ALBERTA NUMBER ONE FOR APPRENTICES

NAIT, being a trade school, enrolls many students under the apprenticeship programs. Their term varies from 6-12 weeks. This way, they work on the job, on practical studies and come to school to obtain a credit and a license to perform their trade. These large groups of new students, enrolling in the middle of the year go unnoticed by NAIT full-time students.

Most remarks stem from the inconvenience of standing in long line ups in the Cafeteria. Many of the humorous remarks are heard while passing the enlarged line up at the gymnasium. The book store is avoided because of the masses of new purchasers, and many young females avoid the rug room. Then again, the rug room becomes a ever more popular area of studying as well. NAIT at most times is predominantly male enrollment, and when the apprenticeship programs start up, one becomes lost amongst the mechanics, welders and plumbers.

In this last school term, over 12 thousand apprentices have studied their trades at NAIT. The programs are registered as "Recognized Ticketed Trades", and "Ticketed Trades". The difference between the two is that a "Recognized Ticketed Trade" is one which needs a license in order to work a trade.

At any one time, there can be over 2,200 apprentices enrolled at NAIT. Last Monday, you may have noticed a new batch, and in fact, 800 tradesmen did enroll. In Edmonton, there are six locations where apprenticeship programs are offered: Plaza, Bonaventure, Patricia Campus, Alta. Vocational College, Westmount, and Scona.

In the past few years we have been told that Canada does not have enough skilled workers and thousands have had to be brought in from out of the country. According to Mr. Rob Mueller of the Apprenticeship Board here at NAIT, this is incorrect. He says that Canada has many recognized ticketed tradesmen and more are enrolling into programs every year. Mueller stated that over 23 thousand enrollments in these programs were recorded throughout the province last year. He also stated that "Alberta has the highest standard for apprenticeship and instructor programs in Canada, and one of the highest in the world."

Each province makes its own jurisdiction of ticketed and recognized ticketed trades. Often one trade is recognized in certain provinces, and not in others. This is caused by geographical and economic inequalities. Changing to another province can change your status and classification. In order to work outside the province with an Alberta ticket you must register with that province's apprenticeship board. It is also mandatory in certain cases to write a provincial examination. Working your trade in another province without following these steps is illegal. There are certain trades that fall under the category of international equality. Here you would receive an Interprovincial ticket which makes you eligible to work anywhere in the country under your license.

In talking with the apprenticeship board representative at NAIT, I was told that courses follow strict attendance rules and the material studied is heavily condensed. Students are guaranteed a wage of between $60 and $156 while at school. An employee may pay part or whole of the amount and the government will subsidize the rest. In many cases the normal wage is continued by the employer, while their "hired employee" is at school.

FREE TRAVEL LECTURE

Travel. The mysterious, wonderful word that brings exotic memories to mind. To some it's getting on a jet and voering the world on an open ticket in 80 days--visiting all the wonderful airports of the world for a few thousand dollars.

But to some, myself included, it's a concept and style of life. How can you describe the exstasy or waking up to 6 inches of snow in the Austrian Alps, nearly being cleared off the road as a snow plough tries to do you in, walking the 10 Km to the Italian border only to have the 6 guards chase you with their guns as they misinterpret your gesture of finding a wall to lean against as an attempt to run the border? Finally you reach Venice in 80degree temperatures wearing everything in your pack, with you pyjamas on the top! Travel should be intense, and fun, and a learning experience, and doesn't have to cost you the next three year's wages. How? Come to a free travel lecture on March 11, 7:00 to 9:30 p.m. in the Tory Lecture Theatre, U of A Campus, N.E. Corner, and find out all the nitty-gritty details and money saving hints for cheap European travel. It is sponsored by the Canadian Hostelling Association.

For instance, did you know that your international student I.D card will entitle you to cut rate accommodation in student hotels throughout Europe, 50 - 100 percent discounts on museum entrances, cheaper rides on trains, buses, and boats, entrance to student cafes that give you cheap munchies and much more? Simply send proof of current student status (High school or post secondary) - a xeroxed copy of the card will do, name, address, birthdate, and $3.50 to C.U.T.S., S.U.B., University of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta. Do enclose a photo, a 4/$.50 machine photo will suffice, or a passport photo. Ask them about Inter-European student flights and local discounts while you're at it.

Or, did you know that chaning you money at the border is like shopping at a convenience store; you use it for an emergency when nothing else is open, and lose a fair bit in the transaction. It's best to carry your funds in small denominations or travellers cheques (Americ an Express or Thomas Cook), and try to do your large currency exchanges at a large bank or American Express office (you can get a free list of their offices by calling the local American Express office). And don't lug all those bills around in your back pocket; try to devise a money bag or belt for you necessities: passport, student I.D. card, travellers cheques, cash, etc.

Do you know the differences between charter flights, apex, youth standby, laker skytrain, one way economy tickets, or a student fare on a boat from the East coast to Europe? If you don't, you may not be getting the best money value for the length and destination of your trip. I'll attempt to explain these differences during the talk, or, if you're anxious, you can head to your local travel agent. He's got all the prices, a world of information at his fingertips, and his service is free (a poor joke--"Travel agents do it for free").

a membership with the Canadian Hostelling Association will entitle you to clean accommodation in 50 odd countries throughout the world at a nightly cost of under $10. What a deal for $12 and, there's no age limit in hostels, except in Bavaria, Germany where preference is given to people under 26 years. Call the Local C. H.A. office for details 439-3089, or drop into the office at 10922 - 88 Avenue.

So, even if your trip is wishful thinking or you're a long-time traveller, come by and enjoy the talk. This is the fifth annual talk and it's become a spring tradition in Edmonton--pass the word around.

NOTE: The Lecturer, Sharon Rempel, is a travel consultant and veteran penny-pinching traveller. I can be contacted at 439-3089 or 426-6730.

Our Apology

No one really questions the power of the press, and we discover from time to time that ONE of those powers is the press's ability to hurt someone.

Through a series of circumstances which should never have come about, the February 21 issue of the Nugget carried an item dealing with one of the NAIT instructors.

The editor and staff of the Nugget wish to express our sincere regrets that the item appeared in the first place, and for any distress, embarrassment and difficulty it may have caused.

The editorial standards of the Nugget were, with justification, called into question. We would like to assure all concerned that positive steps have been instituted which, when in effect, will ensure that this kind of thing cannot and will not happen again.

HEALTH HAZARD

CALGARY (CUP) -- A two-year old health hazard problem caused by poor ventilation at the Alberta College of Art is still in the "investigative stage," according to officials.

The problem arose in silk-screening labs at the college when toxic fumes could not be effectively removed from the air. Students were becoming nauseated, dizzy and suffering impaired vision because of the fumes, which were produced by chemicals used in the silk-screening process.

"The potential for quite an explosion was there as well considering the level of toxicity in the room," said Bill Perochnuk, assistant director of physical facilities for the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology.

Investigations into the situation began seriously last fall although the problem has existed for at least two years.

"We have no definite date for when the actual work will begin on the ventilation. We hope that the work will be completed by the end of September," Perochnuk said.

Silk-screening classes for the 1980 semester were cancelled because of the danger involved. More than 40 students taking the course were forced to choose alternate courses.

The institute needs additional funding from the Alberta government to pay for the repairs, Perochnuk said, but no problems are anticipated in getting the money.

B.J. COMMENTS

In the past, the Nugget has maintained a very liberal attitude concerning the classified ads. This page has been met with wide spread approval by nearly all NAIT students. We thank everyone who contributes.

On the whole, the classifieds submitted are both humorous and serious. This is what makes this page so unique and appealing. However, from time to time we receive ads which are distasteful, degrading and sometimes defamatory.

Our purpose is to inform and entertain the student body. Not to hurt people! If you have a bone to pick with someone, I suggest that you settle your difference face to face. Don't use the paper!

In the future, we will be using a much stronger editing policy. This requires that you sign all articles you submit. Quite simply, if you don't sign it, we won't print it.

I'm convinced that NAIT students have the common sense to use the Nugget constructively by exercising good taste.

WHAT? ME SEXIST?

I am standing here on the corner of the main corridor and the "E" Wing watching all of the pretty girls strutting by. Oh, they look so nice (drool, drool). I could just take one of them home with me. Look at that one there. She looks like she's looking for a body to take home with her. Oh, she looked at me. What a doll! I could just about go nuts over her. The way she wears her jeans and her tight sweater, and the way she wears her hair... Oh!

I wonder what she's doing here. Waiting for a friend? Waiting to meet a new friend? Waiting to go to class? WHAT DOES SHE WANT? I wonder if she goes to bed with just anybody? I hope so 'cause I wonder if she'd go to bed with me. I love you, baby.

Oh look, she's talking to that other guy over there. What are they saying? She looked at me again. Now she's laughing at me. What did she find funny about me? I don't think that I'm all that funny. I hate that guy she's with. I mean just who does he think he is? Here I am just quietly minding my own business when he comes along and wrecks my fun. Oh, I feel so rejected I don't know what I'll do. Hey! He's leaving. Good. Now she's all alone again. God, what a babe! I think I'll go over and ask her for a smoke. It'll give us something to talk about. Even though I don't smoke, it'll still work.

No. She's looking down the hall at someone. She's smiling at someone. It's another friend. Another great looking doll. OOOHH! Is she ever nice too. I wonder if it would be too much to ask for two cigarettes--one from each. Look. She's laughing at me again. WHAT'S SO FUNNY? Maybe it's the clothes I wear, or the way I part my hair, or maybe it's because I wear glasses. Please don't laugh at me. Good. She stopped. I hate it when people laugh at me. Now she's looking in her purse. I wonder what it is. Maybe it's a birth control pill. I hope so. Aww, it's only a pen. Now her friend is leaving. There she goes. Nice body. I'd rate it about a seven. Well, there she is again, standing by the glass doors, she is the picture of beauty. I'd give anything if she'd come over and talk to me. Wait... here she comes. She's coming straight toward me, and she's looking straight at me. Yes. She's coming to talk to me. Oh, happy day. I never had a chick talk to me before. I always thought they thought that I was too ugly or too stupid to talk to. She's so close now I can see the zits on her nose and the little gobs of mascara on her eyelashes. What a babe!

Now she's past me, walking up the "E" Wing. SHIT!! My first chance to talk to a chick and I blew it. Why do I always blow my chances when I get a chance to talk to a great looking chick like that.

Hey, look what's standing over my the ice cream machine. MMMMMM, what a babe. I could go for you hon.....

EAT FIT, FEEL FIT

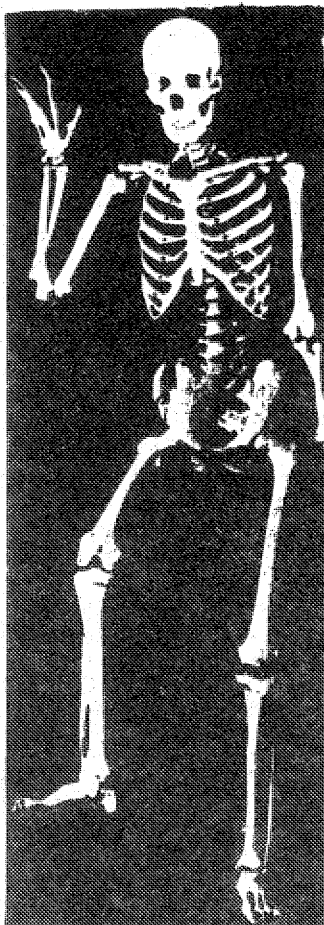

March 3 thru 8 was Nutrition Week in Alberta. The purpose of this week was to make you more aware of the link between nutrition and being a fit person. The Y.M.C.A., Canadian Diabetic Association, Woodward's and many other concerned groups have set up displays to inform you what a well-balanced diet is, and also to promote getting involved in a physical activity.

Here at NAIT, a survey was done to see how our students rate in knowledge of fitness and nutrition. The results were surprisingly low. One question which was answered incorrectly by nearly everyone was:

Q.. Which uses more energy, walking a mile or jogging a mile?

A.. The same amount of energy is expended whether walking or jogging. Moving the same amount of weight the same distance expends the same amount of energy.

Begin today, eat a well-balanced diet and get involved in some physical activity. You can be a fit person in the 1980's. The results are rewarding, you will feel better physically, socially, emotionally, plus your chance of cardiovascular disease decreases--so get fit!

Dear Editor:

I would like to reply to Joe Van Alstine's charges of hypocrisy directed toward me in the last issue of the Nugget.

First of all, Mr. Van Alstine, I would like to thank you for taking the time to send in your comment. The Entertainment section is not exactly deluged with mail, so it's nice to know SOMEBODY out there is reading it and cares enough to reply!

Now, in answer to your charges, I fail to see how you can draw a parallel between a fictitious movie about a man who makes his living by selling himself (which is ART); and a group of young women who are modelling clothes as a part of a Queen competition (which is real LIFE). The point that Megan O'Hara and myself were trying to make in our "$1.49 a Pound" commentary is that sex should not have a place in a contest whose purpose is to choose a representative of the winning technology.

But how can sex NOT have a place in a movie about a gigolo? I do not consider myself to be a prude, nor a fanatical women's libber, and I realize that sex is a part of life. I did not go to see that movie for the sake of some "Thrills", but because I was interested in seeing how such a provocative subject would be handled. In my review, I indicated that I was disappointed with the outcome; if a movie is going to deal with any sort of controversial subject, it should explore it tastefully, but fully.

And let's fact it, Richard Gere was sexy in "American Gigolo"; he was supposed to be. However, it is NOT the primary purpose of NAIT Queen contestants to be sexy.

OUT OF BODY EXPERIENCE

By Anizor Ede, Lic.Sc., M.D., D.T.M. & H., F.R.C.P.(C)

As its name indicates, out of body experiences are those experiences realized by an individual without the intervention of the usual physical sense and, more importantly, in a state in which the physical body is dissociated from the psychic body in such a way that the physical body is in one place while the psychic body is in another place, usually united by what is popularly known as the "silver cord."

There are various forms of out of body experiences, the most popular being astral projection or astral travel and psychic projection, sometimes used synonymously. Whatever the form of out of body experiences being considered, they are generally classified under two headings, namely, spontaneous out of body experiences and controlled out of body experiences. The difference between the two is very vast. There is a sub-category recognized as induced projection.

The technique of out of body experience is very simple indeed, and can be performed by a child. What is not so simple is the understanding of the laws involved. These experiments are not to be indulged in as a pastime only, but as a powerful investigative and educational tool. It is strongly recommended that anybody interested in this area should master the laws before embarking on the exploration of the astral realm.

In our opinion, it is better to plan the "trip" well in advance and the first journey should be undertaken in the company of someone who knows both the "way" and the laws relating to each plane. A mistake in this area could leave an indelible mark on the subject. It is important to remember that ignorance of the law is no excuse, nor can you "Talk you way out."

Just think of it this way: When you want to undertake a journey to an unknown country, you want to find out a lot about the country and also the way to get there. You want to know their customs, their languages, their currency, the food they eat, and, indeed, you try to find out as much about the people as possible. If one would take all these precautions while travelling on this earthly plane where the dangers can, indeed, be predicted with a certain degree of certainty, how much more while travelling on the astral realm.

Some people have likened out of body experiences to death. While some relationship does exist, the difference is too great and they are not at all similar let alone identical. This is where the mistake arose when respectable and well meaning people have tried to describe what has been called "Life after Life" or "Life after Death." Indeed, anybody interested in this area will find out that he or she can have a personal experience in any of these areas if only to convince oneself of the differences.

Let us have an open mind because the only way we can understand ourselves is to get rid of our prejudices so that we may learn more about nature's wonderful laws. Also, we should never abuse the privileges given us because the consequences are enormous. Boasting and exploitation of others with the so-called "psychic powers" is, to say the least, to sow the seed of doom.

"Humility, Simplicity, devotion and courtesy are great virtues, but he along is great who observes decorum with all."

TUITION HIKE

CALGARY (cup) -- Students at Alberta colleges may be paying a 10 percent higher tuition fee if the provincial government accepts a recommendation from the college's board of governors.

The Mount Royal College board of governors proposed the increase to Jim Horsman, advanced education and manpower minister, after consulting with other colleges.

MRC BOG member Ed Schmidt said other colleges were likely to propose the same increase. Schmidt said he had contacted college boards at Lethbridge, Red Deer and Grant MacEwan in Edmonton.

The Northern Alberta Institute of Technology (NAIT) was the only post-secondary institution not to recommend an increase.

MRC board chair Gerry Burden justified the increase saying the costs of education had risen with inflation.

"Staff salaries and other operating costs have all gone up," he said. He said money from tuition fees account for approximately 9 percent of the education costs while the government provides the other 91 percent.

If costs continue to rise and tuition remains stable the government's share would increase. This would be contrary, he said, to established practice of the education system in Alberta.

Pam Patten, MRC student president, said she supported the proposal. "Because the costs of education have risen, I feel the government would be justified in this increase," she said.

The increase would raise tuition from the present $179.50 per semester to $193.25 for full-time students.

The effect of the tuition hike on international students was not known.

Student Representation on Task Force

OTTAWA (CUP) -- The status of the federal-provincial task force on student aid is up in the air because of the Conservative government's defeat Feb. 18.

And student participation in the task force is also now a question mark.

A joint announcement Feb. 15 by the federal secretary of state's office and the provincial Council of Ministers of Education Canada (CMEC) said that there would not be student representation on the task force. But the victorious Liberal party said before the election that it supported the participation of students on the task force, as did the NDP.

National Union of Students (NUS) researcher Jeff Parr said Feb. 19 it remains unclear what will happen to the task force or whether the Liberals will keep their promise on student representation.

"Obviously it's not something we can take for granted," he said.

Parr had angry words for the way the CMEC and secretary of state handled the announcement of the task force's mandate and the decision to exclude students.

"I learned about the decision when I got a call from an Edmonton newspaper asking for NUS' reaction," said Parr. NUS had been pressuring the governments for a student representative on the task force and had been assured that it would be kept informed about any task force decisions," he said.

Parr said the governments' attitude towards student representation bodes ill for the way student concerns will be considered by the task force.

"I don't think it's a very good sign at all. I'm skeptical about their commitments to student input to the task force," he said.

Parr also said NUS is concerned that student input will be minimal because the task force report is due in the fall of this year, meaning much of its deliberations must be done this summer, without students on campus.

The task force, composed of secretary of state and education ministry officials, will not examine the student aid situation in Quebec because the province administers its own student loan program.

The mandate given the task force orders it to:

- Review existing federal and provincial principles and objectives concerning such public financial assistance with a view to determining those principles and objectives which should underlie the provision of such assistance.

- Review the adequacy and appropriateness of existing federal and provincial programs of assistance, including such concerns as accessibility to post-secondary education, the financial needs of students, student debt load, and portability and compatibility of the various forms of financial assistance.

- Formulate alternatives for the continuation, modification or replacement of the existing federal and provincial government policies and programs.

- Report both to the Council of Ministers of Education Canada and to the Secretary of State by the fall of 1980.

The mandate also states that: "In carrying out its work, the task force shall take into account demographic and student participation projections, jurisdictional and special regional considerations, provincial and federal fiscal and financial realities and other matters relating to the operation of student assistant programs."

Lockers Hit Again

The men's lockers in the lower activities centre were robbed again this week. The total amount stolen in the three break-ins was over $30 plus a watch and a wallet.

Late last week, three suspects were picked up for the previous robberies earlier this year. A staff member working downstairs saw three juveniles in the act of robbing the men's lockers. He was unsuccessful in catching the vandals, but was able to hand over a description to the police. The police later caught three 16-year old boys, and are pressing charges of robbery.

It seems that either the police haven't caught all the thieves, or a new group has decided to get in on the action. Since the last three break-ins occurred after the three suspects were caught.

The second set were done in a slightly different fashion. Instead of cutting the locks they were forced open by some sort of pliers. Also, their timing was changed, and the lockers were hit during lunch hour, between 12:15 and 12:45. Previously, the lockers were broken into during the late afternoon or evening hours.

IN THE GROOVES

Marianne Faithfull -- "Broken English"

Out of the pack of sweet-voiced female singers crooning songs of love comes something totally different--a bitchy, tough-sounding woman with an abrasive voice, named Marianne Faithfull.

Faithfull has been through a lot in her lifetime--she has survived a broken marriage, a rocky romance with Rolling Stone Mick Jagger, a miscarriage, suicide attempts, and heroin addiction. Somehow, she came through it all intact; this album signals her victorious emergence back into the public eye (she was a recording star and popular English socialite back in the early '60's).

There are no saccharin love songs on "Broken English"; Faithfull injects a piece of her life into every tune, letting all her disillusionment and bitterness be released through the medium of her voice. She is backed up by a very competent band, expertly using synthesizers and guitars to accentuate the angry mood.

There is a lot of strong material on this album; included are "Ballad of Lucy Jordan," Shel Silverstein's tale of a despondent housewife; as well as John Lennon's "Working Class Hero." But by far the most important song is one of the three that Faithfull co-wrote, entitled "Why D'Ya Do It." This cut is fast gaining notoriety because of all the "naughty" language that is used in it. But the song is no Zappa-esque joke, using obscenity for shock value; every word is entirely necessary and dead serious, used to illustrate the depths of outrage and hatred directed at a sexually unfaithful lover. Backed by a stinging guitar, Faithfull spits out all the resentment she has ever known and the result is devastating:

"Why d'ya do it?" she said,
Ain't nothin' to laugh--
You just tore all our kisses
Right in half!

This is a brilliant album, and hopefully its success will give birth to a new trend for female vocalists. It's about time they broke away from their stereotyped image of softness--even Janis Joplin, for her raspy voice and gut-wrenching delivery, had an underlying vulnerability. One gets the feeling while listening to Marianne Faithfull, that she is completely her own person--and that's good to hear.

HELP!!

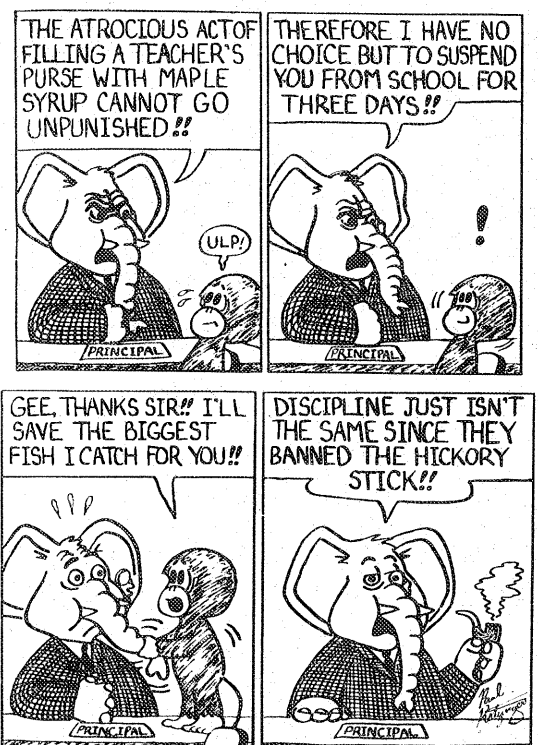

Well, I have finally accomplished the great feat of finishing off all of my courses here at NAIT, and I will be leaving for a much-needed vacation in three week's time. What will happen to the Entertainment section of this paper after that is up to you. The Nugget is already short-staffed, and no one already on the staff has the extra time to devote to totally taking over my position. So what we need are some of you readers out there to come on down to Room E 128 and volunteer your services to help keep this section of the paper going. We need: an Entertainment Editor, as well as layout people, photographers, and writers. I would be happy to help in "learning the ropes" of whatever you would be interested in doing.

All of the people involved with the Entertainment section have worked very hard this year to make it enjoyable and informative for you. Please don't let it die out now; come out and GET INVOLVED!!

Berry's Crock

Tired of making supper at night? After a hard day at the office, who can bring themselves to slave over a hot stove for an hour only to go back and hit the books again. Here's a simple recipe that's an old favourite and most of the work is done in the morning before you go to school.

BAKED BEANS

Start by setting out about 1/3 the volume you can eat of White Pea Beans. Soak them in 3 times that volume of water the night before. The next morning at about 6:45, cook the beans in the same water on top of the stove for approx. 20 minutes. As they're cooking, add 1 large chopped onion, 1/2 cup brown sugar, 3/4 tbsp salt, 1 1/2 tbsp dry mustard and about 1/2 lb of chopped bacon. At this point, do not salt to taste as a lot of water will evaporate during cooking leaving you with salty beans. N.B. Put in large pot and cover with 3 inches of water. If it is possible to return at noon, add a can of mushroom soup and more water. If impossible, add soup and more water before you leave for school. Leave at 175 degrees till about 5:00 pm. Invite a friend for supper and later on you can make beautiful music together.

HOEDOWN '80

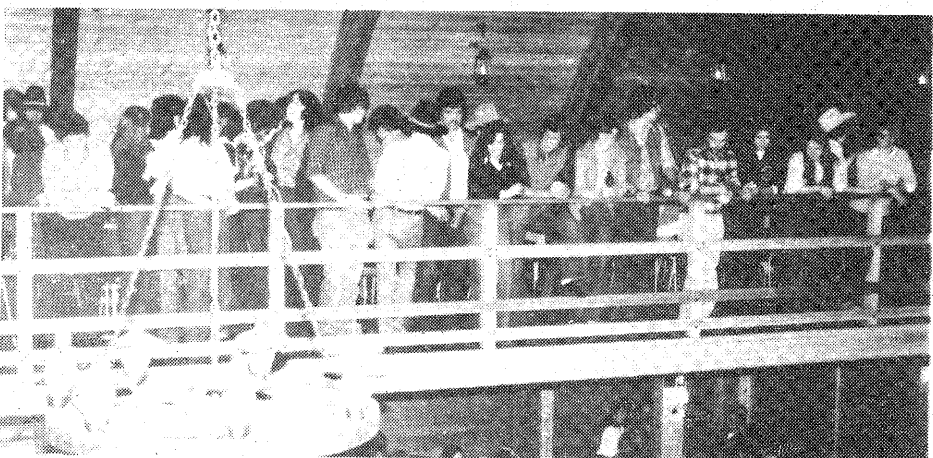

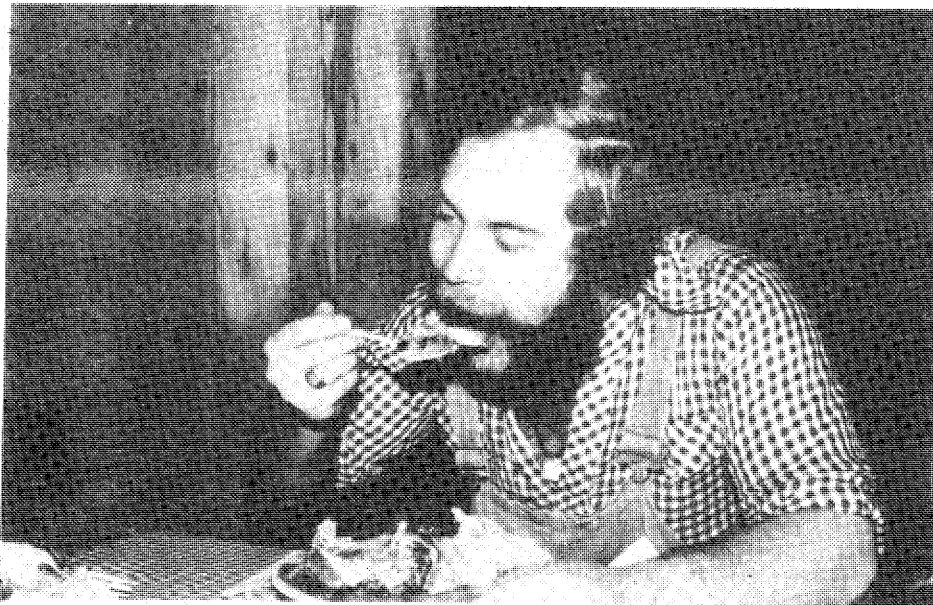

The "Hoedown" at the Red Barn February 22 wasn't much of a hoedown—at least not to my way of thinking.

The evening did start off on a positive note with the dinner, it was as enormous and delicious as usual. For the amount of food served, the price should have been at least four times as much.

But if we were undercharged for the dinner, then the difference was made up in the price of the dance—definitely overpriced for what we got. Nosey Parker, which I was told was a country rock band, was, well...I don't really know what type of music it was that they put out, but it definitely wasn't country rock.

Aside from the lousy music, the Red Barn was still a good time if you were with the right group of people. The people that showed up for a rowdy old time party were the ones that made a good time happen [but isn't that what has been happening at a lot of NAIT functions lately—the people are the only positive thing about them?]

This week I seem to be at a loss for words. It's been two weeks since my last column and it's going to take awhile to get back into the swing of things. This week Con and myself were suppose to feature BOXING in our sporting tips, but due to school commitments, we just to have the time to fulfill our pledge. We apologize for any inconvenience this may cause, especially those of you who were depending on getting them to give as birthday presents. However sporting tips will return next week along with a special section for our female readers by Kelly Polanski. Enough of this gib gab though, it's time to move on. The hockey OOKS lost last week to the mighty sait trojans 5 to 3. It makes me ask the question, "How can one team improve so much in just a short time. It seems bizarre that just one short week before that the OOKS defeated the Trojans 5 to 3. It makes me ask the question, "Were we set up?" It seems highly unlikely that a team could improve so much as to handily defeat another in just one short week. Maybe it's a learning experience. It just shows us that our Southern counterparts pulled the wool over our eyes. It just shows what over confidence can do to you. But don't worry NAIT, we aren't the only ones set up, do you really think that the United Sttes hockey team was good enough to beat the powerful, experienced, Soviet olympic team? I do not think so. I think it is a set up to get the Americans excited about winning gold medals so that they will be very interested in going to Moscow this summer. But as someone once said, "Only time will tell."

EDITOR'S NOTES

CON

Everybody is back from their ski vacations looking tanned and healthy. Here I am feeling like someone shit in my mouth three days later.

Banff was great but I can only go through that a couple of times a year. Mr. Stasiuk and I tore up the little town of Banff in a couple of real wing-dingers. Back here at NAIT all the sports teams are gearing up for the playoffs or else drowning their sorrows. Some of you were undoubtedly planning to beat someone up after reading our sports tips on boxing but you'll have to wait until next week.

With a new NAITSA being elected in the near future, it is time to get in some last potshots against the current bunch.

Well, Kees Cusveller is going to go into modelling with his cute hairdo and Pierre Cardin underwear (Diana Piquette told me he wears them). Vice-Pres Diana is planning on selling her office before she has to give it up, she wants to get something out of this deal. Paul Joly just shaved off his beard after he found a family of hamsters living in it.

Richard Pittet wants to cut the budget of the Nugget down to $5 a week so we can't complain about anything because we couldn't afford it. Brett Smith is retiring his jockstrap to go into breeding sheep, if he can get another stud for his farm. Ken Young is planning a trip to Brazil to find a better bank for NAITSA so we'd better keep an eye on him.

And finally, Laure Wowk wants to get married and settle down with a rich cocaine dealer. Let's hope they all live happily ever after.

AMEN.

Ooks Qualify for 4-West Championships

The basketball season's regular schedule has drawn to a close. The men's team emerged with a respectable 8 win-8 loss record as they defeated the Red Deer Kings by a score of 89-68.

The Ooks played well throughout the contest and were never really challenged by the Kings. Instead, on one occasion, the disorganized Kings helped the Ooks along by scoring into their own basket.

Some Ooks played exceptionally well. The star award goes to 6'5" forward Wayne Squires who had a field day. He scored on every single shot he took and finished the night with 20 points.

In addition to Squires, four other players scored in double digits. Captain Gene Gerwing hit for 13 points while Ron Kelly, Brent Burr, and Doug Zutz each contributed 11 points.

The rest of the team also played well, finishing the game with a 47% field goal average and a 75% average from the foul line. It was the foul shots that sunk the Kings. "They were frustrated early in the game by poor officiating, and this thwarted their later comeback attempts." Those were the words of the Ooks coach Dave Hoy. The Kings were called on 22 fouls in the second half alone. If they could have kept their composure, the final score could have been much closer.

The girls team, which had a disappointing finish this year, lost to the Queens from Red Deer. Both teams, the Chicks as well as the Queens played terrible, and it was a waste of time being there.

When the stats were calculated, the results were even more shocking. This Chicks shot an amazing 17% from the floor and finished with 37 points. The Queens fared no better, finishing with 39 points.

Lou Carignan was the Chicks' only player to contribute more than 9 points. She scored 13.

Although the girls did not do as well as expected, the season was not a total loss. There were times of enjoyment and fun as well.

This weekend, the Ooks are participating in the 4-West Championships, and should do well. For those of you that are interested in seeing the games, consult the bulletin board outside the gymnasium. Games are being played at the Grant MacEwan Campus in Millwoods. Best of luck to the Ooks!

CURLING

CURLING TITLE

After two very hectic days of curling at the Avonair Curling Club, NAIT by virtue of two first place finishes and a fifth edged SAIT for the curling title. SAIT's teams ended up in second, third, and fourth place.

In men's play, NAIT beat SAIT 8 - 4, MRC 13 - 3, CLC 9 - 8 and MHC 11 - 5 to finish the round robin with a perfect 4 - 0 record. In the semi-finals NAIT edged by LCC 9 - 8 and SAIT crushed GMCC 8 - 3. NAIT had a relatively easy time in beating SAIT 7 - 4 for the men's title.

In mixed play, NAIT had to win its final game, which it did 7 - 3 over OLDS and hope that SAIT would beat MHC. SAIT won and thus NAIT's 2 - 2 record was good enough for a second place tie with MHC, with the tie breaking formula favouring NAIT. In semi-final action, NAIT counted three in the last end to edge RDC 7 - 5 and GMC tripped up SAIT 9 - 5. NAIT had no trouble in beating GMCC 10 - 2 for the mixed title. In round robin action NAIT beat MHC 14 - 4, lost 7 - 3 to SAIT, lost 6 - 4 to CLC and beat OLDS 7 - 3. The ladies carried the hard luck torch. They won their first two games 10 - 4 over MHC and 5 - 4 over LCC. They then lost 7 - 5 on a last rock measurement to GPRC who ended up winning the ladies title. In their final game, NAIT's skip, Lynn Cutler, wrecked on a near impossible take out for three on a perfectly placed Camrose guard that would have given NAIT the win and first place in the round robin. Instead NAIT finished 3rd with a 2 - 2 record.

The NAIT teams ended up winning 12 games and losing only 4. The members of the teams are as follows:

IN CONTROL

This year's 7th Annual Concrete Toboggan Races proved to be no exception to past years' successes. This year, to everyone's surprise, UBC wrapped things up, taking 6 of a total of 7 trophies.

Trophies up for competition were: Best Single Run Time, Best Total Time (2 runs), Best Braking System, Long-shot Trophy, Best Single Alumni, Most Spectacular Run, and Beauty and Design.

The UBC teams took home the first six trophies while U of Manitoba captured the Beauty and Design prize with a two runnered model.

Although our trusted BCET did not bring home any trophies, they certainly gave UBC a run for, chasing in hot on their tails almost every run timing.

UBC's #2's best single run was 9.19 seconds and that couple with UBC #2's run at 9.31 Secs was enough to nose out the competition for the Best Run and Best Total Time. UBC #1's unique braking system brought them to a halt just long enough to pick up the Best Braking Prize.

It seems that when they hauled in the anchor, they could really sail. So quickly did they fly that they picked off the longshot trophy.

UBC Alumni took the trophy in that category, and their #3 team won most spectacular run when they jumped the track, almost wiped out the timing system and crossed the finish line in mid-air.

U of Man., with their craft, a sight to behold, took the Beauty and Design category.

taking the final trophy of the day.

The high excitement and degree of success was attained due to the fact that we got a good fall of snow the day before.

Although we took no trophies, it was, just the same, a lot of fun for all.

Maybe better luck next year, BCET.

★ ATHLETE OF THE WEEK ★

The NAIT Soccer team have just completed another busy schedule for the month of January, playing lots of exhibition games among the Edmonton District Soccer League. They also represented NAIT in The Winter Sports Weekend at the Kinsman Fieldhouse and our NAIT team won the tournament by beating SAIT 3 - 0 in the finals. The climax to our unbeaten record came on February 23 when the NAIT team were asked to play Chile who at that time were at the top of the First Division with an unbeaten record. Our NAIT team played an outstanding game to beat Chile 3 - 2. So at this time I would like to congratulate our soccer team on beating the best and wish them as much success in their March schedule. NAIT's next team game is on Sunday the 9th of March at Kinsman Fieldhouse against Victoria at 10:00 p.m.

Melody's setting has improved greatly this year. Her consistent setting is one of the reasons why the ookchicks improved this season, almost making the playoffs, losing only on a count back. She was a little reluctant to hit, but towards the end of the season she regained confidence and her hitting began to develop.
