first beerfest sold out in a little over 9 hours.

My younger brother, in 2nd year Electrical, asked if I could get him a ticket. I told him they were sold out and I'd see what I could do. He didn't get in. There was lots of wheeling and dealing tickets from the time they sold out until an hour or so after the beerfest started.

There must have been a reason that it sold out so quickly. The fact that all 3 beerfests sold out last year should have been enough to remind most 2nd year people of the good times ha and encourage them to get their tickets in a hurry. Judging from the numbers of 2nd years, there.. they remembered.

Promotion aimed at first year students during registration was one of the reasons that this was probably the fastest beerfest sellout ever.

It was obvious that tickets sold out early; but why were there so few tickets? Rumour has it that 1000 tickets were sold last year so why only 850 this time.

For a start, space limitations. Talk to someone who was there. You need to be able to move around at functions like this and once you start to get around 1000 people in the arena it starts to get very crowded.

More important perhaps, are the fire regulations. The City Fire Marshall was kind enough to inform us both by phone and letter that the maximum legal limit for our arena is 850. I'm surprised that the Fire Department didn't shut the school down when the administration had 1400 people in the arena to register on the 7th. I'm sure our beerfest wouldn't have lasted too long if we exceeded the limit like that.

The ALCB has a lot to say about how we run anything where booze is part of the action. We are expecting a visit from ALCB to inform us of their regulations this year; but breaking any of the usual rules (like admitting minors etc.) could get our liquor license lifted for the whole year. A prospect which doesn't thrill me.

So the question shouldn't be "Why can't I go?" but "What can I do about it?" MORE BEERFESTS? Sounds good but one reason we are limited to 3 is that with the ice in for most of the year it doesn't seem too realistic. Jacquie Andrichuk of MAS has suggested a floor that will go over the ice like in many rinks. Why not? Can we do it? Can we afford it? Is it practical? It's a solution that we must look into.

Are there any more good ideas out there? If there are we want to know. Finally, it looks as though most of the major party type things are going to sell out fast this year. If you didn't make it to this one, try for the next one. There will be advance notice of tickets sales for major activities in the Nugget and around. So get your tickets early and don't be disappointed.

FROSH WEEK RESULTS

Well, its over again for another year and now the student and instructors have to settle down to the dubious chore of going to classes.

That's right people, FROSH WEEK 1977 is over and in case you haven't already heard the winner of Miss Freshette 77 was Judy Morgan. This all took place Saturday night and the beerfest and Judies crowning was just a cumilation to the weeks events. Listed below are some of the other events and the winners that took place during the week.

P.S. & Jamie made their debut appearance at NAIT to start Frosh Week off. Playing before a packed house this fine group of young musicians thrilled the audience for nearly 1 and 1/2 hours.

Wednesday afternoons entertainment was looked after by another fine young performer by the name of Paul Hann. The as well did a fine job even though he had a tough act to follow from the day before.

Although it was raining on Thursday the keg rolling contest still took place and after all the mud had been soaked up by the contestants and the smoke had cleared, the following people were winners. In the womens section, 3 teams competed and the winning team was from Secretarial. Members of the winning team were Marlene Spendiff, Michelle Gauthier, Leona Kanki and Shelly Belke. In the Mens section the winning team was from Dental.

On Friday afternoon the most awaited for event took place. This was the Dong Show. The show was started off by Stacy Powers and her Magical Flowers. Although Stacy didn't win her act received a loud ovation when she was finished. The next act was done by the future Houdini and although he didn't manage to get out of his chains in 45 seconds like his manager said he would, he did manage to have the chains and ropes off in about 2 minutes. the winning act was one done by Brad Krisch and Terry Paholek. They did a song that was so bad that the judges just awarded them first prize and the $147.93 that went with it.

The final event of the week was the Scavenger Hunt and details of this event are elsewhere in this paper.

All in all it was an excellent start to the "college" year and I hope we can just keep the momentum going throughout the year.

TO: NAIT STUDENTS
FROM: G.W. CARTER

I was pleased to see you have such a good time at the Miss Freshette Dance and Beerfest. This beginning to student activities for the year always seems to be a pretty good indicator of the kind of student participation to expect for the balance of the term. This being the case we're going to have a great year. Tickets were sold out just a few hours after they went on sale!

Those of you that were able to attend for the first time probably understand better now what I meant by the statement to you on registration day that you can expect to work hard at NAIT, but that you can also have a very good time in the process.

I would like to especially thank the young ladies who are already staunch NAIT supporters as evidenced by their willingness to be a Miss Freshette candidate, Donna Vegea, Rose Buchmann, Linda Litzinger, Judy Morgan, Elaine Cartwright, Sherry Brown, and Gail Martin. Your participation certainly adds to our school spirit which I think is tops.

My congratulations to Judy Morgan, who was chosen Miss Freshette from among the group.

The next major function in which each of you, as well as the student group generally, will be involved is Shinerama. Greg Lesiuk and his colleagues will be testing you more about it, but in the meantime why don't you start tentatively selecting your teams? This is an important enough NAIT activity that you are going to get time off from classes to take part. It comes at a time too, when I think you'll appreciate a little break from studies.

Our students have always distinguished themselves in this fund drive, as well as giving SALT students a good run for their money in the NAIT-SALT fund raising competition. There is a victory celebration afterwards for those who take part so ---see you

What's Entertainment

A combination today, a bit of what was and a little of what will be. First the beerfest. I can't tell you people who went to this premier NAIT event if you had a blast or not. I'm simply not you. But for those who are interested, a few things did filter through my way somewhat blurred (or is that slurred?) vision. The Miss Freshett contest went off with few problems. One of the young ladies, did manage however, to miss getting her picture taken. Twice! I didn't think the photographer looked that lecherous. And now that I think of it, where was the drum roll when the winner was announced? Nevertheless there was a winner and I'm sure if you look elsewhere in these pages somebody will tell you all about her. the band deserves some consideration. They did start promptly and they did do an encore. And they did do to much disco and they did avoid the more difficult rockers. Do I sound biased? Doesn't anybody like Boston or Fleetwood Mac?

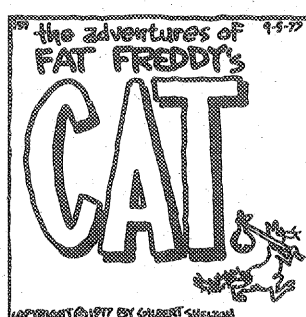

Anyway, the organizers did a great job in ensuring an ample supply of beer. (If only they'd done as fine of a job with the blondes). Seriously now, it looked like everyone had a fine time so it you plan on going out to the next shaker, get your tickets early.

Pubtime this Friday with Michael Lewis and the Little theatre with Goldie Hawn and George Segal on Saturday and Sunday. Lewis is an unknown quantity in these parts but from the promo material I've read, newspaper clips mostly, this singer/pianist looks good enough to be taken seriously. Blind since the age of six, he appears to have matured will as a versatile performer. They say he plays a good variety of music from blues to rock and back. (Thank god it doesn't mention disco.)

The Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox gives the Goldie and George show a conspicuous backdrop for insanity. Segal plays a bumbling lover/bank robber with an attache case crammed with bills of questionable origin. Goldie Hawn is the sometimes singer/whore who (accidentally) parts Segal from his resources. They manage to demolish the wild west playing hot potato with this loot all the while avoiding its previous owner. Albeit the gang of no-goods that perloined it in the first place. Ridiculous? Yes. A classic? No. But for a buck it's an hilarious steal.

Fleetwood Mac ATTACK!

10 a.m. Eyes open. Your're late!! No, your're early. Whatever. Get out of bed dummy or you will be late. The bus leaves at two whether you are on it or not. A bus trip. Fleetwood Mac in Calgary. Insane. The Edmonton concert sold out in two hours. Where were you then? Still in bed naturally. But an outdoor concert at a race track? No, not Formula 1, Hardly. The hottest band on earth playing at a track built for horse racing. Only in Calgary. Thirty bucks is a lot of bread for lousy acoustics. Oh, quit complaining. They could have booked Moose Jaw instead. "Move it buddy, shower and shave to go."

1:00 p.m.- The Riviera. What a place to take a bus. Look at those guys, they're loaded already! Must have got here when the bar opened.

2:00 p.m. - Here it comes. The bus., Thank-you Neville Tours. Quick-checklist time. Tickets, Southern Comfort(Lots of Southern Comfort) and money. No sweat. You're off.

5:15 p.m. - Stopped finally. Calgary. (Hic)Twenty dollars poor-

8:00 p.m. - (Hic) Will you please get your running shoe out of my ear! Is this place packed. Must be 25,000. Pass the Roloids. Hey its the first band. Sanford and Townshend. Who are they? Who cares, I need another rolaidd.

9:30 p.m. - The sound far those 9:30 p.m. - The sound wasn't too bad and look at the system they're setting up for Fleetwood Mac. All right! Will you tell your girlfriend to get her purse off of my shoulder? Thank-you. Oh no!! The top row of speakers on our side just blew down. God I hope they put them back. By the way, were you here in town for Alice Cooper?

9:45 p.m. - Pandemonium! It's them! Wait. The speakers are still down. We're screwed!!

9:55 p.m. - The sound is too low, Stevie Nicks is missing the high notes and (hic) the last bottle of good times just bit the dust. I paid thirty skins for this?

10:05 p.m. - It's getting cold. What did McVie (the bass player) say? "Terry, turn up the f..... lights, I'm freezing to death". 'Yea, that's what I thought he said.

10:07 p.m. - Miracle time! Stevie Nicks has found her voice, McVie found a sweater and the music has got the crowd by their souls.

11:15 p.m. - It's over. What on encore! What a concert! What a drag that ride home is going to be.

Thursday 3:00 a.m. - Edmonton God what a day. My hands are still shaking. Does anybody remember if they played, DON'T STOP?

Post - Mortem - If you were unfortunate enough to miss their concert in town last thursday you gotta know Fleetwood Mac blew the doors off the Coliseum. 'Nuff said.

JUST HANGIN IN

by Terry Pahder

Well the first of the year went off without a hitch. Randy Broadhead has yet to be dethroned as one of Edmonton's finest. The Fifth Avenue Allstars proved to be an excellent choice for the first of the year event. The Fifth Avenue Allstars are composed of some of Edmontons best. All the members are all well seasoned musicians stemming from other disbanded top names like for example "Great Canadian River race. Trevor Dunn, the lead guitarist has probably been noticed before by all of us who enjoy the music scene in Edmonton. His guitar licks were smooth and precise and his stage appearance is that of a collected musician who knows why he is there.

This year the NAIT NUGGET will cover Entertainment both at NAIT and at all the other hotspots in Edmonton. It is our wish to let you know where the action is and exactly what to expect as far as good listening and good dancing goes and also a breakdown of action so that you can choose the type of dancing and music that you prefer in order that your nights out can be better planned.

This year in the entertainment section we hope to include a different local band critique every week along with articles on hot local shows and upcoming talent.

Maybe if our readers happen to see a performance that they think deserves credit in our newspaper they should let us know. The column will be called "COOKIN" of course. Watch for it in the next issue.

PART-TIME BLUES

By Terry Pahder

Theres a lot of people going to NAIT this year who have part time jobs. These jobs usually pay salt for wages but the ever increasing demand for the dollar makes it almost impossible to do without them. I myself am awfully tired of working for $3.00 to $3.75/hr. when I know my qualification merit a little more than that. But what can one do. At that rate it almost costs more to go to work than you are making. I had a part time job last year that paid $3.00 an hour. I found that paying income tax, driving to work and getting a bit to eat for supper almost made more money by not working. But for some of us that same old grind is the only source of revenue that keeps us in coffee and cigarettes. We are more or less forced to conform to a schedule that seems pointless and mentally unrewarding but what can one do. We could form a union and go on strike but then again we'd be in the same boat headed downstream without a paddle, not to speak of lack of funds to buy one.

Granted some part-time jobs may be interesting and rewarding and some hold a good future in store but I'm sure that I can safely say that a lot of time spent at partime jobs by NAIT students is surpassed by the pressure of assignments or the feeling that there are a lot of other activities that would be a lot more fun. If you are working a part time job that you can't see any reason for other than money you just have to remain at the back of the line and join the cast of thousands. Its a tough struggle to be a star in this picture.

THE ANTI-SEXIST MALE

A few years ago, I was playing jacks with a woman friend. I started imitating a sportscaster doing a play-by-play of the game, which she didn't enjoy. I figured she had no sense of humor, but the truth was that was the only way I was comfortable with the game . . . turning it into a competition. Jacks, for Pete's sake!

It's hard for men to stop competing. We've spent our lives building a person of consequence, who's able to accomplish things, who's respected by those who know him. In school, status was gained by doing well in sports or getting good grades or fighting well or getting lots of girls. Outside school we compete over even more things: our careers, the quality of our dope, our strength, our knowledge of mechanics, electrical circuits, or the workings of capitalism. Conversations in all-male groups often consists of trading insults, seldom compliments. Even when we're trading information, there's a strong element of competition, with nobody wanting to look too dumb.

What I've been noticing lately, and what I'd like to talk about in this article, is that this eternal competition shows up in the way we use our bodies.

Society had given us a whole catalogue of gestures, postures, expressions, tones-of-voice, and movements that are 'manly'. Those ways of holding our bodies are tools in the competition for respect, and they express a lot of the ways men are supposed to be: that we don't need anyone else; that we are never lost or bewildered; that we don't need anyone around; that we are proud of the 'man' we built. I've bought nearly this whole catalogue of manly postures without thinking much about it. I use them in a situation where I want to be respected. I'm only vaguely aware of them, so my descriptions will not be very accurate, but I hope they'll spark some recognition in you.

NOT TO CLOSE MAN

I hold myself rather upright and rigid. I keep my face relaxed and not very mobile, better not to make a fool of myself. I grin, but I don't smile. It's too vulnerable. If I use my hands at all when speaking, they act strong, rather than soft and sensitive. I don't stand too close to a man I'm talking to. Generally, I don't face him directly but rather half turn away, so we're not so intimate, unless we're actually fighting. I put a little crackly edge on my voice to stand for authority, rather than letting it be soft and loving. I listen in a friendly way, but don't tilt my head in empathy. I don't talk about things unless they're exciting things.

If someone gives me a firm handshake, I make sure I squeeze right back. Even when I'm just killing time, I slouch without relaxing. I feel instinctively that certain postures are effeminate, my knees crossed, or held close together, my hands between my legs. The postures that feel OK are postures of defense or action. There's even a 'manly' way to dance . . . very 'in command' rather than letting myself softly sway with the music.

These gestures all add up to a charade fight between me and other physical attack. That may sound exaggerated, but I think it's true, and not too surprising since I grew up in this culture that idolizes Clint Eastwood, Sean Connery, Larry Csonka, and so on. Even among antisexist men, I often see indications of how deeply we've retained a reverence for violence. Several months ago, I was in a discussion about experiences in school. One man finished a story about how horrible school had been by saying "z" . . . and I went to high school in New York City." A ripple of "yeah" went around the circle, meaning we knew he had been through it.

In the same discussion I talked about fights I'd had, with an undeniable twinge of pride that I'd had them. None of us would say that violence is a way to solve anything, but there was still a romance in testifying that we knew what violence was about.

So I'm saying that we gain and give respect through competition with other men, and our bodies are an important part of that competition. Fantasies of violence are important to all of us, and we constantly flash body language messages telling others we're ready to protect our bodies. I want to change the way I use my body, and change the way I respond to messages from others. Let me spell out some reasons why.

BACKBONE

First, I think that using the gestures I described earlier puts other men on their guard. I hurt our chances for creating a real relationship and insure that we'll stay superficial.

"Backbone" is a good word. I've been proud of how much I had. I was calcified for. I didn't need anyone, had huge reserves of armour so life's storms would never reach me. I was the opposite of "sissy" . . . a loser in the status struggle. He doesn't respect himself enough to keep fighting.

I'm starting to see the positive side of sissy. He loves himself enough to cry for himself when someone hurts him. I've had the opportunity to be around a few men who seemed pretty incapable of competing. At first I was put off by them as being just too weak. But I noticed that sometimes it was very easy to be relaxed and real around my defences. At the first sign of someone putting me down, however, I'd put together a show of backbone. I want to stop that. Let my backbone front dissolve. Let other people in.

Another reason for ending these status wars between men is that they make it impossible for us to relate to women as people. We need women to serve as non-threatening refugees, need them to be soft, caring, non-critical. Need them to say "I'll love you" no matter what the world thinks of you and bandage your psychic bruises."

But we spend lots of time sizing up other people critically, and we can't just shut those judgements off when dealing with women. Then the very qualities we need in women become defects in our eyes. We see the fact that they cry easily as weakness. A sign they can't cope with life's problems as well as we can. Or we'll say "women use tears to manipulate men."

As in my game of Jacks, we can't help setting up silly competitions with women. I vaguely remember a series of magazine ads in which a woman had to follow a man into 'his' outdoor world, rock climbing or whatever, to earn her drink. She always looked very distressed and wanted to know if there wasn't an easier way. The point is that he needs her not to judge him the way other men do, but he's addicted to competition, and so goes ahead and sets up a test for her.

We're very bad at giving emotional support back to women. Once again the example of crying fits. We do so little of it that we don't know what it's about and can only interpret it as a sign of defeat. We know very little about the positive aspects of crying and generally wouldn't think of helping someone to cry.

FEMALE CHAUVINIST

As more women turn to other women to find that sensitive support, it unfortunately becomes more common to hear men say "wait a minute. You're being a female chauvinist. Come back and struggle with me."

If we want to change male and female stereotypes, we'll have to start finding those 'female' caring parts in ourselves and other men, and find the joy in them. That won't be easy because those qualities are big liabilities in the 'man' game. They are what make up a 'sissy'. But if we can learn them, then some day in the rosy future, we'll be able to meet women as equals.

Joseph Pleck wrote a very good article about male competition including its effect on male-female relationships in the April 11, 1974 issue of WIN magazine. I recommend it highly.

A fear I have about making these changes is that I'll occasionally be assumed to be homosexual. That fear has the effect of keeping me, and all who share it, acting belligerent.

Last January, I started taking Changing Men (the men's liberation newsletter from which this article is reprinted around to store to see if they'd display it where people could pick it up. I daydreamed about how I'd respond if someone said "Oh, isn't this that faggot organization?" By March I was still running through the same daydream even though the situation had never come up. I had to admit it was a charged situation for me, and the charge became because the person asking the question would be assuming I was gay.

I spent last year working in a small tool shop. One day I was labeling a box we used. Being bored, as usual, I started putting decorations around the label. It was fun, one of the few creative moments I'd had at that job. Then it occurred to me that the wavy curly-cues I was enjoying drawing would look girlish next to the straight letters on the other boxes. I drew a little more but the fun was definitely gone.

Faggot jokes and stories were very common at work. I doubt many of the men had contact with real gay people, but the subject kept coming up anyway. A co-worker told me he stopped in a bar and halfway through his beer realized it was a gay bar. He was so disgusted he didn't finish his drink.

FEAR OF HOMOSEXUALS

Where does this fear and repulsion in straight men come from? I think that sleezy feeling comes from the belief that homosexuals want to touch us. Want us to be passive while they do things to our bodies. We get a creepy crawly feeling of being manipulated. We're the ones who are supposed to do the manipulating. On women.

We get nervous when somebody touches our bodies. Like when a stranger touches my bike or car or (I suppose) sword. I get instantly alert. They could hurt it, but mostly they just shouldn't be touching it.

Our bodies are important weapons in the struggle for respect and homosexuals allow their weapons to be touched in the most intimate ways. Their fantasies have been breached. They've let an opponent get inside. It's a much 'passed' around bit of straight folk knowledge that even football players and weight-lifters Here's Derek McGrath shining shoes to fight Cystic Fibrosis.

Like thousands of college students across Canada, Derek is out shining shoes to raise money for the Cystic Fibrosis research fund. The project is called "Shinerama."

So when you see the students in your neighborhood...stop and put a shine on.

SHINERAMA

CANADIAN YOUNG PEOPLE FIGHTING CYSTIC FIBROSIS

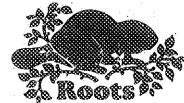

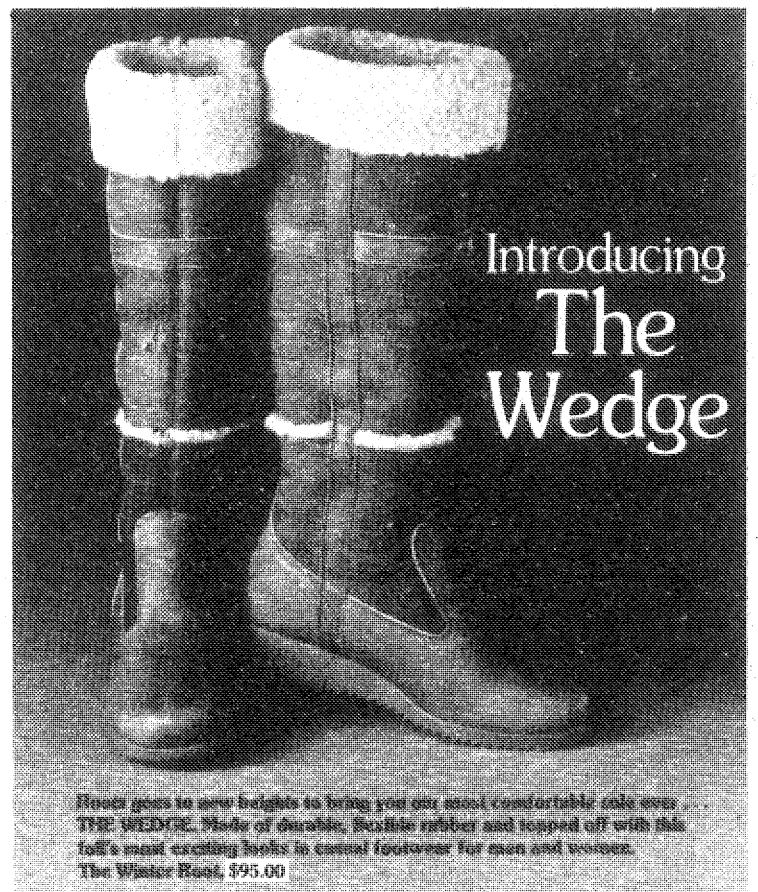

On Friday, September 30, the NAIT Student Association will be sponsoring their annual Shine-rama Campaign to aid in the research of the child Killing disease Cystic Fibrosis. Cystic Fibrosis is the most common potentially fatal genetic disease of childhood; it effects the lungs and digestive system, reducing the oxygen intake and food break-down in the body. One in every 1800 children in Canada is born with Cystic Fibrosis.

Now is your opportunity to help fight that dreaded disease. It will give you a chance to meet new friends, get involved in a worthwhile cause, and help provide the money that is needed for the continuous research into a cure for Cystic Fibrosis.

When was the last time you really felt good after doing something for somebody else?

Hope to see you on September 30.

can be queers. They're men on the outside but rotten soft inside. It's interesting that letting a woman touch you doesn't compromise a man in the same way. She's not a potential enemy. She's more like the squire getting you ready for battle.

Homosexuals seem to me to be equivalent to the communist menace of the McCarthy era. They're poisoning our white-knight ethic. They can be anywhere, even the highest places. The locker rooms of the NFL. No one is above suspicion. And, like the fifties, there's no sure way to prove cleanliness. But you can make things a lot easier on yourself by conforming, by being one of the boys. When I was in high school, 'faggot' was an all purpose insult, but it was used most often when a boy wouldn't go along with the group. Wouldn't cheat on a test, join in a prank, leer at Playboy.

GOOD COMPANY

For fear my main thought may have gotten lost, I'd like to try and condense it one last time: I want to have real relationships with people, not the kind that still leave me lonely. I'm realizing that a picture I've had of myself as strong and capable, and able to compete has gotten in the way of these real friendships, and so I want to drop it. I've transmitted that picture to other people by the way I've used my body, and so I want to stop using my body as weapon. I'll have to be ready to be treated like 'sissy' or 'faggot' by some people. Harder still, I'll have to get positive about those words in my mind. Only when I'm proud of myself as sissy and faggot will I be able to approach other men and women clearly, and with them become all that I can be.

Accepting those labels gets easier all the time as I find out what good company it puts me in.

Knobber Bones

Diary of ### a Countryman

After dark last night HURLEY, GASPUMP, HUMMER AND I jumped into my old car and motored over to the southside of the Calder Yard. We parked with the workman's cars in the C.N. lot, then walked a short distance thru the semi-darkness to a little hidden hollow alongside the track. We had trouble finding it until Hummer nearly fell right into it.

The cool breeze carried all around us a far off, constant rumbling of shunting diesels, the hiss of brakes, and the clanking of a crossing bell as the night workers moved the boxcars back and forth.

We sat down on the rim of the little hollow and admired the view. Away across the black airport field white and blue lights were swimming and shimmering splashes of colour, all speckled with red approach lights. Further away, up out of the sea of neon lights rose the towering downtown buildings, looking like a black light picture against the night sky. And higher, up above the city, the red and blinking white lights of small aircraft floated aimlessly, silently.

We lit a small fire in the bottom of the hollow and soon we were enjoying the fresh smell of fall breezes mixed with the odor of burning rubber boots, all the while keeping an eye out for the railway cop. Gaspump broke out a whiskey bottle and passed it around - all agreeing that a wee nip would keep the chill well off.

Hurley opened a can of beans and set 'em in the fire to heat. While we waited in expectant silence a kind of calm settled in around us - a calm that comes with the glow of a warm fire and a sure thing for the next meal.

Hurley turned, and craned his neck to see over the rim of the hollow. The fire flickered around his face, throwing shadows and light patches. He had his fathers old gardening hat on, and with the light and the black soot marks across his face he looked for all the world like a tramp.

"Sure is a long way to Halifax" he said, and gave a tug on the half full whiskey bottle.

"Sure is a long way to Vancouver", Gaspump said after a few seconds, looking away westward. After such stunning insight we fell silent again. A big blue and white jet rolled away from the wheeling yellow lights of the feeder trucks, and in a few seconds thundered away to the south.

"Sure is a long way to Calgary, Hummer said, and we all piled on him until he kicked the beans half way over in the fire.

"Get the beans," Gaspump said, and in a flash Hurley had them out of the fire.

I put my glove around the can after a few seconds, and passed it around with the fork.

Hummer was eating out of the can with the whiskey bottle propped up between the soles of his boots.

"Hey gears, don't Bogard that bottle," Hurley said, reaching across the fire.

Hummer passed the bottle over to him, then handed Gaspump the beans. Gaspump is the guy you see walking around NAIT, with the unmistakable sideburns that stick out from two skinny cheeks. As the firelight flickered on him, he looked like a picture I once seen of John A. MacDonald. Hummer leaned his back into the wet grass on the side of the hollow, stuck his shoes up against the fire, and gave a big burp.

"You're an animal," I said "I suppose you could put it that way. Yes, definitely a case could be made for that. Get off my case, will you Bones?" he said, in mock indignation.

Hurley rubbed his hands, then put them against the fire.

"You know what I like about going to NAIT," he asked. "The Chics. The chics there are the nicest I've seen anywhere. And they're all smart. That's what I like. A smart chic, that's nice looking and nice to talk to. Haven't met an ugly chic yet I wanted to be around, I like..."

"Shut up Hurley," I said. "Don't tell me to shut up."

He stood up and jumped on me, and we wrestled around until the ass of his pants caught fire.

There was a strange noise coming out of him for awhile as he rolled around, trying to put the few whips of fire out.

Gaspump started hitting at the fire, and Hummer made like he was going to pour the whiskey on him.

"No!" I said, and grabbed the bottle away from him.

"Don't waste good whiskey fer God's sake. It's just Hurley."

Marketing Scavengers *JOB*S: Finish First

The Marketing Scavenger team finished first in this Saturday's Ooks week scavenger Hunt.

We had a great time but it had it's moments...

Ever try to find a CUMQUAT in September?(the season is May and June)

What do you do when the SHEEP DOG develops a personality clash with the LIVE CHICK-EN?

Ever had to bribe little kids in the library to lead you to the "Bar the Elephant" books.

Ever walk into a police station and ASK for a SPEEDING TICKET?

Try stealing your big brother's DOOR KNOB and TOILET SEAT or your sick uncle's BEDPAN or your little sister's FALSIES or your auntie's $500 authentically autographed BENNY GOODMAN ALBUM(who's Benny Goodman)

While the team was busy finishing off a TEXAS MICKEY (it had to be EMPTY!) a little old lady ran home to find her ESSO TIGER TAIL.

Our most prized possession..... one pair of "Merry Cherry" flavoured EDIBLE UNDERSHORTS.... is now proudly displayed on our 4th floor bulletin board for anyone interested.

The team members were... Sid Edelmann, Cathie Dishaw, Denise Tomun, Jerry Berry, Jacque Andrichuk.

"I got fantastic references from my last five jobs but I lost them on the way over here."

HOCKEY

The greatest spectator sport in the world Canada's national game The lifeblood of our society. I could go on and on, but I won't what I'm trying to say to people that haven't been to a NAIT Ooks hockey game, is come out a see what its like. Everybody is willing to pay $5 to $7 to see the horrible Oilers play, but nobody wants to get in free (Student card) to see better hockey in the form of the Ooks.

Last year some of the games were yawners so the team got a bad reputation, but towards the end of the season, there were some terrific games especially against Red Deer in the playoffs. I talked to a lot of people who laughed or made bad jokes about the Ooks, but the funny thing was I never saw any of these jokers at any of the home games. So this year if you want to make jokes fine, but at least give the team a chance.

Last week Coach Henwood had an orientation session for the rookies and a lot of talent looked to be on display. Everybody has a equal chance to make the team and from my position, I believe there could be a couple of sleepers, surprise the coach and returnees.

A few players that the coach is hoping with provide some excitement this year are Dour Palamar-chuk, who last year scored 40 goals for the Red Deer Rustlers. Wayne Jeske who played in the Ontario Senior Hockey league last year. Bart Szoke, a 40 goal scorer with Wainwright and Randy Holo waychuk, who was a 2nd team All-stars with an opponent of NAIT, Camrose Lutheran College last year.

Also there are 7 of 8 players with experience from the Capital City Junior League and the Alberta Junior B League.

The veterans on the squad could be on the outside looking in if they aren't in shape and ready to give 100 percent this year. After the meeting, I tried to get a word with, one of the veterans Bruce McCaskill but he was too busy pushing weights to conduct an interview, so maybe the veterans will be in shape and fighting the rookies.

I think this could possibly be the best training camp in several seasons for the Ooks, and hopefully that will also spell a winning season for the team.

GOLF

If there are any Jack's, Arnie's or Tom's hiding in some corner of the school, please show your face. After last year's dreadful finish NAIT wants to gain back some of the respectability that it enjoyed after winning the 1974 ACAC title on the golf links.

This year the tournament will be played on the challenging Earl Grey, Golf Course in Calgary on the 6th and 7th of October. The team will consist of up to 7 players, who by playing a couple of practise rounds, will be selected by coach Jules Owchar.

Golfing is a tremendous activity if you have any frustrations to release, but once you want to become a good player, you need to be able to control your emotion. A person that gets upset over a bad shot, or even becomes to elated over a good shot can ruin his/her round in only a few seconds. So stay cool and play better golf.

Golf is a tremendous way to meet people and even to do some work. A lot of business transactions are started, worked on, or completed on the golf course. You do a lot of walking between shots and conversation is natural and a lot of times very beneficial. One additional thing, if you can beat your boss playing golf chances are he will be impressed and a good relationship will surely develop.

So if there are any good players out there get out and make NAIT proud of you. And for you recreational golfers, practise and continue to try and improve, so this frustration game will get a little less frustrating.

CROSS COUNTRY TEAM

Running, along with racquetball is the fastest growing sport in North America and Cross Country Running is the most enjoyable and stimulating form of running.

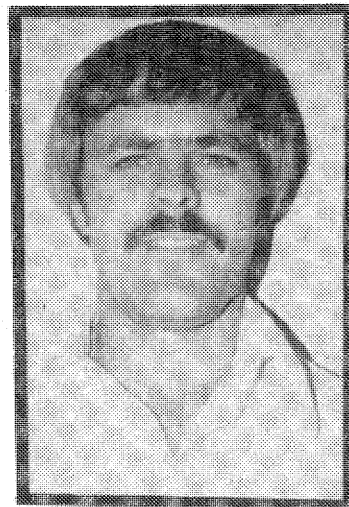

Although it isn't a tremendous spectators sport it is a great sport for the individual to enter. There is no great outlay of money involved, all you need is runners and shorts which everybody already has.

The NAIT cross-country team runs through some beautiful trails down at Mayfair park and when they compete in meets, some excellent trails are encountered.

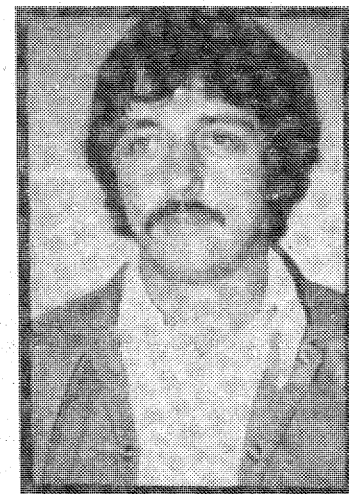

This year joining the team from the apprentice ranks is a fellow that could be competing in the Commonwealth Games next summer. so NAIT students may have a fellow student to cheer for next summer. His name is Greg Krause.

By the way any other apprentices that want to join sports teams should contact the respective coaches and something may be able to be worked out.

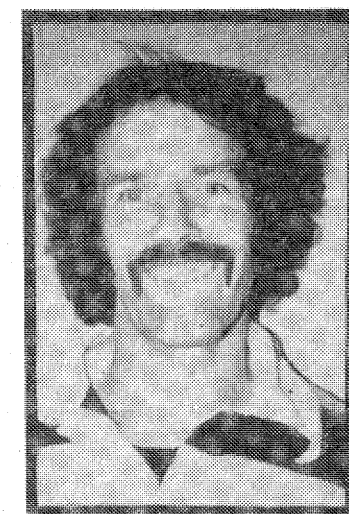

The Cross Country team is always looking for new members, so if you would like to get in shape contact John Reeves in S107, which is by the racquetball courts. The team practises from Monday to Thursday at 5:00 p.m.

By then Gaspump had the fire out, and Hurley was checking the damage. Nothing serious he concluded. Nothing serious.

But the railway cop had heard the commotion and seen the light of the fire. We could hear him running towards us, so we leaped over the side of the hollow, like World War 1 soldiers, and ran away into the night, kicking at Hurley's burnt ass whenever we could.

As you can see, it was a dull evening in Edmonton.

Commissionaires Corner

by Sgt. S. Johnson

The 76/77 term was quite successful even though a larger number of POLICE FINES were handed out than ever before. It can be said that a majority were very co-operative.

The 77/77 term will require the full co-operation and a great deal of patience from everyone.

Enrolment will be increased and parking will be crowded.

Those who arrive LATE will find it difficult, if not impossible to park. They will be fortunate to park near the Institute, let alone on a lot.

It is suggested that the following steps be taken to help prevent CONFUSION AND MUCH DISAPPOINTMENT:

1. FORM A CAR POOL.
2. TAKE THE E.T.S. BUSES.
3. IF ACCOMMODATED VERY CLOSE TO THE INSTITUTE WALK.
4. SHARE A VEHICLE WITH A FRIEND OR EVEN AN ENEMY. ALWAYS REMEMBER - TO SEEK OUT -A COMMISSIONAIRE ---
- BEFORE YOU ATTEMPT TO PARK.
- IF IN AN UNFAMILIAR AREA.
- WHERE PARKING MAY BE OBTAINED.

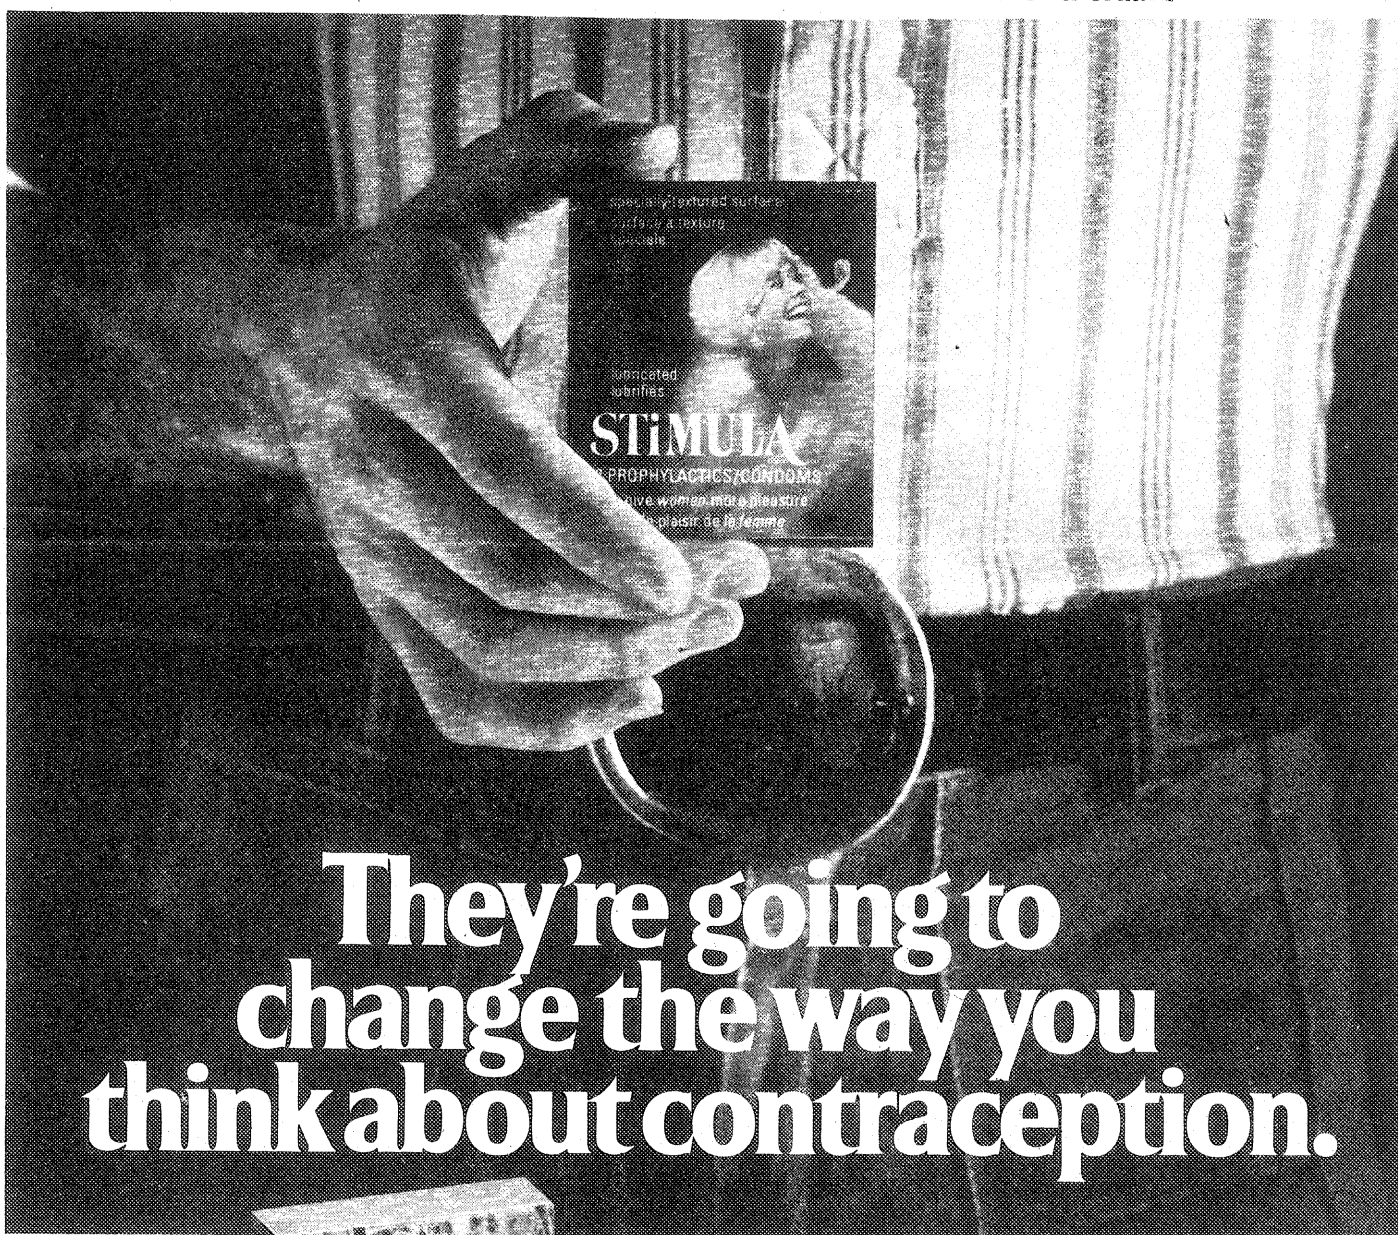

AN AREA WHICH SEEMS -O.K. -FOR ONE VEHICLE TO PARK -WILL SOON CAUSE A BUILD-UP OF VEHICLES AND COMPLETE LANE BLOCKING. THIS RESULTS IN POLICE FINES AND TOW AWAY ACTION.

As commissionaires often say- "IF YOU ALLOW ONE VEHICLE TO PARK----YOU GOTTA PARK 'EM ALL-----"

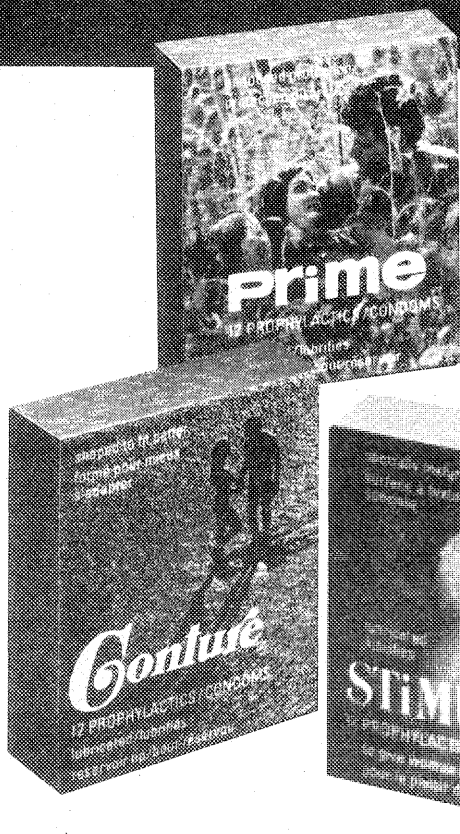

So, with patience and you co-operation, we should be able to manage.

WICKMAN SEEKING SEAT IN WARD 2

Percy Wickman a 37 year old, well known community activist will run as a Ward 2 Aldermanic Candidate in the October 19 Civic Election.

In a release announcing his candidacy, Mr Wickman said he has recently completed his objectives as National Development Officer for the Coalition of Provincial Organizations of the Handicapped and is now conducting his campaign on a full time basis.

In his campaign Mr. Wickman will stress 'quality of life' in Edmonton as key concern. "That means that emphasis must be placed on the well being of the people in general".

According to Mr. Wickman policies he supports which he feels would lead to improved quality of life include a balanced transportation system; availability of modestly priced housing; preservation of older neighbourhoods and green areas; expansion of social programs such as home care assistance, public housing, and day care centres; and greater opportunity for citizen participation in matters which affect their lifestyles.

Mr. Wickman contends that the present City Council will approve, at its September 20 meeting, the necessary by-law to enable the electorate at large to vote on the proposed convention centre. "It is the only logical and sensible step for Council to take." However, Mr. Wickman said that if the 'buck is passed on' to the next Council, he could not support the convention centre as long as it contained the present threat of becoming a burden to the general taxpayer.

On other issues Mr. Wickman disagrees with the present Council's stand on a centralized pattern of decentralization. "Centralized growth contributes to increased social problems and high density development." However, Mr. Wickman feels that a Metro-type governing body must be sought as well. He also favours a restructuring of the existing Council to provide for an Executive Council consisting of a number of full time Aldermen. In addition Mr. Wickman advocates a revised ward system consisting of two Aldermen from each of eight wards; mandatory full disclosure of property holdings on the part of elected civic representatives; increased unconditional sharing of provincial financial resources and the appointment of a civic Ombudsman.

Born in Thunderbay, Ontario, Mr. Wickman first came to Alta. in 1960.

In 1964, he was injured in an industrial accident that left him permanently confined to a wheelchair. He then completed Grade 12 at the Alberta Vocational Centre, followed by a two year course in Business Administration at N.A.I.T.

While at N.A.I.T. he served as Vice-President of the Students' Council, and was the first recipient of the Neil Hutton Memorial Trophy, awarded in recognition of outstanding student services.

After graduation, he served as Advertising Manager for the University of Alberta Students' Union, where he was a founding Member of CUPE Local 1368, and served as its President for two years. While on Campus he completed a number of courses in Political Science and Urban Government.

More recently, Mr. Wickman has been employed in the field of Community Development; particularly in the area of the physically disabled. In 1976, he was the Edmonton Jaycee's nominee for Outstanding Young Canadian of the year.

Mr. Wickman has a long history of community involvement. He has played a leadership role in many handicapped activities; has directed a number of fund raising drives and has been active in a number of citizen's action groups.

Mr. Wickman, who resides in Ward 2 at 4307 - 116 Street, is married and the father of a 13 year-old son.

For further information contact Percy Wickman at 436-9443 (office) or 435-1790 (residence).
