Government Wants Seals Killed

By Julie Matthews

At the recent meeting of the Provincial fisheries ministers in Victoria there was unanimous agreement to ask Ottawa to help create new markets and promote the sale of seal products internationally.

The provincial fisheries ministers want the number of seals killed off the East Coast of Canada doubled to 100,000. It's an attempt to cut down the growing seal herds and to supply a growing market for pharmaceutical products that are extracted from the seals.

The hunt would only involve adult seals the hunt would only involve adult seals, not the pups. The controversial killing of seal pups in the past all but ended the sale of seal products a few years ago.

Dr. Hulan, Newfoundland Fisheries Minister says there are now between 5 million and 6 million harp seals around Newfoundland, a population that has been growing at an estimated rate of 500,000 a year. There's some debate and concern whether the seals have played a role in the decrease of the cod supply. Hulan believes the seals kill the fish only to eat the liver, which is high in the fatty acids they love.

seal is a valuable source of food and biomedical compounds," said Hulan.

Doubling the number of seals killed annually to 100,000 may seem like a lot but Hulan explains that even if the number was increased to 500,000 seal a year it would only hold the population stable.

The federal Dept. of Fisheries and Oceans currently allows for the hunting of 186,000 adult seals a year but over the last few years hunters have brought in less than 50,000 because of poor markets for seal meat and leather. Sealers blame them market on anti-sealing campaigns by groups such as the Fund for Animal Welfare.

Officials from the group say there's no reason to expand the seal hunt which is cruel and unnecessary in the first place.

Federal Fisheries Minister Brian Tolin says he supports the idea of an expanded hunt if markets can be found for the products.

The provincial fisheries ministers want the number of seals killed off the East Coast of Canada doubled to 100,000.

The demand for the medical compounds called Omega 3, found in seal blubber has been growing dramatically. Hulan who has researched the compounds says some of them sell for as much as $700 per milligram and they have been shown to reduce cholesterol and therefore help prevent hardening of the arteries.

However after the compounds are removed the rest of the carcass won't just be disposed of. "We are stressing that in any future commercial deal, the total carcass has to be used. The entire

Sexual Harassment & Lawyers

by Julie Matthews

Watching Street Legal, L.A. Law and other legal "soap operas" gives you an interesting look at the profession of a lawyer. Surprisingly enough a lot of what goes on in those shows reflects some measure of reality. But from now on there will be a line to separate the sexual harassment from the good-natured joking in the court room.

For the first time, guidelines on sexual harassment and discrimination are included in the new Code of Professional Conduct, which was formally passed by the Law Society of Alberta last week.

The updated 167 page code which comes into effect Jan. 1st, was five years in the making. It clarifies that sexual harassment and discrimination of any kind amount to conduct unbecoming a lawyer.

Four volunteers have been appointed by the law society to assist and advise lawyers about sexual harassment in the workplace. It's free and confidential. B.C. and Alberta are the only provinces to offer this service.

Forty Alberta lawyers have also come forward and volunteered to be consultants to go to law firms upon invitation, to discuss any equality-related problems. They'll be giving advice on how to get rid of the discrimination against female lawyers in particular.

enclosed women lawyers being subjected to unwanted sexual advances by other lawyers. "There's discrimination against women in the profession and what we're attempting to do is alleviate and eventually eliminate that discrimination", said Ged Haweo, chairman of the conduct committee.

Some problems include sexual harassment, a general failure to accommodate women with children and the difficulties of balancing a career and parenting.

Other

changes to the code include:

- modernizing advertising rules
- making conflict of interest rules more specific, including new rules dealing with the increased movement of lawyers among law firms. These rules are designed to protect clients.

Almost 1/3 of the women (31.5%) and 6.9% of men surveyed had observed or experienced women lawyers being subjected to unwanted sexual advances by other lawyers.

Two recent surveys of Alberta lawyers confirmed the suspicion that there are problems facing women in the legal profession. Almost 1/3 of the women (31.5%) and 6.9% of men surveyed had observed or experi-

GENERAL COUNCIL OPENS YOUR WALLET

By Neil Feser

The American Indian Science and Engineering Society (AISES) is holding its 15th annual general meeting and conference from November 10th - 13th in San Jose, California. Representing NAIT and the Aboriginal Students Club (ASC) at this conference will be 2nd year mechanical engineering student Steve Gold. Steve also happens to be the president of the ASC.

Over the past year Steve has been a volunteer with CASTS (Canadian Aboriginal Science and Technology Society). Through this group he made contact with AISES and was admitted to the conference in San Jose this year. The theme of this year's conference is "Weaving Tradition with Technology". The general mission of this meeting is to help promote the science and engineering field to native youth, through encouragement and student mentor support.

AISES

agreed to cover the cost of Steve's accommodations and food while attending, but he needed to arrange for his own airfare to and from California. After approaching NAITSA President Dean Andres with the idea of bringing this possible funding to General Council (GC), Steve met with a doubtful prospect. Though Dean didn't think GC would approve it, he approached the other NAITSA Executives and after discussing it, they decided to let Steve make his presentation to the council.

After a polished presentation and overall great information sharing, GC agreed to give Steve the $645 needed to cover his airfare to San Jose.

Now comes the problem with this whole scenario. This sets a dangerous precedent for future groups and clubs wishing to attend informational conferences, and do not have the funding with which to do so. It brings to mind the disastrous fiasco brought upon GC last year involving the Romanian Student Democracy.

For those of you who didn't hear all the facts about this incident last year, here it is in a nutshell. Ex-NAITSA President Dan Lachambre and a colleague from Red Deer College approached GC with a request for money to help them go to Romania to help a University there set up a student government. The debate as to whether or not to help these two gentlemen raged for months and covered such issues as what's in it for NAIT, how does this affect the student body and even how this presents Canada on a global scale as helping a third world country. Eventually after the dust settled, GC awarded Dan and his cohort $2500 to help them out. This $2500 saw no educational, financial, or emotional return to the NAIT student body. It was in effect a blank cheque to a couple of guys with a very good presentation.

Which leads us to the issue at hand. It can be argued that Steve Gold is representing NAIT, and even Canada at this conference in San Jose, but what good is it doing for the NAIT student population as a whole? Your elected technology representatives sit at GC and are the watchdogs for fiscal responsibility for the Student Association. Is it possible that because of a lack of experience, lack of knowledge, or just plain apathy that the tech reps see fit to give away SA dollars with not a care in the world? Having firsthand experience participating in and viewing GC, it can be said that the tech reps are notorious for "Group-thinking". Meaning if one person says yes, they all follow suit and say yes, no matter what the motion on the floor at that given time is.

It is great so see Steve Gold get the opportunity to go to this AISES conference in San Jose. It may very well be a once in a lifetime offer. Additionally the ASC may not have had the funding available to send Steve on their own budget and due to time constraints couldn't raise the dollars needed in time to send him. Could the ASC have not however received a loan from NAITSA for $645 so that Steve could go on November 10th and then through fundraising repaid the loan? Could this not have been a viable solution?

Surely it is time for GC to re-evaluate its role in representing the NAIT students as a whole, and not just be a facade to show up for donuts and juice every second Tuesday. It's only a matter of time before every club, organization and group realizes that GC is an open bank account for any and all financial needs.

After a polished presentation and overall great information sharing, GC agreed to give Steve the $645 needed to cover his airfare to San Jose.

In today's fast-paced society there is a tendency to overlook or take for granted what's most important to us. Companionship is just one example, but it's one thing we may never find the answers to.

Questions! That's as far as I get when it comes to the opposite sex. And most of the time I think it's fair to say the feelings are mutual. Men and women just don't understand each other. Anyway, what I'd like you to do is take a look at some of the questions I'm asking and submit your answers for a future paper. Your submissions will be completely anonymous, guaranteed. I think that it's time men and women lay their cards on the table and let each other know what they're all about. What do women want from a guy?

(Men can answer this question if they think they know.) Do they want a "Baywatch" type of guy who has a limited brain capability but looks great in jeans? Or do looks really count that much? Can sweetness and charm still sweep a girl off her feet? I think that a woman wants a guy who cares about her, makes her happy, and puts her high on his list of priorities. But then what do I know, I'm still single.

Is "the bar" a good place to meet people?

No. I'm steadily losing faith in clubs as a place to start a lasting relationship. I don't know if it's the lack of a romantic atmosphere or the non-lack of alcoholic beverages. And guys have a bad reputation these days. When a guy walks up to a girl in a bar, she thinking he's a jerk before he says anything. It's safer that way, guilty until proven innocent.

Is romance dying a slow death?

This is a tough one to answer. I'd like some help with this one. What I'm trying to figure out is if people still believe in romance and love at first sight, or do they no longer exist.

Why do people often stay together when they're not happy? Loneliness can be something to avoid at all costs for some people. Even staying in a terrible relationship is better than the prospect of having nothing. I think that people who stay together are wasting time. Being lonely for a while helps keep things in perspective, so you appreciate companionship even more.

Now, I realize that I'm sacrificing a bit of maleness by asking all these questions. But I'm a hopeless romantic kind of guy. I want to have a great story to tell my grandchildren about the time I met their grandmother. Is it possible? If you think you know let me know. Drop your submission in one of the drop boxes

So I'm betting that all of you have either read or listened to the story from South Carolina. Susan Smith murdered her two children (ages 3 and 14 months) callously and without mercy. She tried to cover up by saying that she was "car-jacked". This brought forth an incredible emotional response from the public because it actually could of happened.

After 9 days, the woman confessed to strapping her children in to their respective car seats, and then pushed the car into John D. Long lake. She then watched as the oldest, Michael, struggled to free himself as he slowly drowned.

This is appalling on many levels to a great many people. The small town of Union, S.C., is turning into a boiling kettle of anger. Last week a mob of people almost stormed the police in an attempt to get ahold of Susan Smith, the perpetrator of this entire affair. I'll bet that if they would've gotten to Susan, the small town of Union would be holding a public hanging shortly after.

People are bothered by this for many reasons. The fact that she claimed that her children were stolen touched everyone with a fear of something similar happening. Hundreds of people went out to try to help this poor couple find their stolen children. Then the outrage that they were played for fools when she admitted she lied about the car-jacking. Finally the disgust at the very thought of what she did to her two beautiful children.

I said earlier that if the mob was to get their hands upon her they would probably hang her. I ask myself often of punishment and justice, Is this enough? I say she should pay for her crimes in a similar fashion. Strap her into a car, push her into the same lake her children died in, and see if realizes the horrible crime she has committed.

This is a question that has puzzled me and millions of other women as well. It may seem like a little thing but I've seen it make and break relationships, change a person's image, and transform their beliefs and attitudes. Not to mention the most important thing, let's face it most women like a man who can tap his toes.

Just this past weekend I was at a weekend I was at wedding where I watched dozens of miserable people sitting around, watching everyone else dance. There's the classic teenage girl sitting at a table practically dancing in her chair. Yet the young man who's attention she's trying to catch doesn't ask her to dance. Even though he's been staring at her all night.

Scene two, the older happily married couple chatting with friends, drinking some wine perhaps. The wife diverts her attention from the conversation as she realizes the DJ is playing one of her favorite songs. She tries to hint to her husband...no luck. Finally she gives up being subtle and comes right out and asks him to dance. Outcome, the end of that song and every other one of the night finds her still sitting at the table.

What's the big deal! Seriously guys, what harm would it do? In North America today most guys would rather sit this one out, no matter how happy it would make most women. But why??

Let's face it, music plays a big part in today's society. And no matter what kind of music you may like...you can somehow move or dance to it. Saying that "you can't dance to this type of music" is just a coward's way out. It's a lie.

Dancing is one of the most invigorating physical workouts there is. It's great for the body and studies have shown that dancing frees the mind by releasing stress and tension. Not to mention the obvious advantages to swaying to the beat close to that special someone.

I love to dance, so I've heard a great number of dance excuses in my lifetime. Everything from "dancing is for sissies and cowboys" to the all time classic honesty of "I don't know how" or "I'm too scared to ask anyone".

First of all like I said before I don't know too many girls that don't love a guy that knows how to dance. Cause even if the girl doesn't feel completely comfortable on the dance floor a good dancer can lead and make anyone look professional. That part about dancing is only for cowboys, well since the increase in popularity of country music, alot more guys have begun to dance. Which is great. In fact many guys have told me that even though they don't like country, learning to dance to it has gotten them alot more dates.

The part about not knowing how, well it doesn't really matter. Everyone dances differently and often the girls aren't the best dancers either. They just realize that by not going out and trying it

SATURDAY MORNINGS GONE BAD

Whatever happened to real cartoons and real Saturday morning programming. I used to live just for the sake of getting up Saturday, eating three bowls of sugar coated cereal and vegging out with cartoons until four o'clock. Saturday's used to be a child's TV glory day. So what happened to it?

I'll tell you what went wrong. Somebody decided children's cartoons were too violent. That nasty, nasty Bugs Bunny is public enemy number one when it comes to violence. Look at all the maladjusted, psychopathic adults nowadays that grew up on Bugs and his friends. What with Wile E. Coyote getting smashed, crushed and blown to smithereens every few minutes, and Bugs pulling every cruel trick in the book on old Elmer Fudd, who wouldn't turn into an axe murderer.

Have you tried watching Bugs, Tweety and the rest of the gang in the last few years.

They don't make sense any more, because all the "bad, violent scenes" have been edited out. One minute Wile E. Coyote is slapping on the old ACME rocket skates to do battle with that crafty road runner, then a truck appears and... nothing, next scene. You never see what hap-loves this guy as much as I do.) Even though I watched all these "violent" cartoons I don't beat people about the head and neck, and I don't solve arguments with dynamite.

Here's a quick list of my personal favorite cartoons and a few of their modern day counterparts I can't help but despise.

MOGA MADNESS

By Neil Feser

What do you do with a whole bunch of Office Administration ladies who have gone completely wild? Easy, you put them in groups, give them a theme to follow, and have them compete in a MOGA. What is a MOGA you ask? MOGA stands for Most Outrageous Group Activity, and it seems to have become an Office Administration standard over the past few years. This year it took place in the Westwood Campus gymnasium, on November 9th at 12:15 p.m. Due to time constraints exact details on this year's MOGA contest can't be printed the day after it happened, but here are the facts of the function itself.

MOGA consists of groups of ladies competing against each other for fabulous trips, wonderful prizes and this brand new car!! Or something like that. Actually groups of first year, second year students and staff compete against

Letters to the Editor

To: Neil Feser, News Editor
Re: Fashion Disaster Article

I would like to start off by saying I find it profoundly disturbing that with all the things you could have chosen to write about you chose to poke fun at people and their fashion taste. However, you chose the topic and it is insulting.

I suppose you figured that if everyone followed your close-minded, archaic, 80's Valley Girl Style, the world would be a better place. Not so. The alternative ways that people dress is what make the world an interesting place.

First of all, what makes a person attractive is the person, not whether they wear grunge or not. Second, judging a person's intelligence by the way they dress only proves that you're the stupid one.

When you begin to voice this kind of prejudice you're as bad as a racist. You're judging people by the way they look and because they don't look like you.

As for you and your "friends" sitting around laughing at people, the world would be so much better off without people like you in it.

It's one thing to want to give your opinion, it's another thing entirely to insult and judge people. P.S. Being cruel to people doesn't make you cool it makes you an asshole.

Editorial reply

S.B. Thank you for correcting me on my heinous, nasty, picking on other people ways. I'm sorry I've offended you but this is all my opinion after all. I'm sure no one is going to change their way of life based on this. I'll do my best to write about "nice" things from now on.
Sincerely
Neil.

Dear Fashion boy,

I'm so glad that you wrote that wonderful article last week, now I realize the error of my fashion ways. Soon after reading that marvelous article written by such a fabulous talented young individual such as yourself I decided I wanted so much to be just like you. I went straight to the West Edmonton Mall with my Mommy and my Daddy. They bought me all kinds of very nice clothing that fit me very nicely, and I felt so much better.

I owe it all to you fashion boy, but I still need your help. Tell me please "oh wise one" what music should I listen to? And while you're at it how about you let me know what to do with my hair.

I worship you, please marry me.

Your #1 fan,
Dan Kaulbach

Editorial reply:

Dearest Dan,

As far as music to listen to I suggest something soothing, because you seem to be under a lot of stress. I'm glad your mommy and daddy took you to the mall and I hope you didn't spend too much time in the toy department. As far as your hair, I think you should grow it longer in the front so people won't see your ugly lobotomy scar. I hope this helps make your life a little easier. Unfortunately I'm already engaged so I can't take you up on the marriage proposal

SNIFFING YAKS AND SUCH

I'm warning you now, do not, I repeat do not rush out to the record store after you read this. I wouldn't want you to spill cold coffee over your lukewarm breakfast.

Heavy metal yak sniffers Aerosmith have just released a greatest hits album, "Big Ones". Yippity Dooo Daaa. Steven Tyler and the boys sold the farm on this one, chasing the big bucks like a teenage farm boy and his pet goat. Well, you say, Aerosmith is pretty cool and they do have mongo material. Cool, my ass, this latest aging rock band sell out is about as cool as a Friday night, a Nirvana CD and a loaded .38 special.

Greatest Hits? Oh yeah, there's one minor technicality, the only songs you'll hear are the ones released on the Geffen record label, essentially limiting their choice of greatest hits to their last three albums. So, for seventeen bucks you get half of their 1993 release "Get a Grip", and a few throw ins from mid and late eighties albums "Pump" and "Permanent Vacation".

And Aerosmith fans, you'll be lucky enough to get two brand new releases on the CD. Blah, blah blah, you'll hear those songs so much on the radio your ear drums will bleed.

Greatest hits. Yeah sure, buh bye. It's more like latest hits.

These (as in Aerosmith and Geffen) Lame-o imbeciles are insulting the music buying public by dishing up this garbage. Sure there are some good songs, maybe even a couple of exceptional songs but here's a hint, there's this little thingy on your ghetto-blasters called a record button. And when you put a blank tape in you can combine any number of songs from any CD's or tapes in any order. So keep the seventeen bones in your pocket and do something nice for your mother, she deserves it, after all you've put her through. So don't buy this egg foo yung passed off as a greatest hits CD, because all Geffen and Aerosmith are doing are laughing at you, all the way to the bank.

Chapter 6 Ice, Ice Baby Too Cold

"Sjfg vlv n hisio oihv?", said the lady at the Hotel's front desk.

"Sure, could we maybe get a room on the bottom floor, we wouldn't want to wake anyone up", I mention.

"Muhb ckj ba caich hiaoa jbkj?"

"Uhh, just one bed will be fine. How much do I owe you?"

"$kjkkn, iohv."

"Alright", I say as I hand her a couple of twenties, "And you have a good night too."

"Zwllkbv lklkn kn."

Walking along the motel hallway I felt like humming like smurf, so I did.

"La la la la la, la la la la."

"My Ian, arent you in a good mood. I kinda thought that a long day of driving might tucker you out", Beth said with a wink.

"No way hose-a, I'm like a alligator in heat...minus the scales and alligator skin and heat."

"Wow, am I ever smooth," I think, "this chick is just going to be puddy in my silly hands tonight."

We passed a few rooms and found ours, Room 169. I looked over at Beth and saw some apprehension in her eyes. She knew that I'd be all over her the moment we walked in the room. So I decided that I would play it cool for a while.

I unlocked the door and peered into the room. Good, a bed and a TV what more does a guy need?

"Ian do you have any Condoms?"

"Uhhh, yes." I was lying.

"Ian, are you lying?", Beth asked.

"Yeah, pretty much."

This is crazy, this girl can see right through me. And at that moment I heard a rumble from the room next door, then a lamp smashing, and then voices.

"You stupid hag!!!", a man's voice bellowed.

"I'm not a hag, you fag, I'm a bag!!" a females voice screamed back.

"Pass the rag, you flag!!!" the man's voice retorted.

"Tag and bag, you wag!!!" the women replied.

"Well," I thought, "this fight is getting a little lame" So I turned my attention back to the task at hand.

Then all of a sudden, Beth laid down on the bed.

"Ian, baby are you gonna come to bed with little Bethy."

"Sure, but first I'm going to go get some ice from down the hall.

I left the room and thought for a second about never returning. I was scared of love, I'd never cared about anyone before and I didn't know how to react. How could I tell her that I just wanted to be held, to be nurtured. I'm a special guy, with values, and I wasn't going to let some girl take everything I've treasured in my life away with one night of senseless, sexual intoxication. So, in a nutshell, I didn't have a condom.

I came back into the room only to see Beth under the covers, lacking clothing.

I was about to take the big plunge when I heard a knock on the door.

Lame is the Name of the Game

Here are this weeks Top 10 Singles as published by the National Trade Publication.

1. Madonna - Secret (Here's a secret for you Madonna, you suck.)
2. Elton John - Can You Feel the Love Tonight?
(Wasn't this song cool in June? Wait, it wasn't even cool then.)
3. Boyz II Men - I'll Make Love to You (I'll use my own soap in the shower, boyz.)
4. Da Brat - Funkdafied (I'm myst-dafied about Da Brat)
5. C & C Music Factory (1991 was a cool year... in freakin' 1991)
6. Wet Wet Wet - Love is All Around (Maybe these dudes should shower with Boyz II Men)
7. Bon Jovi - Always (They washed up a lot faster than I thought they would.)
8. Reel II Reel - Go on Move (What's up with all these II's?)
9. Sophie B. Hawkins - Right Beside You (Yeah whatever, blah, blah, blah)
10. John Mellencamp - Wild Nights (Your cool John, honest, you are.)

Ominously missing

1. REM - Hey neat. A real song with real creditability. Beauty concept.
2. Tragically Hip - Hmmm, A Canadian Top 10 list and no Hip. Free Trade did this.
3. Nirvana Unplugged - He's dead, that should count for something.
4. Eric Clapton - Hey, I see a pattern, a recurring theme among absentees - integrity.

I have a question, who actually makes these lists? The Canadian Institute for the Deaf? No offense but the only Top 10 I see on this weeks list is music for the top 10 floors of an elevator.

WASTED MONEY

There are some athletic teams here at Nait that don't quite get the recognition that they seem to deserve. Two in particular that come to mind are the Badminton Team, and the Swimming Teams. Both of these teams were in action last weekend and did very respectfully. These teams have been strong in the past, and seem to be continuing with that tradition.

The swim team was in pre-season action last weekend where both the men and women came up with strong performances. The women won their section of the event, while the men ended up in a tie for first. This apparently makes Nait the overall team to beat in the upcoming finals at the end of November.

The Badminton Team also seems to be on pace for another successful year. Nait hosted the first Regional last Saturday with a total of five colleges competing. They finished fairly strong with four wins over Keyano, Grande Prairie, Concordia, and Grant MacEwan Colleges.

Now my next point is this; why do we seem to spend so much money on sports like Women's Basketball, where there is an obvious lack of quality participation, and neglect to spend more money on teams where the pay off in Provincial and National Championships is greater? I don't want to make an example of a team such as basketball, but tell me, when was the last time that Women's Basketball was a dominant force in the Alberta Athletic Colleges Conference (ACAC)? Why should we continue to throw money into a sport that has no significant payoff? Maybe there is a reason for this, and I would seriously like to know what it is! Tournament sports here at Nait like Badminton, Swimming, Curling, and Golf have seen much more success than other sports here at Nait. Why don't we spend more money on them? Why don't the tournament sports teams receive a Jimmie Condon Scholarship in the amount of $1000, like the other sports do? I know one reason is that unless the sport has a National Championship it is not eligible to receive this money for the players. But think about this - what if the team is so bad that it continually finishes at the bottom of the ACAC league, and will never even come close to a National Championship? Can we justify giving the players the scholarship anyway, just because it has a National Championship and that is part of the criteria?

Maybe we should consider giving a scholarship to Intramural Athletes. After all, more people can participate in intramurals and they usually participate for themselves and their technology, not for the money.

Basketball in Trouble

By Jana Kolot

I'm not sure if you can call it Basketball, but I guess we can try. Don't get me wrong, I do have a little bit of sympathy for the Women's Basketball program. I understand that 4 out of 5 starters are injured while another is in Hawaii, so I guess I can see why they're not playing very well. But wholly cow! In their first regular season action, the women played host to the Red Deer Queens, who look like the Chicago Bulls compared to Nait! In the first half the Oaks scored 19 points, which didn't look bad compared to the Queens' 26. When I showed up at the start of the second half and saw that score, I figured that this would be a pretty good game. Wrong! It took the Oaks over 10 minutes to score a basket in the second half, while the Queens' were scoring every 30 seconds, (so it seemed). The final score in this game was 34-80. So all I can say to the Women's Basketball Team, is keep your heads up and try a little harder next game, it can't get any worse.

Hockey Oaks Take Series

By Brian Stein

The Nait Oaks (3-2-0) swept a home and home series with the Augustana University College Vikings (0-5-1) to move within two points of the league leading Red Deer College Kings (4-2-0) and Mount Royal College Cougars (4-2-0).

In Camrose on Friday, November 4th, Dan Kopec paced the Oaks with a two goal performance as the Oaks recorded a 7-4 triumph. Dan Pilling, Peter Kasowski, Terence Oliver, Jay Lines, and Darryl Romano added singles for Nait.

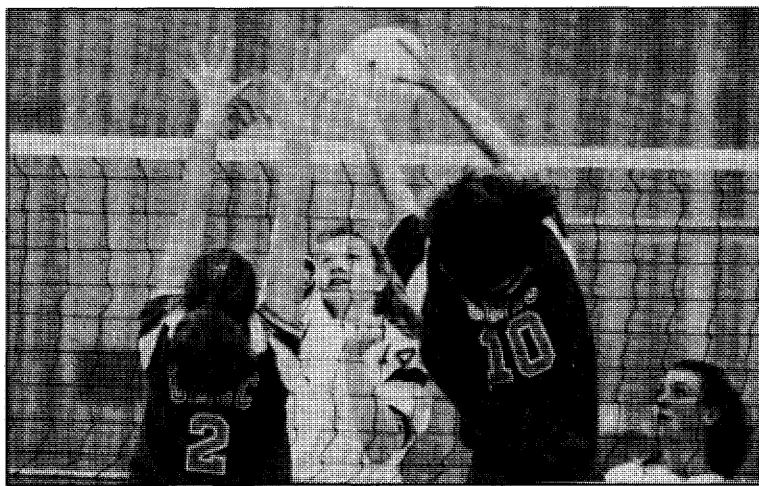

At the Nait Arena on Saturday, November 5th, Jason Sorochna netted three of Nait's six power play goals as the Oaks outscored the Vikings 11-7. Stacey Rayan and Dan Pilling each tallied twice for the Oaks while Peter Kasowski, Jamie Barnes, Craig Samoil and Jody Menssa netted solo markers.

Volleyball Enthusiasm

By Jana Kolot

The Nait Volleyball teams hosted the Grant MacEwan Griffins last Saturday night with a crowd of more than 200 on hand to watch. The Women's team put on a fairly impressive show, against the nationally ranked Griffins. The first two games were close with scores of 14-16 and 12-15. The third and final game for the women was dominated solely by the Griffins with their depth and experience. This is "a team to watch for as the season develops, but the lack of playing experience at the college level put them one step behind their competition on this night, said a satisfied Craig Wourms, coach of the women's team. The men were also impressive on this night. Once again up against a nationally ranked men's team in the Griffins. The Nait men looked to be the dominant team at times, but made key hitting and serving errors throughout the match. They also lost to the Griffins 3 games to none. I have to admit, I wish the men would have won. After all, Coach Mark Mahl would look good with a bald head!

The score is 2 to 1 in your favor. This isn't fair, I hardly saw you this week-end. So do you really want that cute guy from the bar, the one in your class. Are you still sure anything goes? Yaba daba doo!
From: Betty
P.S. Hope to see you drunk on Saturday

To Art, our Accounting Desire
You're too hot to be married. Why? Is the sex that great? We want your body, minus the ring. Why have one when you could have many.
From the girls in A-3, A-4 Accounting

To Joan
Lets get together for coffee some time. We only knew each other since grade 8. Please Respond via the Grapevine or in person if you know who I am.
Signed, Big AL

To the Blonde haired bimbo in Bus Admin A-11
Lose the leather jacket and the attitude. You're not as hot as you think.
Sincerely,
The twins

To blondie in Bus Admin A-11
We don't think you're hot either.
Sincerely,
The boys of A-11

To: Business Blonde
Tuesday, up in the tower around 9 a.m., You were with a guy. Sat in the table beside mine. I wore white turtleneck sweater & baggy jeans. You had a red tight top on. Did you see me checking you out? Let's meet so I can check you out, this time out in the open! By the way I love to dance, do you?
Malibu, Southside.
Signed Roberto

Civil Engineering,
Did you know a higher percentage of graduates get jobs coming out of Business Admin than out of your wondrous faculty? Probably not since you don't know your own name without looking in your underwear (under the stains). Its a good thing they teach you how to build something so maybe your cardboard box won't collapse.

Signed the employed Business Students

P.S. If more of us get jobs after being taught how to walk on boards, what the hell are they teaching you guys?

To: Lighting
Is your Dad still out at Mulhurst. I see you're quite the dirty dancer.
From: Sparky

To Rob in Electrical,
Thanks for the bruises!

GRAPEVINES

You work in Athlete's World in Kingsway, and you are in Mineral Engineering at NAIT. This buxom brunette thinks you're cute. I've been admiring you in the mall.

To the girl that was on Bus # 42 last Friday. I couldn't help but notice how attractive you were. We were both sitting at the back of the bus. I was wearing a black jacket. You were wearing a blue jacket, and you were listening to your walkman. You got off the bus just past the high level bridge and went into a restaurant. I would really like to meet you. If you feel the same way, I'm usually in the Library at lunch and after school, or respond via the Grapevine.

To Desire with an E
Sorry I missed your call on Saturday, I am home during the week. This Thursday, which would be today, I'll be at southside Club Malibu. Maybe I will see you there.
Signed Shane

TO: Bucky
Thanx for the wicked party out in Mulhurst Saturday night at JJ's. It was fun until, well I got shot down by your buddy. If I ever see him again, I don't know what I'll do. We got to watch out for those full moons in the backseat of cars.
From Sparky

To Green eyed blonde stranger
To the young woman that came out the gym doors with your friends at 12:10 p.m. Nov. 3/94. I wanted to say that you have the most beautiful green eyes I have ever seen. I could not say anything because I was very stunned. I was wearing a gray and maroon ski jacket that went in the school after you held the doors for me.
GSA/ Green eyed Skier

To: MY LITTLE MOUSE
You will find as you look back upon your life that the moments when you have really lived, are the moments when you have done things in a spirit of friendship/love
From GRIZZLY BEAR

Fysh (with a 'y') and Twinkletoes,
Okay, so maybe I don't go to "REAL" bars, but at least I can drink more and spend less. You guys should come to the Pail Party on Saturday, then you'll know what I'm talking about. And I'll be the one to show you a thing or two.
From Jinglebells
