Better Late Than Never!

NAITSA'S $375,000.00 Baby Opens To Smoke Fumes

Naitsa's pride and joy opened unceremoniously to the smoke fumes of Nait's incessant smoking population. Tide sales should go right up when people smell their clothes after being in here.

WEARY WORKMEN DOZE THROUGH WORKDAY

This workman was discovered sleeping in a cubicle in the Men's E-Wing washroom. Could this be why the lounge was late?

The new student lounge is finally completed and will be open to the public February 19th, and not a minute too soon. The project was delayed for approximately two months. Would it have something to do with workers sleeping in the washrooms? So what was the delay? Bruce Antoniuk claims that weather hampered the workers, and that there were no stipulations in the contract about penalties for work not being completed on time.

This raises other questions: Why were there workers in on Sunday? Was there overtime paid? and Did NAIT go over budget on the project? According to NAITSA President, Greg Scherf, the new lounge was on budget and no overtime was paid because the contract had a fixed cost stipulation.

But regardless of the problems that were involved, it's a relief to know some of the overflow of the Tower Lounge will be taken care of. Only one major problem exists: WHERE'S THE BOOZE?

EXPOSE YOURSELF

In a little less than a month, the eyes of Edmonton will be focused upon us. On March 15th and 16th, it is expected that over 30,000 members of the Edmonton General Public will be streaming through NAIT's halls seeking information about our glorious institute. This is kind of scary when you consider that 30,000 people can probably ask a lot of questions in their search for the truth. It's even scarier when you wonder "just who is going to answer their inquiries?" Well, dear reader, this is where you come to the rescue . . .

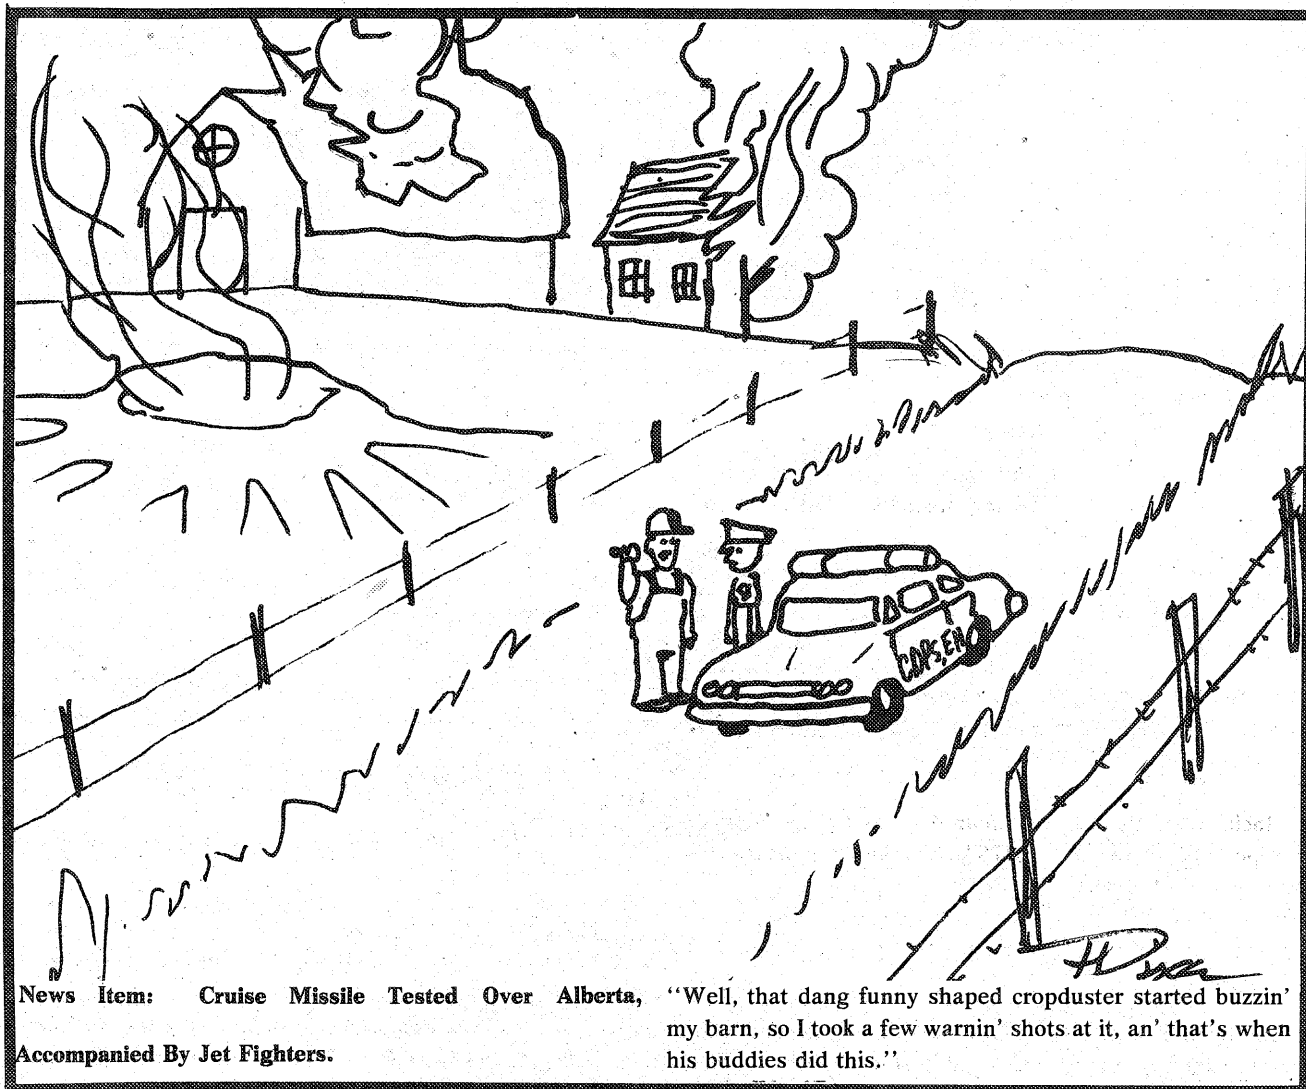

"Open House" has been an annual event at NAIT for twenty years. The name, "Open House", is somewhat self-explanatory. But, for those who are unfamiliar, it goes like this: During two days in March, the Institute opens its doors to students, students to be, employers and general public for a mass information disseminating session. Different technologies have always set up displays which best exemplify what they learn. These displays are manned by students. Open House is a good example of public relations and advertising. It sparks interest in people's minds, and helps to sell the Institute to the public. A public made up of potential students, but more important to you, potential employers.

March 15th and 16th can also be a good time for the students who occupy the different displays. I mention this from first hand experience, because I was at the Business Display last year. I met a lot of people who were interested in our program, but who had either questions or misconceptions. I enjoyed answering any queries, because it reminded me of the thoughts that ran through my mind only a year earlier as I contemplated attending NAIT. The whole experience helped increase my knowledge and pride in my technology. It was especially gratifying since we earned an "honorable mention" in the "large technology division."

I think now is a good time for anyone who has been wanting to get involved in NAIT, to do so. It is also a time for everyone who enjoys their program to show the public what benefits this program has to offer. Any more public exposure to NAIT, or your technology can only do good in the long run. After all, "It's your future."

The Importance of Your Opinion

"Public opinion is highly influential in our society. Favorable public opinion can help elect a political candidate, sell a consumer product, or raise the price of a corporate stock. Unfavorable public opinion, on the other hand, can be the kiss of death for an individual, a product, or an institution."

The preceding quote was taken out of a textbook entitled "The Practice of Public Relations." I think that it captures quite well the spirit of this week's editorial comment.

Public Opinion has proven itself to be the most powerful weapon in society. Two cases in recent memory show that to be true. In New York a poll showed that an incredible 94.8 per cent of the population agreed to acquit Bernard Goetz of murder charges for his vigilantism on New York's subways. At the same time, Provincial governments in our own country are having a difficult time convicting Dr. Henry Morgentaler for a criminal offence because so far there hasn't been a jury that will find him guilty.

On a much smaller scale, NAIT is also affected by its public's opinion. This year at the Nugget, Sean O'Neill, the Editor, and I have tried very hard to educate the NAIT student body as to the usage of their student association fees (the $75.00 paid by each attending full-time student) and to the particular concerns voiced by various NAIT Technologies vis a vis NAITSA and its policies.

In the process there have been some feathers that have been ruffled simply because we've said some things that some people didn't like to hear. Although that's unfortunate, the Nugget's editorial position is that of informer and we feel that you, the NAIT Student, has a right to know exactly where your money is going.

Because "The Nugget" has a certain role to be played, people look at us and accept us as "The Newspaper." Therefore, although the editorial comment is well read it in itself does not possess the power to influence the decision makers. That is where you come in.

The Nugget's primary function is a forum for the public (NAIT's students) to voice their views. Kevin B. (who wrote a letter to the editor this week) and many others before him must be applauded for taking time to express their views to the student via the Nugget.

You students are the ultimate decision makers. If you agree with something or if you disagree with something, you as an individual have the power to do something about it. The NAITSA executive is elected by you the students not us the NAIT Nugget therefore, they owe you an explanation if you have a beef or concern -- an explanation that they don't owe the Nugget editorial staff.

As a public your opinions are powerful but they are also hidden. Bring these feelings out into the open. If you agree or disagree with a comment, it's not enough to think to yourself that you agree or disagree with a column. If you want changes let the people concerned know. It's time you people realized that you hold the balance of power in your hands. Use it for your good, that's why we're here.

Richard Russell.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

"Where's The Beef?"

I've got one: I can understand restrictions on NAIT policy with regards to outside organizational advertising, but perhaps NAITSA should get off the students backs.

I am in Business Administration for no other reason than to learn about organizing and operating a business, including everything from ski trips to department stores.

My Story: I had recently attempted to organize a ski trip to Jasper in the hopes of getting business students of NAIT together for a little fun during "Chinook Days." I might add that this was a non-profit venture and was to benefit the students only.

As it turned out, I ended up having to cancel the trip due to the ridiculous restrictions placed on my advertising, enforced by NAITSA and the Business Administration Society.

Included in the trip was four days and three nights in Jasper for $145 return. NAITSA came into the picture when they forbade the posting of signs to advertise the trip. Now, as business students and educated adults, I do not have to stress how hard it is to advertise without an available medium.

Shortly after NAITSA's interference, I was forced to hand out brochures in the hallways and in student lockers. Then, to my surprise the society of my faculty; BAS, threatened to sue me if one of those brochures ended up on the floor. It seems that they would sue me because I encouraged Business students to "litter" on the floor.

So, then I had NAITSA and BAS on my back. I could see a viable justification for their actions if I was advertising for a profit making organization, but I was not. Or, I could even understand if I was competing with BAS for the same weekend ski trip, but they had nothing planned.

The final result from the lack of co-operation and the intentional misunderstanding of our two NAIT student organizations are:

- a) cancelling the trip
- b) losing the deposits for transportation and accomodation in Jasper.

In closing, I would like to say, I'm pi..ed off, and with just cause. NAITSA and BAS blew the whole issue out of proportion.

At times like this, I don't know why we have organizations such as these who do not assist the students, but rather try to compete with them.

Very concerned,
Kevin B.

Letter to the Editor

The Williams were suitably unhappy when their first child was born with no ear, and their best friends, the Cranes, were well aware of this. Preparing for their first visit to see the newborn, Mrs. Crane reminded her husband that at all costs he shouldn't make any reference to the baby's defect.

In no time at all both couples found themselves cooing over the crib "Look at those arms," said Mrs. Crane. "He's really going to be able to throw a ball. And with those legs, he could be a sprinter. Say, how're his eyes?"

"Terrific," said the proud mother.

"They better be," blurted Mr. Crane "He'll never be able to wear glasses!"

All letters to the editor should be typed or written neatly and double spaced. The letter deadline is Monday at 4:30 for the Thursday edition. All letters must include a signature and student I.D. number. Anonymous letters will not be printed, but names will be withheld upon the author's request. "The Nugget" reserves the right to edit for libel and length. Letters do not necessarily reflect the opinion of "Nugget" staff.

Dear Editor:

In response to the cover page of the last Nugget, the picture and the caption left us with the impression that those involved with the cover were insinuating that hunters are irresponsible and do not know what they are doing. Through personal experience and contact with other hunters we have come to the conclusion that the misconception of hunters attitudes and actions when hunting have come about by two things:

1) A small portion of the hunters who abuse the privileges and ethics of hunting. These hunters have soiled the reputation of hunters to come.

2) People who have never gone hunting, never talked to a hunter and have formed their own opinions from biased media articles and are trying to impose their opinions on others and thus the misconception grows.

Hunting is a way of life in this country and people who are against it are a very vocal minority and we believe they will change nothing in the long run.

We apologize if we took the cartoon the wrong way but we are tired of hunters continually being called down by people with little or no knowledge of the subject.

SUMMER JOB CREATION AND PROBLEMS

Once again students are beginning to look for summer jobs. Now doubt this year it will be just as difficult to find one as in the previous few years.

Flora MacDonald, Minister of Employment and Immigration, and Andree Champagne, Minister of State for Youth, have announced the introduction of Challenge '85. This project is placing $205 million toward the creation of up to 95,000 jobs.

Under Challenge '85 there are six initiatives. For the program to work there must be greater co-operation between the federal, provincial and municipal governments.

The six components are:

1. Summer Employment / Experience Development ($163 million) (SEED)

The formation of this project is to provide wage subsidies to stimulate career development opportunities for students.

2. Student entrepreneurs (up to $30 million in loans; up to 7.5 million actual costs)

This project is for students to develop their own summer business to support provincial initiatives. There will be financial help given in the form of loan guarantees or start-up loans.

3. Federal Departments and Agencies - Career Related job for students ($24.2 million)

This pilot project has Federal government departments and agencies placing students in career related summer jobs. Two subsidiaries are also provided for:

- (i) Cadet and Reserve Training Programs
- (ii) Supernumerary Special Constable Program

- these programs are a continuation from last year.

4. Work Orientation Workshop (WOW) ($0.5 million)

This project is aimed at potential school-leavers and disadvantaged in-school youth with information about the future job market. The workshops will provide information on workplace practices and relations, financial management, job searching techniques and other variable involved in the workplace.

5. Canada Employment Centres for Students ($13.6 million) and Native Internship Program ($2.4 million)

The Hire-A-Student campaign will be available again, with some 450 offices. This is a placement centre and a referral service for all students.

The Native Internship Program is designed to help increase opportunities for Native Students.

6. Business Drive for Jobs ($1.3 million)

This project is to initiate the business industry to hire students through subsidies.

The SEED, WOW and Student/EEET programs will total $143 million, of that $12 million will be allocated in Alberta.

The Government's program is counting on heavy co-operation from private industry, especially those involved in high technology. But with the recession and many employees being laid off companies are sceptical in allocating their money into job creation for students.

There is an expectation on the government's part that 2/3 of all summer jobs will be created by the private industry. Although some of these programs look good on paper, it is not very realistic to expect the private industry to make jobs.

With enrollment higher than ever the outlook, in actuality for summer jobs is not very good.

IT'S YOUR FUTURE

Open House '85
March 15, 16

This year's theme "It's Your Future," corresponds with the International Year of the Youth. Some 10,000 people will be visiting NAIT and inquiring about different career opportunities.

With only a few weeks before the actual event, each technology is looking for volunteers to help organize and run booths. (A list of who to contact regarding your technology is provided). It is important to get involved to make this year's OPEN HOUSE a success.

The booths are judged in one of two categories; small program and large program. Within these categories are 3 divisions: Business and Applied Arts, Engineering Technology and Industrial.

The winners of each division are awarded plaques, with the 2nd place winners receiving certificates. A $50 cash award will be given to the overall winners in Best Small Program Display and Best Large Program Display.

The criteria for judging displays is as follows:

STUDENT PARTICIPATION

- Availability to interact with Visitors - up to 10 points
- Enthusiasm in dealing with Visitor - up to 10 points
- Knowledge of program - up to 10 points

STAFF PARTICIPATION

- Availability and helpfulness to Visitors - up to 10 points

DISPLAYS

- General Quality - up to 15 points
- Relevance to Program & objectives to Open House - up to 30 points.
- Comprehensiveness relative to the Program - up to 15 points.

For a total of 100 points.

To make this year's OPEN HOUSE a success, get involved now, after all. . . It's Your Future.

Isn't anything happening to anyone out there that would interest (or excite) the rest of NAIT's student population? What is going on out there? I'm sure there are more than a few ski trips, tech functions, or just good times involving NAIT students. If you are experiencing things such as this, let the rest of us know about them. This can be accomplished very easily by following these steps:

- make plans for a good time
- on your way out, grab your camera
- take pictures of your featured event

By following these steps your good times could be recorded forever in your student yearbook. As you might already know this year's yearbook will be an Activities Book. This means no individual pictures will be included. If you want to be a part of this book PLEASE submit your pictures to RmE126. Your input would be greatly appreciated.

Furthermore, do you really think you will remember the faces of every member of your 1984-85 NAIT class 20 years from now? If not, we would like to help. By phoning 471-7617 you could make an appointment or have your class picture taken. This picture would be included in the 1985 Activities Book, right alongside the pictures you took of your good times. But if you want to take advantage of this service, please do so by March 31, 1985. Picture it, you and your classmates emblazoned forever in the Activities.

Lately I've had a lot of complaints regarding pictures taken by NAITSA photographers at various cabarets. People are asking how come photographers are taking pictures, but none are showing up in the Nugget. The pictures the photographers are taking are not for the Nugget, they are for the Activities Book. The Nugget has chosen to advertise the events before they happen, not write about them afterwards.

Hope to be seeing you in the pictures.

MOVIE UPDATE BY BYRON A. MARTIN

Based on Pulitzer Prize winning correspondent Sydney Schanberg's 1980 article for The New York Times Magazine, "The Death and Life of Dith Pran," "The Killing Fields" stars Sam Waterston as Sydney Schanberg and Haing S. Ngor as Dith Pran.

Schanberg, now a columnist and formerly metropolitan editor of The New York Times -- went to Cambodia in 1972 as The Times correspondent to cover the growing war between the country's revolutionary Khmer Rouge and the Lon Nol government. His assistant was Cambodian born Dith Pran, and the two soon became inseparable as their friendship and professional relationship blossomed under the rigors of covering an increasingly brutal war. To Schanberg, Pran was indispensable and as an interpreter, troubleshooter, reporter and friend there was no equal. But when the victorious Khmer Rouge troops entered the capital city of Phnom Penh on April 17, 1975, their lives would change forever.

Pran saved not only Schanberg's life that day but several other foreign correspondents as well, claiming that they were all neutral French journalists. When the Khmer Rouge ordered all Cambodians out of the cities, and into the countryside Schanberg and the others could do nothing for their friend. Dith Pran disappeared into the countryside and all foreign correspondents were ordered out of the country.

Schanberg, who disregarded his editor's pleas to leave Phnom Penh and remained in the city to cover the Khmer Rouge takeover, won a Pulitzer Prize for "international reporting at great risk", as well as numerous other awards.

But Schanberg's guilt and anguish over his friend's fate would not leave him. What had happened to Pran after he left? Could he possibly survive the death camp that had become Cambodia?

"The Killing Fields" is intense and dramatic. It is as if one man took a camera on his shoulder and filmed the war as it happened. The entire movie has a self-composed look to it. The look however, is not of Hollywood. That's why "The Killing Fields" is different. It brings to the screen an intensely personal story of friendship and survival amidst the torment of war. Basically, it is a love story of two men that have come to rely on each other in life and death situations. And what is unique is that the movie comes across that way. It doesn't seem to have been staged or deliberate.

TALK AT THE ROCK & TALK

The band was awful, however people did seem to be having a good time at last Friday's Rock & Talk. One common complaint I did hear was that there weren't enough girls. Ironically, the girls didn't seem to see it that way! Bonnie Burnett of Sec. Arts, for instance, cried "More men -- we're from Westwood! We get lonely!" Maybe it wasn't such a good idea to move the secretaries out!

There were some novel ideas for improving the R & T's though. Craig Somers of Earth Resources wanted strippers, while Steve Smith, a Marketing student, wanted free cocaine. (Being a student, maybe he should get together with Premier Hatfield!

When I questioned students about Hatfield's guilt, I got an even split. However, when I asked them whether Dave Semenko should have made the All-Star Team, I got a resounding NO. Bob Ford, an Instrumentation student, compared him to another by responding "Should Dave Hunter have made the All-Star Team? Not likely!" Sammy's teammate Wayne received a better reception though. Regardless what Steve Fonyo might have said, NAIT students such as Anne-Marie Rinky Frere, of Combined Lab and X-Ray, felt that Gretzky is just called a wimp because people are jealous of him. Some did disagree though. Clint Kratky of first yr. Bus. felt that it depended on who Gretzky was playing against. Al Symborski, a second yr. Bus. student who actually tapes anti-Gretzky articles to his fridge, was not available for comment. However, he is always ready to debate the issue at the drop of a puck!

In general, the students I interviewed thought the Nugget was quite good & informative. However, Sherri Pelletier of X-Ray Tech felt that it was "kinda boring." Malcolm Bennett of Pre-Tech felt that the Nugget needed more contributions from other techs than Business. This is a valid point, and I would like to encourage anybody from any tech to contribute to the Nugget. Remember, it's your paper!

Angela Geweth, a Darling D.A., would like to spend a Valentine's Day with a gorgeous guy on a scorching beach. Linda Knievel, a very, very lucky Court Reporting student, reported that she had already received the perfect Valentine's Day. It was dinner for 2, a dozen red roses, and the rest of the evening alone. . . On a somewhat more carnal note, Hydro Carbon student Marcel Lapointe wanted to make love all day with 4 girls (3 blondes and a black) who had "bodacious tatas." He's almost as greedy as Bonnie from Secretarial! Maybe he should call Scheme-A-Dream!

Glenn A. Mason

P.S. I would like to apologize to Guy St. Arnaud of Bio Sc. for my last article. He does not favor nor approve of homosexuals. I did not intend for it to appear that way. Sorry Guy.

BILL GRIMBLE

You wanna know what's wrong with the world? Eight-track tapes. Who invented these things? They look like they were made by Fisher-Price toys for kids who have trouble manipulating small objects.

And who is buying them? Everytime I see a TV ad for "Boxcar Willie's Greatest Hits" or "Elmer Fudd Sings the Songs You Like to Breathe Heavily To" they always sell albums, cassettes, and eight-tracks. Hmmm.

Let's take a look at a typical eight-track buyer; he probably owns a video disc player, a record turntable that only plays 45's, goes bowling on weekends, and goes out afterwards to a little place like the Driftwood Room in the Chuckwagon Motor Hotel. I'll even be willing to bet there's a tent trailer parked out back of his green-and-beige split-level bungalow, and an old Black and Decker saw with a dado blade assembly that hasn't seen the light of day since Christmas of 1961 hiding under a pile of old Popular Science magazines out in the still-unfinished garage. And what's more, he probably named his cat Garfield or Budweiser.

Nuff said on that. Let's move on. First, I have a tip for you- never put money into a machine that doesn't give you anything back. I'm talking about those "Check Your Heart Rate" machines they put in drugstores. (Somebody told me they have them at spas, too, but how would I know about that?) Look - you put your money in the machine, stick your finger in the little slot, and after a few terribly unimpressive seconds of beeps and flashing lights that any video game would put to shame, it gives you some random number based on your heart rate. Bull. I tried it once, and I know for a fact that I'm in just as good shape as I was twenty years ago. The thing actually just does a calculation based on how warm your finger is. Give these machines the finger and pass 'em up.

The other machine I'm talking about is those breathalyzer machines in bars. You blow into this sucker with a straw and for fifty cents it tells you how crooked you are. I tell ya, if you walked in there cold sober, sniffed a beer and blew into the machine, it would say you were impaired. You could glance at a Molson's ad, blow into the machine - impaired again! Don't bother - let your friend drive you home anyway. What're you going to do when the cop pulls over - hand him the straw and say the machine in the bar said you were okay? Forget it.

When you put your money into a coffee machine, you get something for your money. (If you don't, the machine deserves everything it gets.) Putting your hard-earned student loan into a machine that gives you nothing but beeps, flashes and a truckload of guilt is just plain stupid.

Now get outa here. I'm goin' over to the tavern and play electronic poker.

OOKS GOING FOR THE RECORD!

The NAIT Oaks moved one step closer to accomplishing something no other ACAC hockey team has done before this past weekend. No hockey team in ACAC history has gone undefeated in regular season play, and NAIT is just one weekend away from possibly changing the record books. On Sunday, February 17th, the NAIT Oaks overpowered the Mount Royal College Cougars 8-3 at the NAIT Arena.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 17TH -- NAIT OOKS 8, MOUNT ROYAL COUGARS 3 AT NAIT ARENA

The NAIT Oaks won their 49th consecutive match against ACAC rivals on Sunday, February 17th at the NAIT Arena with an 8-3 win over the Mount Royal College Cougars.

Gary Haddon of the Oaks opened the scoring with his 11th goal of the season from Sid Cranston and Hugh McCaskill at 1:30 of the first. The Mount Royal powerplay tied the game at the 6:15 mark as Dan Anderson found the net. The Cougars acquired a 2-1 advantage at 11:30 of the first with Brad Davis's marker. Randy Repchuk returned to the NAIT line-up as he evened the terms at 2-2 on a play with Garth Hayes and Don Simpson.

At 9:02 in the second frame, Murray Melnyk's 12th tally of the season placed NAIT in front 3-2. Cleo Rowen and Kevin Imrie assisted on the play. Mike Spencer's slapshot with 11:28 gone in the stanza increased NAIT's lead to 4-2. Ross Kenny tallied his 10th of the season one minute and 54 seconds later gave NAIT a three goal cushion from Scott Melnyk and Gary Haddon. Ted Materi pulled the Cougars to within two at the 15:52 mark. Ross Kenny then reinstated NAIT's three goal lead a short 37 seconds later on a Don Simpson set-up.

Kevin Imrie netted his 7th goal of the campaign from Mark Schultz with 3:49 passed in the third period. Scott Melnyk and Gary Haddon then helped out on Ross Kenny's third goal of the game at the 9:40 mark. Kenny now has 12 goals on the season.

ON THE BENCH: The NAIT Oaks are ranked no. 1 in the country for the fifth week in a row sporting a 23 and 0 record in the ACAC. Red Deer, Camrose and SAIT have also qualified for the playoffs, but the post-season match-ups have not yet been decided in the closest playoff race ever. Only two points separate the three teams. Depending on this week's action, any of the three teams could finish fourth, third, or second. . . . NAIT defenceman Tom Tookey is listed as doubtful for this week's play. . . . The Oaks close out the regular season with two home games at the NAIT Arena. The Oaks entertain the Red Deer College Kings (13-7-2) on Saturday in a 7:30 pm match-up. The Oaks conclude the regular season on Sunday when they face SAIT (12-9-2) at 2:00 pm. History is in the making. One of the best teams in ACAC history will attempt to complete an undefeated season. Be there to see it happen. Remember, admission to NAIT hockey games is free to students and staff with their NAIT I.D. Card.

THE "C" STANDS FOR CHAMPS!!

Last Thursday's Men's Intramural Hockey final was a killer. The championship was decided in an entertaining display of hockey dexterity. In the first period it was all Hydro-carbon. The carbonites drew first blood, and they didn't waste any time doing it either. Just 2 minutes into the game Darren Starchuck stuffed one past a bewildered Gerald Kottkey. Marketing "C" didn't look too sharp in the first 20 minutes of hockey. About 3 minutes after Hydro-carbon's first goal, Lonnie Mudryk found a hole and scored to put the carbonites up two to nothing.

For the first part of the second period, Hydro-carbon dominated the play. They had mega-opportunities on Marketing goaltender Kottkey, who had to be sharp between the pipes. With quick reflexes and a desire not to sieve-out he kept Marketing "C" in the game. It looked like it was all over but the crying for the BAS Reps. but in the last 10 minutes (stop-time) of the game the mighty Marketing "C" managed to mount an almost impossible comeback.

At about 9 minutes into the second period Bart Paterson, on a power play put Marketing "C" back into the game. The X-Maple Leaf must have had an extra helping of "Pro-Stars" that night, as he went on to score 3 more goals to put Marketing u 4 to 2.

Paterson's first goal was the spark that set Marketing "C" afire. They shut-out the sharp shooters of Hydro-carbon in the second period and with an empty netter from Wylie Simmonds went on to defeat Hydro-carbon 5 to 2.

"WHAT A RACQUET"

The NAIT Racquetball Team travelled to Calgary for the ACAC Racquetball Championships that were hosted at SAIT this past weekend.

Tim Filtz of Accounting and Doug Christman also of Accounting combined to win the Doubles Championship. They were undefeated in the round-robin play. Honourable mention must go to Gavin Rayne of Hydrocarbon who made it to the finals of the Men's Singles championship. He lost two very close opening games 11-10 and 11-10. Had he these two games the match may well have gone his way.

Chris Chartrand an Architecture student won the Women's Singles consolation final and Brian Goyuen won the Men's Singles consolation final. Runners up in the Women's Doubles event were Sandy Bishop and Marna Pratt.

Congratulations to all the members of the NAIT Racquetball Team for giving their best at this championship.

BASKETBALL

Well, like it or not, the season's over for our Oaks. They have 2 games left, but all they can do is play out the string.

Over the weekend they dropped games to Mount Royal College and SAIT, bringing their record to 6 & 10. The SAIT team annihilated the Oaks 84-46, while MRC managed to earn an 84-70 decision.

Although the order of finish has not yet been determined the teams that are advancing have been. Congratulations and good luck to Lethbridge, SAIT, Medicine Hat and Grant MacEwan.

Once again the reason for the poor showing comes down to poor shooting. The Oaks shot 31 & 32 per cent from the floor while the opposition shot 45 & 41 per cent. From the line NAIT shot 59 & 65 per cent while the opposition shot 76 & 95 per cent.

Recruiting has begun for next year's team and Dave Hoyahs told me that they've been talking to a few promising player's, including a 7 footer. The problem is you don't always get who you recruit. This year there were six different players recruited and registered who didn't play for us. Five of them didn't come at all, and the other came to classes, but didn't bother to try out for the team.

So, this year's over and it's much too early to speculate about next year. Thanks and good luck to all the members of both the Oaks and Chicks basketball teams, and thanks to you for paying attention.

B. Snow
