The Same Only Different

By Brian McCullough
Assistant Editor

Recently, a group to which I belong has had some comment about a reorganization that took place within it.

This group, IFNA, is an international association which is organized without much regard for borders, but with more regard for population and ease of communication. Therefore, in areas like North America there are sections of this association that cross the Canadian-American border.

The association is divided into groups that exist on a generally regional level, which are subdivided into city or area level groups.

Well, to make a long story longer, one of these regions, Region 11, which covered Northern New York State, Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec, decided to divide into two new regions because of size, and split along the Canadian / American border. The region that covers Alberta was approached about this possibility as well, but soundly rejected any split and I want to discuss the reasons.

Region 17 consists of the provinces of Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, and the states of Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and Alaska. It is known also as the Pacific North West and seems to have a regional flavour all its own. Each of the members of Region 17 who expressed an opinion, and most who didn't, feel that the border is an artificial entity in this part of the world, and that we are more similar than different. Although those of us north of the border are Canadians and have some quite strong feelings about that fact, and those south of the border are Americans and have similar feelings about their country, we all are residents of the west, and have a common bond because of that.

In North America there seems to be as much difference from East to West as from North to South, at least here in the West. We contribute to each other in different ways, and although some of us would never live on the other side of that artificial border, we also treasure the friendships that we have formed on either side of it.

NAIT is an internationally recognized institution, respected around this continent, and you may find that you are asked to move to find work. You will find that two things are useful to remember. Although you may not want to live in the United States, you may still find lasting, useful friendships there, and you will find that no matter where you go, even in Ontario, people are generally decent, nice human beings.

Do We Deserve Another Cup?

By Peter Wilkinson
Nugget Editor

Just imagine this. You are enrolled at NAIT for a two year program, the first of which you have just completed very successfully. You have pulled off some awesome honors marks, your project or paper was revered as the best in the program. You have qualified for scholarships left and right, and everyone in your immediate association (friends and family) heap glowing praises your way constantly. As you work and/or play during the summer break, people call you and wish you all the best for the upcoming semester, and you even do some extra work to make the transition to next term a little easier.

However, last semester was last semester, and the curriculum has increased both in difficulty and amount. So much is the dichotomy, that you score an unthinkable (gasp!) 65% on your first test of the year. Suddenly the praises and accolades stop. Your family and friends, once your dearest and most trusted fans, turn against you, and declare that you are washed up, unfit to attend NAIT. They even go so far as to criticize your once "good" tests as just a flash in the pan, glimmers of the former glory. Worse, they declare, with heavy sighs, that you will NEVER win another scholarship and that you are a failure.

This little story is exactly the way the Edmonton Oilers have been thought of and treated in this city since last May. The family and friends are you and I, those who cheered for the greatest hockey club in the world as they skated to a hard-fought third Stanley Cup in four years. I know there are some fans out there still. You don't fill Commonwealth Stadium, Churchill Square and Jasper Avenue with dead air for those three years, but this year Edmonton hockey fans have become like dead air.

Granted a certain percentage have migrated, either in body or spirit, to other hockey locales. You see several about town with (especially) red jerseys. That is their prerogative, but those of us non-hypocrites ought to stick to our guns, right? Apparently, with the defeatist attitude surrounding Edmonton regarding the Oilers, I truly wonder if we have gone to sleep, or we just don't care anymore.

So what that a hockey team with no style and inferior playmaking ability might win the Stanley Cup this year. Who cares that Edmonton will become the laughing stock of Canada, with our teams being known as hailing from DEADmonton, a reflection of our fans? Who gives a sh*t that historians will blame an Oiler loss of the Cup this year to "fan apathy?"

What we need to do is get behind a team and an organization that has brought more tourism, notoriety and plain fun to this city for the last decade. If all the remaining Oiler fans in this city (even those now in hiding) come out and show everyone, in your own way, that you still support your team, then we will truly demonstrate we are a City Of Champions.

I don't know how far the Oilers will go in this year's Stanley Cup playoffs, I am not a fortune teller. But I do know that when Edmonton fans sport their true colours, it won't matter what other cities or so-called experts say. Regardless of the outcome, WE WILL be victorious.

I'm dusting off my Oiler jersey; I'm going to need it for a local traditional parade in May.

Philosopher's Corner

By John Brownlee

Did you know that you may be violating copyright laws every time you photocopy an article from a magazine without permission from the publisher? While this statement may sound somewhat extreme given how commonplace this practice is, particularly amongst students, it is a valid one. (Some magazines even have fees, regulations and procedures for obtaining permission to photocopy their material printed on their inside covers.)

The law exists for a reason, of course, and its validity is acknowledged by NAIT in its Academic Regulations. Under COPYRIGHT-POLICY, GUIDELINES AND PROCEDURES, (D.6.1 Policy) it states:

"NAIT supports legislation related to Copyrights, Patents,

Trademarks and Industrial Design and does not sanction or authorize infringements or violations by NAIT Staff."

Under (D.6.2) guidelines it states:

1) Any reproduction, in any form, of copyright print or non-print works, patents, trademarks and industrial designs constitutes infringement or violation.

3) NAIT will make every attempt to facilitate the implementation of this policy.

We are all guilty of breaking this law on numerous occasions (and one could argue justifiably so, perhaps). What about more flagrant examples? I am referring to course materials given to students in the form of photocopied handouts. In one of my courses I have been given no fewer than 307 pages of these handouts (yes, I counted them). Only one of them contains any reference as to authorship. Few indicate their source or origin. Unless my understanding of the law is very flawed, I suspect this is both illegal and a violation of NAIT policy.

This is not a moot point. I think it is extremely important that educational authorities both acknowledge and identify their sources. Only by this means can students begin to evaluate the information they receive.

Is my evaluation a correct one? Is this situation common in other technologies? If so, is NAIT then simply unaware of it or choosing to ignore it? Perhaps now is a good time for NAIT to "make every attempt to facilitate the implementation of their own policy."

Beast In The System

By Phil Anon.

There I was, standing in the hall talking with some friends, when I saw her. The Perfect Woman. My tongue hit the floor (I'm sure this has happened to you women too, when you see the Man of Your Dreams). I started to follow her, but stopped. I could have followed her around all day, just drinking in her beauty, but practicality would not permit this. I'm married, and I have ethics. But this little experience began to reveal a perception that had been developing in the back of my mind for a long time.

When my tongue hit the floor, I was really expressing my appreciation. I was saying, "Now there is beauty. That is real Quality." I thought about this, and my mind turned to the classroom. When school began I was enthused, ready to learn. I wanted to prove to the world that I was worthy of a vocation on the merit of my ability to apply acquired knowledge and skills. There was a certain attraction to knowledge and skill that gave me a desire for it. That attraction is still there, and I'm still following it, but not in the classroom. Classes are ugly, and I believe I know why.

It seems a great number of instructors, and their superiors, have never taken the time to examine the true nature of their vocation. Teaching is a job that makes some money and provides various other benefits that are valued differently by each individual. But there is much more to it than that. There is a higher goal. If he loses sight of it (or, God forbid, doesn't even know what it is) a common phenomenon occurs. They take on the same characteristics as a contentious wife: "If you don't take out the garbage, you won't get any..." Or, more appropriately, "This is what we're doing. If you don't think like I do (and therefore do as I do) when you do what I ask, you fail." And they'll defend their position out of a poorly directed sense of responsibility, or some kind of self-righteous indignation.

This type of attitude is an atrocious lie. It is not the doing that constitutes success or failure as much as it is the learning. Let me explain. Failure or success is never the result of methodology. It is the result of true learning (or lack of). Learning, by my definition, is the process of assimilating observed relationships and the subsequent results from which conclusions may be drawn about other relationships. If Quality observations, and Quality assimilations are made, then Quality methodology and applications become apparent on their own. This is learning, and it's what should be taught. However, practicality does not permit this. True learning is too time consuming, and our educators (seemingly) couldn't care less. What they really seem to want is for you to mimic what you should be learning. As long as the class average is O.K., who cares? You should! Such attitudes transform us from living, growing, thinking entities into little humans that are programmed to imitate. It's a very thin veneer over a faulty structure. It's easy to see through, and it's ugly. It's low quality. People dislike it.

That is why I don't go to class much anymore. I prefer to spend my time in Quality Learning as opposed to memorizing methodology. True learning is enjoyable. It's something you instinctively seek out. It is...well...it's beautiful. One may not use the "right" format, or the "right" methods. Exams may point out some of the course concepts have been overlooked. But if you're really learning, you know why you're doing what you do. And if you stumble onto something you've never seen before, you can derive how to do it from the concepts and mental processes you've acquired. For those who have discovered this, it puts them light-years ahead of those who have sacrificed their minds and their futures by forsaking the substance of education for its form.

I'm not trying to point fingers or lay blame. The fact is that the educational system, as honorable as its goal is, lends itself to such apathetic abuses. If you really understand that, the source of a great many problems, not only at NAIT but within our North American society, becomes apparent. Our educational system encourages the substitution of awareness (resulting from the rational process of true higher learning) for the ignorance of better mimicry. It's ugly low quality, and it affects every area of life and society that it touches.

Quality needs to re-enter the classroom, and I'll be damned if I'll spend any more time in there than I have to until it does.

By Lily St. Germain

The days are getting warmer and not only are the colors we're wearing getting brighter but we're not as heavily clothed as we were in the winter months just "bearly" past.

With all that comes the dilemma for most of us as to how to hide those extra pounds. Spring is nearly done and summer almost upon us--the "more skin, think thin" season.

But why hide those extra pounds when you could feel better by ridding yourself of them altogether? (No, people, this is NOT a Richard Simmons commercial).

What you need, first of all, is a lot of common sense, a new food attitude, and more gritting of the teeth (instead of chewing with them).

There's no such thing as a potentially slim and healthy body that can take overeating, bingeing, starving, prolonged stress, inactivity, overexercising, excessive cigarette, alcohol or drug abuse--or any combination of these. That's like saying there's such a thing as a free lunch. And as I mentioned before, wise men of centuries past have long since lowered the boom; there's no such thing as a free lunch.

No matter how you try to avoid that reality when it comes to good health, no matter how you try to beat the odds, no matter how much you say you don't care--in the end you'll have to find a consistent balance if you want to be healthy and happy.

We all like our bank statements to consistently and favorably balance and we all like our weigh scales to consistently and favorably balance--but before that can happen, our lifestyles have to consistently and favorably balance.

When it comes to losing those extra few pounds, for example, favorable and consistent balance equals the Canada Food Guide (common sense) and a new food attitude (proportional to exercise eating) coupled with a 1/2 hour daily aerobic exercise 15 to 20 minutes, three times per week (determined gritting of the teeth).

As with anything else, balance takes time and tailoring. It doesn't happen all by itself, it doesn't happen overnight, it doesn't happen easily--but once achieved, it can happen forever.

You have only one body. If it breaks down at any level, you can't trade it in for a new one. That body's yours--for life.

So take care of it by eating and exercising right. There's lots of options for exercise at NAIT; NAIT has excellent facilities and if you're a full-time student, they're yours for the booking. Running, swimming, squash, basketball, volleyball, badminton, racquetball, hydra-gym, soccer, aerobics, football, rugby, hockey--you name it.

If you want not only to look good but to feel good for the summer months TAKE TIME to get active. Good is where the action is!

David is dying of cancer and he has a dream. He'd like to be remembered in the Guinness World Book of Records as the person who received the most picture postcards.

So send a post card to David, c/o Miss McWilliams, St. Martin de Porres Infant School, Luton, Bedfordshire, England.

Dear Editor:

I would like to congratulate the Oiler Loyalists for their continual support of their, and my, favorite team. It is refreshing to see so many anti-Oiler individuals take a righteous indignant stance toward the articulate and thoughtful points brought forth by the Loyalists.

My only question to the President or Leader of the Loyalists is: How do I join? I have been searching the halls looking for a poster or a cabaret from you guys, but I can't seem to find any trace outside of the Nugget. Is there a way we can get in contact?

To the Editor, please keep publishing the comments from the Loyalists; they make the Litter Box a joy to read.

NAIT's New Licensed Lounge

The Historic Agreement

On March 23, 1988, an agreement between NAITSA and the NAIT Board of Governors was signed. This agreement outlines the principles by which the licensed lounge will operate. Basically, in return for NAITSA's $250,000 donation to NAIT for the renovations, we get the right to operate the lounge as a business. The Board will hold the Institutional liquor licence and NAITSA must therefore agree to operate the lounge in a professional and responsible manner. Following are a few of the 51 principles outlined in the agreement.

Preamble:

In consideration of NAITSA donating two hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($250) towards the capital cost of a renovation to the NAIT Activities Centre, including an area to be designated as a licensed lounge, the Board agrees to grant NAITSA a license to occupy and operate such lounge.

Ownership:

The Board is the registered owner of the premises in which the lounge will be located.

Security:

The Board is responsible for the overall security of the campus, however, NAITSA shall provide at its expense such level and form of security as the Board deems necessary for the operation of the lounge.

Profit/Loss:

NAITSA shall be entitled to all profits and be liable for all losses.

Users (Day to Day Operation):

Upon presentation of identification NAIT population and their respective guests shall be entitled to use the lounge.

Beverage Service:

The Board shall use its best effort to obtain from the A.L.C.B. and maintain in force for the duration of the license hereunder an Institute License for the sale and consumption of alcoholic beverages including wine, beer, and liquor in the lounge.

If you're drinking, who's driving?

Lounge Operations

- Full time staff will be hired by NAITSA to operate the lounge as a NAITSA business, much the same way the NAITSA store operates.
- Alcohol awareness will be a priority for the operation of the lounge.
- The lounge will have a self-contained kitchen serving such food as hamburgers, chicken fingers, and spud skins.
- The lounge will employ students as part-time waiters and waitresses.
- Hours of operation are yet to be decided, but most likely the lounge will open around noon for food service and study space, with beverage service beginning at around 3:30 or 4:00 p.m. on weekdays.

Consumption will continue until around 11:00 p.m. on weekdays and 1:00 a.m. on weekends.

Entertainment for the lounge will be large screen TV's, an occasional comedian, and whatever else NAITSA can dream up.

Capacity is approximately 130 persons. The lounge includes a raised area, (upper right corner) and a full service bar with stools.

NAIT Students Get Their Wish

NAIT's new licensed lounge will offer the NAIT community a relaxed social atmosphere where good food and drink will be available. Open to students, alumni holding privilege cards, and NAIT and NAITSA staff, the lounge will help complete NAIT's well rounded personality. This past year, NAITSA has been involved in ongoing discussions and planning with NAIT related to the design and implementation of the lounge. The entire project, which also includes new instructional space and new offices for NAIT's athletic staff, is slated for completion in August of '88. Located on the main level of the Activities Center, the newly renovated area will make better use of existing facilities.

Announcing-- "The Name The Lounge Contest"

Here's your chance to make your mark in history, and win $50 hard cash! Submit your suggestions for a name of NAIT's new licensed lounge. Serious submissions only. Submissions will be screened and a decision made by NAITSA General Council. The lounge name is also subject to approval by the NAIT Board of Governors. Submit names to:

President, NAIT Student Association, Room E134, Main Campus, with phone number, name, and program.

NAITSA President Gord Matthew and NAIT President Dr. Stan Souch sign the historic agreement.

Where's The Money Coming From?

The entire cost of the activities center renovation, including the licensed lounge, will approach $750,000. The lounge itself should cost approximately $500,000.

The cheque you see below was written by NAITSA and The cheque you see below was written by NAITSA and presented to the NAIT Foundation, who will get it matched one for one by the Alberta Government's Advanced Education Endowment Fund. NAIT will make up the remaining cost, approximately $250,000. So thank you NAIT Foundation!

Attention All Business Students

By Lorraine Butchart
President, AMS

Are you interested in developing a network of business contacts while you are still at NAIT?

Are you returning to NAIT in the fall?

If you answered yes to both of these questions, here is an opportunity you should consider.

The Administrative Management Society is now taking nominations for 1988/89 executive positions. These positions are the following:

President
Vice-President
Treasurer
Secretary
Publicity Director

Working on the AMS executive will provide you with exciting opportunities to meet and get to know members of Edmonton's professional and business communities on an informal social basis. As well, you will have the chance to hear interesting and informative guest speakers at the monthly dinner meetings held by the senior chapter in conjunction with the NAIT chapter. In the past, some of these have included Terry Cavanagh, former Mayor of Edmonton; Bettie Hughes, M.L.A. and former Alderman on Edmonton's City Council; and Hon. David Russell, Deputy Premier and Minister of Advanced Education.

Members of the AMS executive also benefit from increased contacts with other Business students. So do yourself and your classmates a favour, and stop in at the office (T605A) to discuss this opportunity. You won't regret it!

Time Capsule Time

Take the time, help preserve our times. Twenty-five years down the road a Time Capsule will be opened by the students of the year 2013.

NAIT Graduating students are making this gift to the students of the future. Your help is required in suggesting the contents of this capsule. It is suggested that approximate size of the articles shall be 64 cubic inches (4" x 4" x 4"), this will allow numerous items to be inserted in the capsule.

Come to the NAITSA office with your suggestions.

Thank you

Numbers Next Week

With the way the dates of the student government elections and the printing of this paper correlated, there was no way for us to print results of the campaign race.

This paper went to press the same time a few of us would have been voting.

The reason I stated "a few of us" is because the voting last year was recorded at 12% of attending students.

Hopefully, this year's figures will be higher. We will all know by this time next week.

Life In The Fast Lane

By Brian McCullough

You may remember three weeks ago when I wrote a story on how we make a Nugget. At the time, I neglected to put arrows on the page to properly show the order of processes. Well, last week was another like that. If it was not quite so important it would have been funny.

Due to various misadventures, candidates' pictures were mixed up, stories were lost or altered and titles misplaced. However, due to the quick work of our printer, and quick eyes and hands of staff, we were able to correct the errors and re-print the papers for distribution only one day late. As it was, what you saw was a much improved Nugget last week, and the first version of that issue has gone for recycling.

I wish to thank the people responsible for the quick response to our problem: Jay Jones, Tony Rivard, Brian Stein and especially Peter Wilkinson of the Nugget.

Gearing Down!

Twenty six issues of "The Nugget" yearly. You have in your hands the 24th.

The reason for relaying that information is twofold. Firstly, I want to tell you all that your opportunity to use this publication is drawing near to a close. Secondly, I would like to warn all those not aware of "The Fuggit."

So get those submissions in. One serious issue remaining, then FUGGIT.

A Good Way To Die

By Peter Wilkinson

One of the things I miss about some of the old classic films is the ability of an actor to deliver an effective line. Some argue that writers don't compose effective lines anymore, but that is BS. A good actor can read aloud a car manual and make it sound dramatic. Mathew Broderick in his latest, Biloxi Blues, is one of the few actors left that can deliver a good line.

The story is somewhat of a continuation of Neil Simon's Brighton Beach Memoirs, with Broderick going off to a military training camp in 1945. Christopher Walken is a very eccentric, almost psychotic, drill sergeant that has a mean streak for the articulate and intelligent Broderick. Walken's role is similar to that of Zorin in A View To A Kill, except this character displays more emotion than expected.

As characteristic to all Broderick films, we see the protagonist caught in an absurd situation that he wishes desperately to get out of, but later realizes he has fond memories about. This movie is more an exploration into the way boys used to become men, before the influence of television or "peace," and it is done with style and a very unpredictable flair. One of the many memorable scenes comes when Broderick is about to lose his virginity in the apartment of a caring and down to earth hooker.

The only criticism I have is that you may end up with a terminal case of laugh fatigue. What a way to go! ★★★★★

Back To Beulah Is Great!

Like I told you last time we met here, I was going to go to a play called Back To Beulah. It was the first live play I'd ever been to.

As I'm sure you gathered from last issue, I didn't know what to expect. As I entered the Citadel (a rather forboding cultural institute) I couldn't help but think it looked more like a business conference or a fashion show for the best dressed business men and women of '88.

I sat down in a very comfortable seat, kind of like the ones at the Paramount movie theatre. Then the lights went down and the show (play) started.

Back to Beulah is a story about three not altogether "stable" women that are living in a half-way house. These three are one step away from going back to Beulah (the nut house). It's a story about how these three deal with the unusual opportunity of putting their case worker in their shoes. The unofficial leader of the group acts the part of the case worker and puts the real case worker "through the ringer."

I don't know much about W.O. Mitchell's work (okay, anything), but if this is any example of what he does he just got a new fan. Back to Beulah runs till April 17th and if you can go to it, I'd strongly recommend it. It's Hilarious!

Canadiana

Jim Keelahan and Stephen Ferring were at the Howlin' Wolf Club last week playing their Canadian folk style of music to a small but enthusiastic group of fans.

Now I'm not an expert on folk music and I don't claim to know which end is up in the folk music world. What I do know is what I like, and in my opinion Stephen Ferring is one "hot" guitar player. Stephen's unusual style coupled with his Irish ethnic background give his guitar a sound that I've not heard before and I must say I liked it.

Jim Keelahan and his Canadian style of folk music is probably well respected in the folk world; unfortunately, it's not my cup of tea. For those of you that enjoy folk music you may be interested to know that the session was taped and will be airing on CBC Saturday morning on Simply Folk.

Even if you don't consider yourself a folk fan, I'd suggest that you give a listen to some of Ferring's work. Both artist's records are available at either Student Union Records in the Hub Mall or at Sound Connection.

Gimme A Break Fan Mail

To Dave Hanson:

Your incredible lack of couth amazes me. You have singled me out of my technology and addressed me on the fact that Esmeralda's ran out of beer at the Geosciences cabaret. You could have at least spelled my name properly.

I would like to inform you that 11 kegs of beer were consumed. One hundred fifty tickets were purchased; therefore, each ticket holder theoretically drank 1.155 gallons of beer for $10. Esmeralda's entire stock of draft was wiped out before the end of the draft deadline set for that particular event.

As of yet I have failed to see you single out another event organizer and personally blame him or her for running out of alcohol. I have been to other technology cabarets which have run out of alcohol and no one has come crying out publically in the Nugget to advertise that fact.

Next time, before you have the audacity to single out another student, have the guts to face them and verify the accuracy of your so-called facts before printing them.

If blame is to be centered on someone, the individuals who were passing full glasses of beer to persons who did not purchase a ticket should be addressed.

More Tastefully Yours
Jody Comeau

Dear Dave Hanson:

I am the president of the Geosciences' Exploration Club and I speak on behalf of the club. As a staff member of the Nugget you of all people should know better than to write an irresponsible article as you did in the March 24 Nugget. We freely admit that our cabaret at Esmeralda's was not the success we had hoped for, but as was mentioned, these were circumstances beyond our control.

So fine, slander the Exploration Club or the persons involved, that's your right, but at least investigate your stories further; don't just use the first name that comes up.

In closing, we the Exploration Club demand a written apology to the individual who was the butt of your last article.

Chuck Haines
Exploration Club

Dear Jody:

You have my most sincere apologies for spelling your name wrong. Also, I'd like to apologize for not consulting you before printing the column.

Dear Mr. Haines:

Slander as defined by Webster's is as follows: slander (slan' der) n. a false or malicious report; verbal defamation. vt. to defame or calumniate.

By this definition I am not guilty of slander. Because I made no false statement and there was no malicious intent on my part.

If you will recall the only "facts" that I printed are:

1. I went to the cabaret
2. The cabaret was advertised as "ALL THE SUDS YOU CAN DO FROM 9 TILL 2."
3. The advertised promise was not kept!

The other things I printed were a mere question and a suggestion for future endeavours Jody may be involved in.

Thank you both for your input to this week's entertainment section.

What's Happenin'

Well campers, as we embark on another weekend I will make yet another pitiful attempt to answer that musical question: "What the hell is there to do in this town?"

"BACK TO BEULAH" is still at the Citadel in the Shoctor Theatre. This is one great show, a very enjoyable experience. If you've never been to a live play, this is an exceptional way to introduce yourself to the world of live entertainment. For more information call the Citadel for show times and cost.

"THE ROAD TO MECCA" is playing in the Rice Theater in the Citadel. I'm not sure about this one, but the promo material I've received seems to say this could be another good one. Shows go from now till May 1st.

"RATTLE IN THE DASH" is at the Phoenix Theatre downtown. This one seems to be a story of one of man's most feverish pursuits...women. Six dollars a ticket, show times Wednesday through Sunday at 8:00 p.m. Remember, pay what you can Sundays, especially for us broke folks.

Okay, Okay, enough culture -- here's the real reason you bother reading this amateur attempt at writing. The reason that you wake up and say to yourself, "Who used my head for a baseball last night?" Yes, you guessed it:

ALKIE-HAUL

The weekend looks kind of dead, but tonight there's all kinds of stuff going on.

The NAIT Rugby Club is putting on the SCRUM DOWN CABARET. Doors open at 8:00 p.m. and the cost of this drinking spree is $5 in advance or $7 at the door. The place is the U.N.F. Hall (10629-98th Street).

ROCK 'N TALK kicks off the long weekend in the cafeteria. The insanity starts at 4:30 p.m. and winds up at 7:30 p.m. -- just enough time to shower and hit another party!

MIET is having a "RIOT" at Park View hall tonight (9135-146 St). Tickets are available at the door for $6 or buy them in advance for $5. I guess the doors open at 8:00 p.m., but don't quote me on that.

Telecom "FOOLS NIGHT OUT" is goin' down at Esmeralda's tonight. These good people have shown their kindness to us broke students with a promise of $10 for all you can drink (suds that is). These brave people have challenged the heavy drinkers among us! Let's not disappoint them.

Plastics is having an "EASTER BUNNY BASH" at the Greenhouse in the Londonderry Mall on Saturday night (April 2). Tickets for this hoppy event are $3 and there is a $1.85 drink special from 8:00 p.m. till 9:30 p.m.

Chemical Technology presents their 3rd annual "HATS AND SHADES" party at Kilarney Hall (8720-130 A Ave) tonight (Thursday, March 31st). Tickets are $5 in advance or $6 at the door and are available at the Main Kiosk.

Now campers, I've got to go. Have a good weekend and remember, have a mission in life-party! See you next week.

Sports Comment

by Brian Stein,
Sports Editor

Although the Toronto Maple Leafs may make the playoffs, the image of the Leafs has tarnished considerably in the past 20 years. The Leafs were once a proud, winning hockey club. Today, the Leafs are no more than league doormats.

The fall of the Leafs from grace can be attributed in large part to Harold Ballard. Unlike a good owner, Ballard has a tendency to move in and make the changes himself instead of letting his general manager make the decisions.

Ballard's eagerness to run the team has often done more harm than good. The coach of the Toronto Maple Leafs not only has to deal with his general manager, but with Ballard. Subsequently, a coach may not be able to do what he was hired to do--coach.

The Leafs have let a number of great players slip through their hands in the past few years. Randy Carlyle, the former Norris winner, is now the leader of the Winnipeg Jets blueline corp. Lanny MacDonald, the former Masterdon winner, is providing leadership both on and off the ice for the Calgary Flames.

The fact the Leafs play in the weakest NHL division, the Norris, has not helped matters. With teams like St. Louis, Chicago, and Minnesota in the division, the Leafs do not need as many points to make the playoffs as teams in other divisions do. This season, the fourth place team in the Norris will have considerably less points than New Jersey in the Patrick. As a result, there is little incentive for the Leafs to improve.

For the Leafs to become contenders instead of pretenders, a number of changes must take place.

Harold Ballard should seriously consider giving greater control of hockey operations to his general manager when he hires one. The Leafs must look ahead to the future and draft individuals who will make the team better. The Leafs must also trade for talent and leadership without losing the mortgage.

The Leafs can be great again. The question is "How long will it take?"

NAIT Gold At Curling Nationals

At the Canadian Colleges Athletic Association (National) Curling Championships in Medicine Hat, the Sherry Lothian foursome from NAIT captured gold on Saturday, March 26.

The Lothian rink scored a 6-5 victory over Sheila Calcutt of Saskatchewan to cap a dramatic comeback in the women's event.

The NAIT team lost their first three games in the round-robin, but won the fourth to move into a three way tie for the last playoff spot. On Friday, NAIT won two games to move into the semi-final against Angela Goddard of Medicine Hat. The Lothian foursome scored an 8-1 victory and moved into the final against the Calcutt rink from Moose Jaw's Saskatchewan Technical Institute.

Full House For NAIT All City

Over 400 spectators were at the NAIT Gym on Wednesday, March 23rd to view the ninth annual All-City Basketball Classic.

In high school boy's action, Edmonton North downed Edmonton South 87-61. Colin Walters with 22 points and Colin Russell with 12 points spurred the North attack. Howie Molstad was the top scorer for the South with 16 points.

In high school girl's play, Edmonton South shaded Edmonton North 70-61. Allison Smith topped all scorers with 17 for the South.

Following each game the most valuable player awards were presented. Ross Sheppard's Colin Walters and Salisbury's Tracie Wilkie were named as most valuable players.

Road Racing

By John Reeves

On March 19 NAIT's Running Road Racing Team entered the exhibition ACAC Road Racing competition in Red Deer. NAIT finished second behind Red Deer in the closely matched race.

Red Deer finished with 11 points while NAIT obtained 14 points from their top three runners (Lower point totals are the winners).

Unfortunately only the two colleges entered the meet that saw 23 runners finish the 10 km race.

NAIT's crew included Osualdo Morales (3rd in 37:26), Willie Woods (5th in 38:03), Allan Scharff (6th in 38:09), Kevin Kisilevich (15th in 40:31), Wayne Pinel (18th in 41:37), Bruce Walgren (21st in 44:12), and Fred Noddin (22nd in 45:03).

The top two runners were from RDC, Danny Devine (36:44) and Kevin Graham (37:15), both were well above the track record of 33:00 set by Don Palm.

NAIT's two coaches also finished well with John Reeves in 10th (39:36) and Frank McNamara in 12th (39:48).

We are hoping to make Road Racing a regular spring ACAC event but without more college and Institute participation this will not come about.

NOTICE OF RETRACTION

Due to an overwhelming lack of response to the NAIT Royal Greens Mini-Golf Tournament, scheduled for this term, we are forced to cancel. We hope that next November will contain more enthusiasm. Details will be forthcoming and thanks to all those that did notice.
