Editors Note

An obvious sign of hard economic times in Canada is the fact that thefts around campus are starting earlier than usual. Usually these things did not occur until early when pocketbooks were becoming severely stretched. A sign of the times was seen in the elevator a few weeks ago, 'If anybody saw the scum who stole my battery....'. This is a definite sign that some students are finding it difficult to make it through the school year on the funds they managed to raise this summer, and this is only November, who knows what it is going to be like next spring. I find this very disturbing, all of here are on our own free will and a person might think that other fellow students might have some respect for his or hers private property and leave it alone. Many years ago Universities were regarded as separate entities from a city and were regarded as sanctuaries from the law. The U of A is still considered as such, City Police are required to receive official permission to come on campus unless it is for an emergency situation that their own keystone cops can't handle. But as usual there are a few people that can't realize these things and are prepared to steal anything that is not nailed down.

I am tired of leaving my locker at night and wondering whether or not it will still be in one piece in the morning. I never leave my calculator in there anymore or anything else of any kind of value. A person cannot leave a wallet in a Phys-Ed locker without fear of having it stolen. What is wrong with some people, don't they realize that other students are no better off than they are, only most students will find other ways to support their way through school, without ripping off other students. If things keep up at this rate soon you will have to hire your own personal security guard to watch your locker, and another one to watch your car, you might even have to find one who will shoot to kill, and just hope that did not forget to warn your friend, the one who was only trying to leave a note in your locker.

It is time for students to police themselves, it is just to unrealistic to hire a security force large enough to police the entire campus. If you see something happening that doesn't seem to be quite kosher, ask some questions, or if something is obviously illegal just don't sit there and think that you do not have the authority to do anything. Do something, challenge them, call the cops, but do anything. Always remember that next time it could be your car or your locker that is being broken into. Lets try and clean up this campus and make things easier for the normal student and just a little bit harder for the crooks

Do you think of me sometimes,
And how things used to be?
Are you happier now,
Since you've been set free.

Do you ever feel alone,
Or helpless like a child,
Wandering through a world,
Alien and wild.

Does it make you scared,
Starting fresh again,
Thinking that because you cared,
Your heart will never mend.

LETTERS

Dear Sir:

In response to Jana G. Cech's review of the R.T.A. Hallowe'en Bash, I was glad to read that indeed chivalry was still alive. However, in reading her review, I began to realize that I was not concerned with how she got to the Bash. Her review sounded more like "Travels With Pepe" than a cabaret review. The point is that she did get there, and with free tickets. She may not have enjoyed it, but there were seventy or so people there who did enjoy themselves. The major points of disagreement are: 1. There was never supposed to be a band; 2. The name of our technology is Radio and Television Arts, not Radio and Broadcasting Technology; 3. There are only 72 people in our technology. Perhaps Miss Cech should endeavour to get her facts straight before she writes another article for The Nugget. Perhaps the most insulting remark was that she had never heard of C.H.N.R. - C.R.T.A. before. Maybe she is spending too much time in the cafeteria and Nugget offices. Wake up and smell the Yuban Miss Cech.

Yours truly,
Al Smith, R.T.A.

Editor's Note: Ms. Cech's review was submitted as an independent article of her personal views of this Cabaret! Tickets were not provided by The Nugget.

STUDENTS:

The subject: Lies in the Nugget paper.
Example: The EET's, Big Mountain Ski Trip.
-Outlaw Inn is located in Kalispel not Whitefish.
-Free Beerstube afternoon, NOT true. 2 hours long, during already paid for lift

-All you can drink? As often as you can catch the waiter.
-FREE dinners? Or is it breakfasts?
Is this freedom of the press or is this freedom of B.S.

Should these lies be condoned or should action be taken? What else in the Nugget is improperly edited, either being fact or fiction.

EDITOR'S NOTE

Freedom of the press does reign at NAIT, obviously because your letter is being printed. Next time I suggest you strike out at the EET club rather than the Nugget.

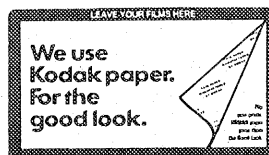

I remind you that the Nugget prints ALL ads FREE to the student body and leave it up to the students to make sure they are true and not misleading. We neither have the staff nor the time to check out every little detail although we would like to.

Please come back. I miss your witty letters and your crazy cartoon. If you think the reason that your last letter was not printed because of censorship reasons you are wrong. I did not print it because I promised you privacy and I did not think that you would want the whole of NAIT to see your request. Dear A.A.L.

I for one do not beleive in being a chauvinist. I think women are great, everyone should own one, (just kidding). Actually, if you do have the same problem as the guys when they walk past Animal Health. I would suggest that you try the same thing that I reccomended last week. However, you might have a few more problems when you try asking out Electronics students because they are very shy and tend to place their studies before anything else. Good Luck.

Signed, R.T.

Dear R.T.

I am insulted and incensed about the way you treat women in your articles. You think that we were nothing better than toys for all the animals in this Institution to look at and drool over. What about us girls, don't you think that we have some lustful thoughts when walking down the Electronics wing and the Earth Resouces wing. What would you suppose we do about it.

IN MEMORIUM

The Nugget would like to express their sympathy and regrets to anyone who cares, about the untimely death of Hameck Botsprig. (Please not: In issue #7, October 28, 1982, the name was spelled Hameic Botspric. This was a typographical error and we apoligize to his family for this.)

Information concerning zhameck's death was not made available to the Nugget. Rumour has it that he left NAIT one afternoon and never made it home. Police are now searching for the black limosine which kindly offered him a ride home.

Lyle Botsfordchinni was not available for comment but his assistant told us, 'We don't know nuthing, and neither do you if you know what is good for you.' At this point I decided to end my investigation.

Please send no flowers, just donate the money to the Nugget. Hameck is survived by his loving mistress and two kids, and 500 people who really don't care.

His death was not in vain because we have already found another brave soul to take his place.

Another Halloween Cabaret?

The Chem Tech Alumni Assoc. & Students Assoc. presented their version of a Halloween cabaret last Friday evening.

Their "Ghost, Goblins, Globulins, & Grads" cabaret was held at the Orange Hall up on 111 ave & 94 st. The Hall sports a medium sized dance floor, which was kept busy almost all evening with people dancing. The music was provided by a group of D.J.'s (can anyone remember their name?). At one point the D.J.'s stopped the music to host the costume contest. After a short, but wild parade of costumes (& legs) the judges decided to present their wine bottles to:

:a gentleman skeleton (in his whites, no less)
:a Spanish dancer
:the Devil & his pregnant angel (the Devil made her do it).

At the end of the evening the Hall manager gave permission for 3 more songs to be played, so those that hadn't already left got up & did their thing again, or left (due to sheer exhaustion).

The alcohol supplies were in great abundance, there were no real hassles presented to the bouncers (only in getting the hall cleaned up in time because of the extra songs) & everyone totally enjoyed themselves.

Hallow Eventide

The CSS Halloween cabaret, held last Saturday evening, was no Hollow evening!

CSS chose a hall (Moose Hall) which might have been slightly off the map, but it sure did the trick. The dance floor was at the size at which dancing could occur with no lose to life or costume, & yet the floor did not ever seem bare. The band, British Rail, sported mostly quite young talent, but their music did not reflect this. The music was excellent & everyone dancing trully enjoyed it. The booze held out for the whole evening, without having to bring in reinforcements.

ce-Smith's "Halloween"

The destruction lovers
The agents of sick catastrophhe Torture, maim, kill the unwary Playing for the power of god

The vengeful and malicious
Strike their vulgar spite
Against the world
Outside of their malignant perspectives

The sick minds grin vacantly

There were many excellent costumes flaunted during the evening, but at judging time (the judges were circulating within the crowd, instead of having a viewing parade which would have used up precious dancing time) the booze bottle prizes were handed over to:

:an S&M "hooker"
:a double-wammy, flashing-flasher
:a spider & a fly

The evening went quite smoothly, if not quietly. For those of you who missed out, you were tricked. For those of you who were there, what a treat, eh?
Congrates guys (?) for a job "well done"!

As the razor blades scream out
The agony of innocence;
The traditional tummyaches
Foretell needless death

The night for fright;
Children masquerading
As ghosts and goblins
Devils and bastards Masquerading as human beings

Halloween, once again
Is the night
For the twisted and maligned spirits
To hold their power
Over the innocent.

THE POET'S CURSE (OR BLESSING)

Peace and quiet fill my mind,
As once again the words
form ryhmes,
And once again my pen is stirred,
To write down all these
colorful words,
For if I don't the mass keeps building,
And it's harder to think straight as the words are filling
And it's harder to think straight as the words are
filling,
The thought channels that are normally clear,
And I'd use logic, but now,
oh dear!
They fill the paths and I can't think
In an ordered manner, it really stinks!
'Cause now I'm stuck on a poetic track,
And it's really hard to just get back to ordered thinking on a good straight line
Without having, first, to end
the rhyme.
But now, at last, it's almost done.
It's getting harder to have the words run
Together to form a nice smooth thought,
So now, at least, I'll make it stop.

WELL DESIGNED CABARET

On Saturday night I had the pleasure of attending a Hallowe'en Cabaret held by the Architecture Technology the hall was packed with over 250 people, almost all in costume. The band, Secret Society, was great with a good mix of orignal material and prime cuts. All the material was done to the same high level of excellence. If you get a chance to see this group do not pass it up. The four sets of tunes kept the girls and gouls jumping. The crowd was very inventive and imaginative in thier costume selection and design. Some of the celebrities to grace this function with thier attendance were: Darth Vader in a tux, Minnie and Mickey, a crayola crayon, Inspector Cluseau, Uncle Sam, Frankenstein, space creatures, Super-men, Vampires, Raggedy Ann and Andy and the Pink Panther. Special mention must go to the beer doctors behind the bar for good service all night. The best costu mes were voted for best individual, the skunk and best couple Minnie and Mickey. The cabaret was a great success if you hear of any other Architecture cabarets get your tickets quickly as they sell out fast.

1985

Although referred to as a powerful political fantasy, 1985 is really a powerful study of relationships between people. The play features four main characters who were once political activists in the late 1960's. It is now 16 years later and each has gone his separate way. They are brought together because of an event that has happened in their past which can have a devastating effect on their future. The play takes place in one setting which represents a present day apartment and the original apartment they had shared in the 60's. And, consequently the lights

The play takes place in one setting which represents a present day apartment and the original apartment they all shared in the 60's. This poses a problem as the characters have frequent flashbacks to their lives in the 60's and consequently the lights go off to indicate the change. The problem is that some characters leave the stage between scenes while others come on, and the result sounds like a herd of elephants stampeding across the stage. To make the effect even worse, the whole stage glows in the dark so that the actors can find their way back to the stage. The play itself isn't too bad, and the acting is fairly realistic, although it tends to be a bit intense at times. 1985 is a play people can identify with because it deals with issues such as unemployment which are important today. One of the most important things that the play points out is that, although friends may part there is always a common bond between them.

1985 is playing at the Rice Theatre from Oct 28 to Nov 7

ON THE SEX OF SEX AND VIOLENCE

Last Friday night's movie (In Praise of Older Women) is an example of the many questions concerning sex on television. What is meant by sex on television? How much skin should be shown? What time is okay to show skin? What should be implicit and/or explicit when it comes to carnal relations? Believe it or not, it was only fifteen years ago that navals (i.e.:bellybuttons) could not be shown on television. Today we are very close to having the 'full view' in regular series such as 'Bizarre'. Of course, the American networks are a bit behind us Canucks when it comes to frontal nudity, but even the dunk-tank competition on 'Battle of the Network Stars' is a bit revealing.

Whether or not sex on TV is harming our society in any way is difficult to decide (The sexual revolution of a decade ago has brought us herpes; will our society, in 1992, have videoes, a social disease caught by watching too much slinky flesh on the tube?) Personally, I feel shows that even remotely advocate incest, rape, child molesting, or plain brutality should be banned outright. However, if the scene is

True West

Writer--Sam Shepard
Director--Jace van der Veen
Opening night--Oct 29, '82
at the Theatre Network
for the Northern Lights Theatre

True West is a new comedy, (set in the present, but following in the footsteps of the old west), about 2 brothers who are continually feuding about one thing or another. One of them is a well-to-do screenwriter, & the other is a petty thief. But, half way through the play there is a turn of events which causes some hilarious scenes. There were 4 people cast for this play:

Wendell Smith (Lee)

-his performance convinced me that he is a very good actor. This time he did show what anger can be.

Robert Clinton (Austin)

-this is the first time I have seen him perform, but I think I can truthfully say he will go far. His performance left me totally enthralled.

Greg Rogers (Saul)

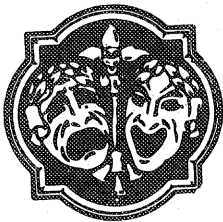

-he portrayed his part with a lot of character. The viewers were almost laughing out of their seats.

Lee Royce (the mother)

-her part was quite short, but she did justice to it.

This is one play I feel that everyone should go & see. It was excellent.

True West runs until Nov 13, at the Theatre Network. Go & see it. You'll find it worth your time & money.

CHICKS DOUBLE WINNERS

In weekend action the Chicks came away with two victories in preseason action. In Friday's game against Sole City Sports, a major women's league team, the Chicks came on strong at the start of the game and never let up. By the time the first 11 minutes of play was over NAIT was in control of a 21 point lead. They have improved on the mistakes that they were previously making. They were playing a stronger closer defense and capitalizing on their opportunities which led to a 41-18 half time score. The girls came out a little flat in the beginning of the second half but this soon wore off and they continued on the way they finished in the first half. They were in control of the game from start to finish. Turning in good performances in the game for the Chicks were Robyn Lee 16 points, Janet Weech 13 pts., Jami Bering 12 pts., Laverne Holt 10 pts., Marcy Hurlburt 10 pts., and Leanne Undershute with some good defensive play. In the end the Chicks were winners with a 68-36 final score. On Saturday afternoon they continued their winning ways with a 9 point victory over the Alumni team. The team started off very slowly, they seemed to be tired from the game the night before. They played very poor defensively and allowed the alumni to score almost at will. The offence seemed almost nonexistent with the game in the 6th minute before the Chicks scored their first points, and at the 12 minute mark before they got their second basket. Once they got rolling they closed the score to a more respectable 22-26 lead for the alumni at half time. The alumni team showed their experience by playing a more controlled game. In the second half the Chicks returned to their form of the previous night. With much tighter man-to-man defense and better offensive play inside, the Chicks staged a come back. Good performances came from Leanne Undershute with a game high 20 points, Robyn Lee 10 pts., Marcy Hurlburt 9 pts., and Jami Bering 8 pts. Good performances for the alumni came from Diane Butterfield, Rose MacMillan and Marina Blaskovits. These two victories should boost the confidence level of the Chicks and help pull them together as a team. The next action for the Chicks is this weekend in a pre-season tournament being held here at Nait. There will be 8 teams participating in this tournament. The games start Friday afternoon at 2:00 p.m. and Nait sees their first action in the tournament at 3:45 against Sait. Come in after class and cheer on our girls. Admission is free with presentation of your NAIT I.D. card.

Ooks Basketball

On Friday night the Ooks played an exhibition game against a premier mens league team, P & F Optical. The team was not up to full strength for this game with 3 forwards out on the injury list. The game was a close see-sawing affair with both teams taking the lead numerous times. The P & F team had great speed and an abundance of height which was a problem for us since 2 of our 3 big men were on the injured list. The Ooks fell victim to their own mistakes with some poor dribbling and passing. Some great inside work by Scott McLaren kept us in the game. At half time the score was 41-29 for P & F. As the second half started NAIT started to comeback cutting the P & F lead to 7 pts. This was accomplished by some good outside shooting by forwards Pat Gangl and Phil Bartlett. Although NAIT kept equal to the competition in the second half they could not overcome the lead established by P & F in the first half. The scoring was pretty well dominated by 3 players, Scott McLaren with 31 pts, Pat Gangl 14 pts and Phil Bartlett 12 pts. NAIT suffered their first defeat in this tough fought game losing 81 to 69 to a very good team.

On Saturday afternoon the Ooks participated in another very close game. This time the competition was supplied by the alumni. The Ooks took an early lead and never gave it up although the two teams were tied a couple of times. The scoring was spread out over the whole team. After some great plays at both ends by both teams the Ooks emerged with a half-time lead of 40 to 35. In the second half Harry Blacker came out with the hot hand hitting 100 percent on his 8 foul shots and 6 outside shots for a game high of 20 points. Scott McLaren continued to impress people with his play inside by getting 13 points. A strong game was also had by Sean Phelan who played well offensively and defensively and accumulated 8 points. For the alumni the big scorers were Bert Bertolin 12 pts, Roger Poon 10 pts and Len Parsons 10 pts. With the strong play of Harry Blacker and some good defence the Ooks extended their lead to finish the game with a convincing 85-68 victory. The Ooks next action is in a Pre-Season tournament at Grant MacEwan. Their first game is Thursday at 8:45 p.m. against GMCC, and then Saturday at 10 a.m. against Lethbridge. Senate Probes Oldsters

The U of A senate, the body charged with 'inquiring into any matter that might tend to enhance the usefulness of the University', has launched a Task Force on Mature Students ('all students who are 25 or over, and non-matriculated adult students who are enrolled in a credit course or program at the University of Alberta') comprised 28% of all applicants to the University in 1981-82, and the Task Force will be attempting:

1) to collect data about the nature of the mature student population at the University of Alberta.

2) to identify major concerns and special needs of the mature student.

3) to decide which issues warrant further investigation

4) to determine to what extent the University of Alberta meets the needs of the mature student with regard to these issues

5) to survey the support mechanisms for mature students in the general community.

6) to make recommendations. One of the first things the Task Force did was to send out 500 questionnaires at the beginning of August to enrolling mature students, asking opinions and information from them. Over 140 have already been returned. Other persons at all levels of the University, and outside, have been approached for contributions.

The Task Force on Mature Students is comprised of six Senate members, two members of the University of Alberta community at large, and one representative of Athabasca University.

Mary Totman, Executive Officer of the Senate, stresses that 'the success of the task force, like all others (that the Senate has done), depends to a great extent on the input we receive.'

Anyone wishing to contribute information or opinions to the Task Force on Mature Students should submit it, preferably during October and November, to The Senate, 150 Athabasca Hall, University of Alberta, Edmonton, T6G 2E8. The Senate task forces have tackled subjects such as the status of women at university, native students, and those with learning disabilities; and most recently (April 1982) it released its Report on University Purpose.
