Do You Like Sex?!?

by Christopher M. Hayes

Results of a recent study on sex conducted by the University of Chicago involving 3,500 Americans ages 18 to 59 have been released. Of course this has nothing to do with Canadians, everybody knows that we have sex non-stop. Although the results printed here might be surprising, and may even be highly offensive to certain groups, the results of the study is viewed as the most accurate ever conducted on the subject of sex.

The study basically disproves many of the sexual myths and misconceptions that are constantly sensationalized in the world of multi-media, especially television and movies. According to the study, 83% of Americans are monogamous, the average man has six partners during a lifetime, while a woman usually has only two.

Married couples have the most sex. They are also more likely to have achieve orgasms during sex. Approximately 40% of married couples have sex twice a week, compared to only 25% of single people.

Americans are apparently not very kinky in bed either. Almost everyone (96%) said that vaginal sex was "very or somewhat appealing." Oral sex ranked a distant third behind "Watching your partner undress."

Nearly 75% of married men and 85% of married women said virginity by the age of 15, while white males were around age 17 before they took the plunge. A high number (80%) of white college-educated males claimed to have had engaged in oral sex, while only 50% of blacks could say the same.

Roman Catholics are the most likely to be virgins (4%) and Jews have the most amount of sexual partners (34% had 10 or more). Protestant women are the most likely to achieve orgasm each time they have sex (32%), however Catholics have sex more often.

The study also describes how most people marry people who resemble them in terms of age, education, race, and social status, using this as the explanation why the pool of available partners seems so small. As I said already, this is an American test but the results are very interesting. Perhaps we could have our own personal NAIT study of sex. Send in your comments about the topic and how the article compared to you. This won't be terribly scientific, but it sure will be fun to read through all your mail.

they have never been unfaithful, making adultery the exception, not the rule.

Results also showed that there are not as many homosexuals than the often reported 1 in 10. A low of 2.7% of men and 1.3% of women reported having homosexual sex in the past year. These findings were in line with recent studies in England and France, which also found low rates of homosexuality and high marital fidelity. Keep in mind that this report has not been conducted in Canada yet, these are all American results.

The study found that 3% of Americans have never had sex. In terms of race and religion, 50% of all black males had lost their

Immigration Cuts

by Julie Matthews

The federal government is taking a closer look at Canada's immigration policy, looking for weaknesses and opportunities for change.

Immigration Minister Sergio Marchi will announce his new policy plans sometime this week.

His plans will go against his party's campaign platform (liberal) which stated they wanted to "continue to target immigration levels of approximately 1% of the population (290,000) with priority given to independent applicants and family class.

However, according to Marchi, those goals are no longer very realistic. The number of people applying to come to Canada is declining and the public is demanding skilled immigrants who can contribute to the economy.

The new proposals are bound to spark protest from immigration advocates who will find the plan too restrictive, and Canada's Reform party who wants even more immigration cuts and control.

"We're going to make some

"We're going to make some decisions that previous governments have feared to do"

decisions that previous governments have feared to do," a government source revealed.

Marchi is expected to announce:

- a cut in annual immigration numbers from 250,000 to 200,000. However, the impact is very minor since actual immigration levels have decreased significantly.

- more restrictions on immigrant families.

- tougher constraints for the business immigration program. This program enabled people to immigrate to Canada in return for investing in Canada or starting a new business that would create jobs here.

- Greater emphasis on education and the ability to speak English or French when selecting immigrants.

- Overall target levels for refugees will be set instead of establishing separate targets for separate categories of refugees - those who make claims in Canada, those selected by the government from refugee camps abroad and those sponsored abroad by private groups here in Canada.

If you drink...Don't bowl

By Neil Feser

Blowing lunch... Yacking on the big white phone... Praying to the porcelain god.... Probably 90% of you have done this on one occasion or another. They're all terms for throwing up after consuming too much alcohol.

AADAC and ACD (The Association of Canadian Distillers) have come up with a new anti-drinking campaign that's not only eye-catching, it actually makes people stop and think. In conjunction with college and university campuses across Alberta, AADAC and ACD are hoping to get across a simple message... you don't need to get plastered to have a good time. It is not so much an anti-drinking campaign, but a campaign to ask post-secondary students to refrain from over drinking.

The "if you drink... don't bowl" is well thought out and aimed at 18-24 year old students.

In a pilot project, a campus-wide survey conducted following a poster campaign brought forth the following statistics:

91% of the students recalled seeing the ads.

96% agreed the posters caught the eye.

86% of the students enjoyed the humour in the ads.

65% indicated they could picture themselves or their friends in the posters.

84% of those surveyed actually thought about the consequences of over-drinking.

Perhaps the most telling percentage though was the actual response to the posters. 80% of the posters were removed by students for private collections.

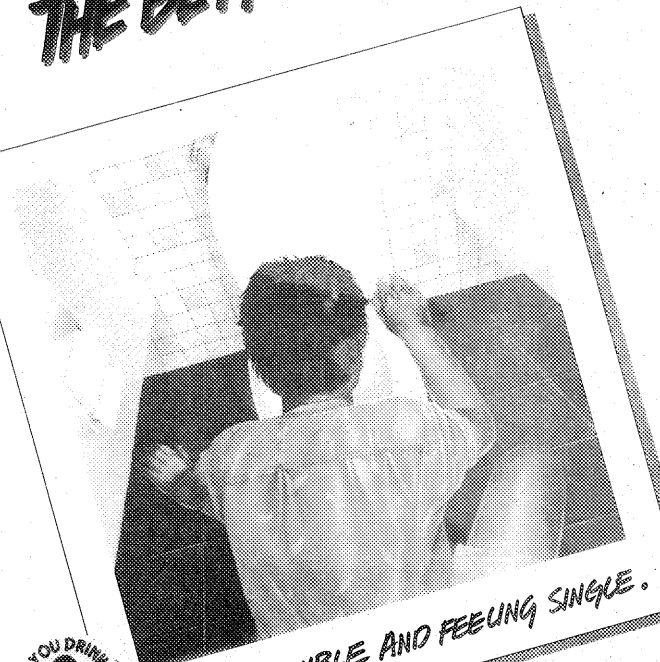

Some of you may have already taken a few of the posters. There are seven weeks worth of posters, each week with a new slogan. NAITSA is holding 50 of each posters at the NAITSA office (E133) for you, if you wish one for yourself. So if you see one you really have to have, before you tear it down, ho see them and get a poster for yourself.

The campaign on a whole is designed to target post-secondary students over-drinking. This intense drinking results in such undesirable side-effects as interference with studies, hurting friends, behaving poorly in social situations, fights/violence, spending too much money, and even unprotected sex. These and other issues are what AADAC is trying to address with this "gut-wrenching" poster campaign. So, if you drink... don't bowl.

MORTGAGING EDUCATION

In this country there has historically been a consensus of what higher education does for our society. A person's capacity to contribute to the welfare (generally speaking) of the nation is largely related to the quality of education they receive. However it seems to me that the government has rejected this conventional thinking and decided to cut back much needed funding to post-secondary institutions.

Currently funding to these institutions is subsidized by the federal government at rates between 70 and 80%. The problem is that while funding is steadily decreasing, and has been for the last decade, tuition's in some cases have doubled and even tripled.

The beloved student loan could be renamed by the time you leave school and enter the labour force. The birth of the "education mortgage" is upon us, meaning students from backgrounds not accustomed to carrying such financial burdens will have to forego any form higher education. They simply will not be able to afford colleges or universities, and therefore will be targeting a lower income bracket. Not only will this hurt their job opportunities but they will also be less inclined in the future to want to support social programs that are primarily used by older Canadians, such as healthcare and pensions. Demographic

The provincial government's recently issued White Paper on post-secondary education has not come under as heavy fire as was first expected. Some critics are saying that while they may not agree with all of the goals and principles laid out in the document, they admit it's a close compromise.

But one of the biggest points in the paper is tuition increases, which fortunately have been capped at an average increase of $215 per year plus inflation expenses, to a maximum of 30% of their annual operating expenses. Also institutions must publish a three-year schedule of fees in their annual calendars. The 30% cap is not going to hit NAIT students too hard, but university students are looking at an eventual $4000 annual tuition, on programs that go a minimum of 4 years.

What we need to concentrate on is real development. We are only hurting ourselves in the long-run by cutting back funding to education. It's really very simple. Why then is the government doing

I, NAKED MAN

Well I sure hope you're Halloween was as fun as mine. Of course I spent my night at home working on assignments and the such. You know I never wanted to do anything this Halloween except stay at home with the lights off so no little creeps would come and try to steal my hard earned candy. Then the next day, that of course being the first of November, I really wanted to have done something. It's not like Halloween is everyday here in Canada, or anywhere for that matter. I think that if I could've been anyone for Halloween, with the obvious exception of Elvis, I would have been Barney, the dinosaur. I mean that guy must get laid all the time. With that great pick up line, "Be my friend", who could resist that?

Anyway so what did you guys do for Halloween? Did you get dressed up and make fools of yourself like I figured you did...especially you John? Ahhhhh, what's the use? You see I continue to ask you boring, mundane questions about what you did like you are actually going to take the time out of your busy schedules to answer my loser question. OK. Fine. I can take a hint. If I am going to continue asking questions, they'll be interesting and most non boring.

First of all, have you noticed how many people going to NAIT have only one eyebrow? Have you also noticed that these eyebrow people all seem to come from Saskatchewan? Why? Are the thugs in government of the flatland to our right using their people for sick guinea pigs? Are they trying to see how the rest of Canada will react to a single-browed person (I am continually striving to be politically correct). Will the double-browed masses rise up and shave that nose bridge worth of hair from enemy agents from Saskatchewan?

Second, for those of you who have happen to be able to touch your nose with your tongue. Stop it. You guys creep me out. This isn't actually a question, but it's my editorial so I can do whatever I bloody well want to do. I'm naked right now. What do you think about that? That's right, I'm naked and I'm writing my editorial while I'm naked. How can I do two things at once? I happen to be multi-talented.

EGG-SHARING

No it's not Easter, but many women are hunting for eggs.

A private fertility clinic in Toronto is allowing younger women undergoing in-vitro fertilization to give away half their eggs in exchange for getting their medical costs covered. Poorer, younger women can have their $5,200 medical costs for IVF completely or partially paid by other richer couples.

The agreement is usually made with couples where the wife is in her early 40's, is also infertile and trying IVF, but has poorer quality eggs because of her age.

The deals are completely anonymous, neither woman's name is revealed. About 50 pairs of women have been involved in the program so far. The basic idea behind the program is splitting one woman's eggs between the two women, the clinic then mixes each woman's eggs with their husband's sperm in a petri dish. The resulting embryos are then re-inserted back into the womb. If they get pregnant, the older woman's offspring will only be half biologically related through her husband's sperm. But neither she or her child will ever know who the real biological mother is.

But the idea of egg donation has met with alot of controversy her in Canada. Dr. Jeffrey Nisker says the program is similar to ones that sell human eggs in the U.S. for cash.

Nisker, head of the ethics committee of the Society of Obstetricians and Gynecologists in Canada says, "A young woman is definitely socially disadvantaged or she would never agree to it." He's very concerned about the program. "This is an exploitation of poor women and there's no place for this in Canada," said

Nisker. "You have socially-disadvantaged women who can't afford in-vitro fertilization. So what they do is sell their eggs to people to afford IVF. How does this differ to what is going on in the United States?"

Carole Craig, director of the Toronto clinic said there is a difference. "U.S. clinics pay poor, normal women who don't need IVF $1,500 to take fertility drugs and then have their eggs surgically removed.

The American clinics then turn around and sell the eggs to

I would like to take a few minutes of your time to talk about fashion. Not the straight from Paris or New York type, high-fashion clothing endorsed by such goddesses as Cindy Crawford, or Claudia Schiffer. No, I'm taking about plain, old, normal, walking around the streets of Edmonton type fashion. I'll sort of drift through a few different styles to try to stick with me.

Let's start with the "grunge" look. Is this for real? C'mon guys, and gals, get it together. Let's get pants that fit a little better and pull them up a little bit. It can't be comfortable having your belt down around knee level. Every time I see someone, usually teenagers, wearing size 48 pants around their thighs, I feel like giving them a wedgie they'd never forget. And comb your hair kids. The messy "I just got out of bed look" is not attractive, trust me. As far as wearing steel-toed work boots and tougues all the time...very chic. I think these are the only two pieces of clothing that could make me want Doc Marten's back on societies list of stylish things to wear. Oh, and I almost forgot the platform shoes. Ladies, they were gross in the seventies, and they are even worse now.

Next I have to mention another recent fashion trend that really sends me into hysterics. I'll only cover the garbage wearing skater folks, and these people or I'll be writing all night. This next section is dedicated to my buddy Garrett, who along with me gets no end of laughs out of these guys, and he knows exactly what I'm saying. What do you say to a guy in the city with a 25 I.Q.? Nice Hat Cowboy!!

You guys take the cake for fashion idiocy. I really love the neon shirts with the beautiful designs and the rope belts. Not to mention the roper boots that look like overgrown golf shoes. To add to your stunning fashion sense, I really love the super dark blue jeans, and those lovely hubcap belt buckles. I heard a good joke for those, too.

What do you call a cowboy's big belt buckle?

A tombstone over a dead thing!!

Get it?? Probably not because you don't have the brains to realize you look like a rodeo clown and not the Marlboro man. If any one in every ten of you "Good Old boys" has ever seen a farm, let alone worked on one, I'd love to meet you.

Think of it from this perspective, when you get up to get dressed in the mornings, no one looks back at the seventies and says "Oh Cool!!!" You know what I'm talking about, polyester day-glo leisure suits, platform boots, John Travolta and "Saturday Night Fever," the Bee Gee's, beads and shells galore. We look at these fools and laugh. Guess who we'll be laughing at in about fifteen years?

In closing, I know I've offended some people with all my nasty comments on the way you dress, but look around you. If you see someone reading the Nugget, looking in your direction, and laughing, or trying not to, take the hint, I'm talking about you.

Cops Battle For Alberta

by Julie Matthews

Remember when you played cops and robbers? Who always won? The cops, right? Well, imagine if the police went up against each other. That's what's happening here in Alberta.

Back in July, former Justice Minister Ken Rostad said that eliminating the RCMP and merging municipal cops into regional superforces is one idea the province is looking at to slash $19 million from its policing budget by 1997.

But Canada's top mountie says the Alberta RCMP will gladly cut their costs to beat out a proposed provincial police force for the job of keeping peace in the province.

"We're certainly more than willing to change the way we deliver the police service so we'll remain the police force of choice here in Alberta," Commissioner Phil Murray stated. (Hmmm. Could that possibly include reducing the number of speed traps?)

Although merging the forces might save some money at this point, Murray said the RCMP will top any other proposal.

"Historically, the RCMP is very important in the history and development of the province of Alberta. I'm quite confident that at the end of the day, we'll continue to be the police force of choice for Albertans."

Alberta's police forces is already very qualified and very strong. Murray recognized four of Alberta's best and bravest cops including Constable Colin Quast from Edmonton. Colin Quast was awarded a Commissioner's Commendation, the national force's top honor for exemplary police work. He helped foil an armed robbery while off duty last April.

He was on his way to work when he saw two men robbing the Beaumont liquor store. He obtained their license number after being shot at and chased by the assailants. The men are now serving 6 year prison terms.

Julie Continued

infertile couples to $15,000 to $20,000 a batch.

I believe it's wrong for women to literally sell their eggs. It's just as bad as selling their body for prostitution. Women shouldn't need to give up a part of themselves to make a buck. And American clinics have no right to make money off the sale of eggs.

However, couples who are unable to have children should be entitled to experience the joys and sorrows of parenthood. And this sort of program has proved to be successful and beneficial to both women involved. It might bother you that the older woman is covering the other's medical costs and therefore, in essence, you might say she's paying for the eggs. However, she's really paying for a medical service. Would you rather the government take care of the costs and sky rocket the debt further?

Chris Continued

this to us? Public outcry? Okay, but why is it that when they sit down to figure out where to cut spending is Post-secondary education always so squarely on the bargaining table?

The goals set forth through economic restructuring are to create opportunity and prosperity, but what we are doing in the process may be more economically fatal than any debt ever could be.

NEW DIRECTIONS

On October 20, 1994, the Honorable Jack W. Ady, Minister of Advanced Education and Career Development, announced a new plan to meet the learning needs of adult Albertans. The plan is outlined in "New Directions for Adult Learning in Alberta." This paper sets out a new mission for advanced education and career development, four goals for the adult learning system and 22 strategies to achieve those goals.

What are the four goals for Alberta's adult learning system?

Goal 1 - Accessibility: Alberta's adult learning system will increase access for motivated Albertans to a diverse range of quality learning opportunities.

Goal 2 - Responsiveness: Alberta's adult learning system will become more responsive to the needs of the individual learner and to the social, economic and cultural needs of the province.

Goal 3 - Affordability: Alberta's adult learning system will provide quality learning opportunities to the greatest number of Albertans at the lowest possible cost.

Goal 4 - Accountability: Alberta's adult learning system will become more accountable to Albertans for results.

The new plan for education in Alberta includes 22 strategies to reach the goals for the adult learning system. Among the strategies are five major initiatives.

1. Ministers Forum on Adult Learning - An annual forum where the Minister reports on the progress of the system and receives advice from Albertans on post-secondary education.

2. A New Credential - Applied degree programs will be tested at public colleges and technical institutes. Applied degree programs will combine six semesters of formal instruction with at least two semesters of formal accredited work experience.

3. Tuition Fees - Tuition fees will be allowed to rise to 30 per cent of a public institutions net operating expenditures. The government will continue to regulate the annual maximum increases of fees. Institutions may increase tuition fees only within an annual limit averaging no more than $215 plus inflation per year. Tuition fees cannot reach the 30 per cent ceiling until the year 2000.

4. Student's Ability to Transfer Courses - Transfers between post-secondary institutions will be improved. Methods will also be developed to increase recognition of prior learning and work experience.

5. Collective Agreements - Boards of public institutions are requested to examine and, if necessary, re-negotiate their collective agreements by March 1, 1995 to remove barriers to the termination of academic staff contracts for fiscal reasons or if programs become redundant. Academic freedom will not be affected.

I've tried to briefly summarize the highlights of the "New Directions" paper for you, but if you have any questions, please drop in and see me. I've also sent out a copy of "New Directions" for every student at NAIT through your respective Program Head.

More Speed Traps

by Neil Feser

Recently the City of Edmonton Police Service decided they needed to increase their funding. The way they chose to raise this money, rather than approach Edmonton's city council, is to increase the budget for fines collected from speeding tickets. Previous to this, their annual budget for speeding ticket collection was 10.6 million dollars. That's a lot of fine collection.

Police Chief Doug McNally once again decided to more stringently enforce the Highway Traffic Act. He says he doesn't like to do it, but they need the money. Therefore, effective immediately, the Edmonton Police Service is going to collect an additional 1.1 million dollars in revenue, through speeding tickets. This puts the total annual collection at 11.7 million dollars.

Think of it in smaller terms, if it helps you to picture it a little better. The minimum speeding ticket fine is $57. If you assume the average ticket is $65 then the Edmonton City Police now have to stop 16,923 more cars than last year. That works out to 325 more speeders per week or 46 more speeders per day. That's if they make no difference anyways.

At the present rate, it seems clear that at some point in the future, the annual budget for fines collected from speeding tickets will be high enough to fund all the police projects as well as all the new projects city hall can come up with. Maybe in the not so distant future, the only way such criminals as rapists, murderers and bank robbers will be apprehended, is if they run into a speed trap on the way home from their wrongdoings.

stop people 365 days a year, with no holidays. does this seem a little extreme to anybody?

There are those that will argue speeding is a crime, and therefore you should have to pay the price for it. This is a given point: Do the crime, pay the time. Yet does it not seem that the Edmonton Police could be doing something more constructive with their time than setting up speed traps. Perhaps patrolling the neighborhoods and area directly around the NAIT campus would be a good start. This may help stem what seems to be a never ending stream of car break-ins and personal property theft. The majority of which goes unreported, because it seems to

DON'T READ THIS

You know what I'd do if I won ten million dollars? I'd buy all the people that are in beer commercials and make them live in my house. So that way there would always be a big party going on.

Or maybe I'd buy a tin foil factory. Think of all the fun you could have there. All day long you could just rip off pieces of tin foil, crumple them up and throw them around. I ask you, is there a more crumpleable substance in the world than tin foil? I think not.

I'd also like to bribe a bunch of people. First on my list would be every movie company in the world. I'd make them only have movies with Bruce Willis. First it was "Die Hard", then "The Last Boy Scout" and now "Pulp Fiction". He's the king.

I'd also rent one of those hamsters that know how to waterski. Man, the first time I waterskied I could barely even keep my balance. Hamsters. Wow.

I think that I might even patent a line of underwear that fit the same even if you put them on backwards. It's such a weird feeling when you put them on backwards, kinda like guilt but not really, know what I mean?

I might also hire someone to kill Kelly on Beverly Hills 90210. I just can't stand that little denty thing under her nose, it's huge and she must die.

I've also thought about buying an oxygen tank for Madonna. Next time you hear that new song, "Secrets" on the radio, listen for the big breaths she takes before singing a line. She goes, "Hhhh", every five or six seconds, it's gross.

Tricks, Trucks and Goofs

Trick or treat? Well, trick if you're me last Friday night. But first let's go back in time.

Thursday afternoon, 4:10 p.m. - "Hey Greg, wanna go to the big Monster Truck Bash tomorrow night at the Silver Slipper?"

"Well, sure Rufus," I say, "I'm always up for a good monster truck show." Cue Announcers voice, "It's here, Edmonton!! Forty thousand tonnes of molten metal, brought to its knees by Bigfoot, the biggest truck in the universe!!! Watch as Bigfoots six hundred thousand horsepower engine crushes eighteen school buses full of screaming children!!!"

So off we go to the Monster Truck bash, expecting to see some mass destruction, not mass intoxication. Now, you can imagine our surprise when we walked into the Silver Slipper only to be engulfed by a "Monster Tech Bash." Yep, you guessed it - a bit NAIT Halloween cabaret!! (Editors Note - when isn't there a NAIT cabaret somewhere?)

Now, we've all been where I went Friday night, no, not a drunken stupor, but a Halloween party with no costume. Schleppe city. There was Tonya Harding and Nancy Kerrigan, there was Darth Vader, there was even this big penis shaped thing. Unfortunately, there were also a couple of goat shavers dressed like average Joe's taking in a Monster Truck Show (me and my friends, all two of them).

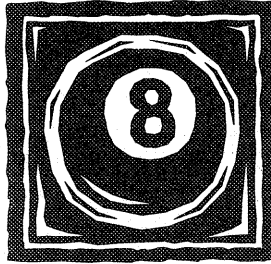

Not cool, But then again, neither is drinking obscene amounts of alcohol in order to obliterate from ones own mind the insecurities of being at a Halloween party with no costume.

So, how was your Halloween?

Chapter 5

The flashing red and blue lights loomed large in Beth's rear-view mirror. A high speed cross-country chase was inevitable.

I had murdered a man and now I was full of remorse. I was sickened by the thought of what I had just inflicted on a fellow human being. I began humming For he's a jolly good fellow to ease my piercing pain. It didn't work.

Regret, sorrow, despair. My life was altered forever, and although she didn't know it, so was Beth's.

Then suddenly, the police car turned off the highway and onto a gravel road.

"Wow, that's a relief", I say to Beth.

*****

With that murder thing behind us, I figured it was time to explore new regions of Beth and I's relationship.

"Beth, I'm a homosexual," I announce flatly, expecting a volcanic eruption.

"Good," she replied, "I was afraid I'd have to sleep with you on of these days."

"Well, that was counterproductive," I think. I'm not really a homosexual, but I always wondered what it would be like to say that to someone.

"Actually Beth, I was just kidding," and as soon as I said it I knew it sounded like that answer on Jeopardy when the guy knows he's wrong but he hit the button so he had to answer anyways.

"Ian, you don't have to lie to me. You're gay, face it."

"Actually Beth, I'm not. I was just bored. You know, just talkin'."

"Ian, you like boys, okay? It's alright...if you like that kind of thing"

Well this is just getting out of control, Beth seemed as though she knew I wasn't gay, but was desperately trying to convince herself that I was.

"Beth, I'm not homosexual, I'm just confused about my heterosexuality."

Damn. There I go again, lying for fun, this has gotta stop.

"Ian, you're gay and I don't have to sleep with you, end of conversation."

"Well, actually I'd really like to have sex with you, I think about it all the time."

What a relief, I finally stopped lying.

"Sorry Ian, if you weren't gay, I would, but since you are, I can't."

*****

It was approaching midnight and Beth and I were getting tired. The faint glitter of the headlights beat softly down on the pavement.

"Next town we hit, we'll stay over," Beth sleepily mumbled.

"Yeah sure," I replied trying to sound indifferent, but in reality my heart skipped a beat. A motel, a girl. Perfect. Maybe now I could prove my raging heterosexuality.

"And don't get any ideas Ramone, there'll be none of your boyfriends in our room tonight," Beth demanded.

Ramone. What's up with that? All I did was make a little joke earlier on and now she's making me pay.

"Listen Beth, I promise you, I don't like little boys, I like little girls."

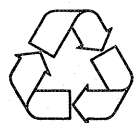

Damn. That didn't quite come out as I had hoped.

Beth started laughing. I looked at her and started laughing. It was a damn laugh-a-thon.

"I know you're kidding Ian. I could tell you were straight the moment I laid eyes on you. Now let's find that motel you silly guy."

Doing my best Homer Simpson impression in head I think, "Wooooo Hooooo!!!"

And at that moment Beth pulled into the parking lot of the "Rising Blanket Motel." The vacancy sign throbbled.

It was the winter of my discontent. I don't know why I wasn't content with my life but I was. After living many years as a busboy in a kindergarten cafeteria my life suddenly came into focus when something hit me. It was that little brat Bobby Fischer (no relation), he had hit me with a spoonful of oatmeal. Luckily it was cinnamon oatmeal so it blended nicely with my wardrobe. Soon more and more kids started pelting me with hot, tasty Quaker oatmeal, you know the kind that that old guy from Cocoon is always pushing like its better than sex.

It might, actually, be better than sex. I don't know because I'm saving myself for Kathy Ireland. She really likes me but with all her traveling she can't settle down with a guy like me. How do I know that? My mother, who happens to be good friends with Ms. Ireland, told me so.

Anyways, there I was, standing in the middle of the school cafeteria when I became so enraged that I grabbed a small child standing next to me and started swinging him around like some kind of club. The screams soon filled the school. When the principal and all his crew were gathered around they asked for some sort of explanation, and they said something about my job being on the line. So I did what any insane busboy would have done. I blamed the whole thing on Bobby Fischer (no relation), and since Bobby was knocked unconscious from the pummeling I gave him, he couldn't dispute what I had to say. So the teachers gave me a big reward, told me to take the day off 'with pay', and get some rest.

So I went home, and that's when I decided that I had to change my profession. It wasn't because of the fact that I felt bad, but rather that I was able to convince a group of highly educated people that a small unconscious child had attacked an entire cafeteria full of children and was able to render them all unconscious. So, I called the school and told them I was going to be a politician because I had what it takes to really make it in the world.

Sincerely
R. Klein.

ATHLETES GET A CHANCE TO SHOW THEIR STUFF!

By Jana Kolot

This weekend the NAIT Ooks get a chance to show us whether or not they're worthy of our participation. The Hockey, Basketball, Volleyball, and Badminton teams all have home openers on the NAIT campus this Friday and Saturday.

Do we really want to go out and support our teams that have shown us in the past that they are not worthy of support? I think so. We could give them one more chance. Apparently there will be specials in the Nest and lots of door prizes to be won at every event. That's a good reason to show up.

Winning football tickets to the Eskimos final home game is another good reason. I will be at each of the home games at some point in time this weekend. If you are the first NAIT Student, with your I.D. card, to find me at one of these games, you will win yourself a pair of Eskimo tickets (Valued at $50).

I know that you are all thinking about why you should waste a precious Friday and Saturday (the only time you don't have to be at NAIT), but think about it. You may have a member of a NAIT Athletic team in one of your technologies. What would be more fun than to go to one of their games, see them get smashed in the face with a puck or ball, and then have the opportunity to make fun of them the rest of the year! And you know that you've always wanted a chance to be that obnoxious heckler in the crowd that just won't shut up. Well, here's your chance. A golden opportunity.

So give yourself a break from your hectic schedules, go to one of the games, enjoy a few specials in The Nest, have some freshly popped popcorn from the concession and encourage (or make fun of) your favorite NAIT athlete.

P.S. Don't forget to look for the Sports Editor - she has to get rid of these football tickets! (Eight of them.)

AC-AC Runners

by: John Reeves

The NAIT men finished 8th and the women 10th at the ACAC cross-country running championships held in Fort McMurray last Saturday. NAIT as a team did not finish well this year, but the individuals put in a great effort on NAIT's behalf. Each runner improved tremendously over the training season and had personal success at the ACAC event.

The men's team event was won by Mount Royal followed by Augustana and Grant MacEwan. Individually the 8 km event was won by Todd Pawlencuk of Concordia, the NAIT men were Shaun Hogg 22nd, Robert Cameron 25th, Allen Scharff 44th, and Derek Logan 51st. The field included some 72 men runners from 11 colleges.

The women's team event was won by SAIT followed by Mount Royal and Red Deer. The 4 km event was won by Tamara Salomen of SAIT. NAIT's women were Christine Oelker 30th, Roxanne Stolarchuk 34th and Gwen Dorwart 35th. The women's event included 48 runners from ten different colleges and institutes.

The event this year was very competitive. The quality of runners has increased significantly over the past few years. Gone are the days when you could develop a team out of recreational runners and do well at the ACAC championships. The NAIT runners ran well and improved significantly over the year but the quality of the competition was too much for us this year.

Our next event on the Cross-Country calendar is the Alberta - B.C. enterprovincial championships held in Kelowna on November 6, 1994. Alberta sends its best runners to this event to try to beat B.C. Last year B.C. took both the men's and women's events. This year Alberta's team looks really strong. I hope we can do well.

For most of the NAIT runners, we switch to cross-country skiing now. The practices are on Monday and Wednesday at 4:30. Meet in front of the gym or contact the coaches for more information. John Reeves 8575 (S-105) Frank McNamara 7042 (J-105).

If you think you may have a problem with drugs, give yourself a break. There is a way out with the help of other recovering addicts in narcotics Anonymous. We have been there.

Strong and Inexperienced

That not only best describes the Nait women's volleyball team this year, it also describes the entire league. All the teams in the league, both north and south divisions, are full of new players and a few new coaches.

The Oaks first introduction to college volleyball took place in Medicine Hat on October 14-16 and was a definite wake up call to the entire team. On the 21st and 22nd of October, the women took part in a tournament at G.M.C.C. which hosted eight A.C.A.C. teams and four from British Columbia. All the teams were quite evenly matched and the Nait women were right in the middle of the pack with their level of play.

Returning player Cora Lee Rude has shown how much a year's experience really means and has been the most consistent member on the team this season. The unexpected addition to the team has been the play of the setters. Both April Perrett and Anne Begin have shown that they are capable of controlling and offense and play at the pace needed to be competitive in the A.C.A.C.

Good Luck to Nait Oaks women's volleyball team!

Penalties Hurt Oaks...Again

by Brian Stein

EDMONTON - After two weeks of the regular season, the Oaks are 1-2-0. The Oaks will attempt to snap a two-game losing streak when they play the Augustana University College Vikings in a home and home series. The Oaks are in Camrose on Friday for an 8:00 p.m. start and the Vikings are at the NAIT Arena on Saturday at 7:00 p.m.

On Friday, October 28th, the Concordia College Thunder scored three goals in the last five minutes of the second period en route to a 6-3 victory over the NAIT Oaks at the NAIT Arena. Two of the goals came on the power play as NAIT's Glenn McGillivray was serving a five minute major for elbowing their goaltender.

Mirsad Mujcin paced the thunder with two goals and two assists. Frank Esposito, Mike Tavaroli, Bill Laforge, and Dan Leckelt also scored for Concordia. Peter Kasowski, Jason Soroohan and Dean Buchanan replied for the Oaks.

Outshooting Concordia 46-36, the Oaks led 2-1 after the first and trailed 4-3 following two periods.

ON THE BENCH: For the third straight season, the NAIT Oaks Hockey team will be collecting used sports equipment for Sport Central's "Tiger Goldstick Equipment Drive." Bins will be at the NAIT Arena until the end of November... The Concordia College Thunder relocate to the NAIT Arena for a pair of games with the CFR coming to town. The Thunder host Mount Royal on Friday at 7:00 p.m. and on Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

COACH'S CORNER

By Graham Wood

With just 6 returning players this season, there seemed ample opportunity for the incoming rookies to land a spot on the 1994 Oaks Soccer team.

A record number of trialists with an abundance of enthusiasm and competitive skill gave notice to both veterans and each other alike, it was not going to be easy to make the grade.

In my 4 years coaching NAIT Men's Soccer teams, I've witnessed an every improving standard in the quality of the soccer playing student and it's becoming increasingly difficult to make final selections during the try outs.

I don't want it to appear I'm complaining, on the contrary, it's extremely encouraging and reflects on the improvement and growth of the game overall.

The try outs eventually resulted in a final squad of 19 players who embarked immediately into an intensive schedule of daily practices, in order to prepare for the regular season.

A positive start in our first league game, with a win at Red Deer College, came to an abrupt end the following week with a narrow loss to Grant MacEwan. Six successive wins ensued and kept us in the race for a playoff berth, however, a loss against the ACAC favorites Mount Royal, a game which saw both NAIT central defenders collide and subsequently leave for hospital after only 20 minutes of play, changed everything. This unfortunate incident undoubtedly played a major part in us losing the game and produced the added blow of being eliminated from the playoffs. Our final game against local rival Grant MacEwan was, from this point in time, academic, the question for NAIT was one of pride. It was answered emphatically. A sterling performance from each player reversed a first half, one goal deficit. Completely dominating play, NAIT scored two memorable goals in the second half to close the season on a positive note.

The season now over all that is left is to present respective awards to the deserving individuals. I would like to give special mention to Captain Brain Austen for a job well done, thank coaches Joe Feula, Kevin Jones and physio Tina Laliberte, and especially the players for a most enjoyable season.

Soccer Split

By: Bob Buchan

On Saturday, October 22, the Oaks women soccer team faced a must win situation to advance to the conference final. They commenced strongly but against the flow of the game the Griffins scored two goals in the first half.

The second half saw the Oaks attacking persistently, but unfortunately the ball did not find the back of the McEwan net. Hence, the griffins emerged with a 2-0 victory on October 23rd. The Oaks eager to finish the season with a win took charge of the game with Amanda Braear scoring in the first half and Tracy Gudmundson scoring the insurance goal in the second half. The shut out went to NAIT's keep in Tannis Bullion. NAIT emerged with a 2-0 victory.

The coaching staff would like to thank the Oaks for their great effort throughout the season to keep their playoff hopes alive to the very last weekend of the regular season. Well done Oaks!

Old Bulls Vs. Young Bulls

By Rick Lucas

Since when does runner-up take precedence? I guess they do, when runner-up works for The Nugget. Do the Blue Bombers boast about being 2nd best after losing last year's Grey Cup to the mighty Eskis? No, they cower in shame!

A couple of weeks ago, in the NAIT Intramural Flag Football championship game, the old moral story of old bull VS. young bull came true again. (You know it, "Let's walk down and #$$@% them all!")

After a regular season of only one defeat, the 4th year Instrumentation Apprentice team (avg. age of 31.5) entered their first ever playoff elimination.

Competition was tough and weather conditions brutal (wind factors from airport bordering on typhoonish). Finally, after four elimination rounds, the Apprentices and the techs from RTA met again in the "NAIT Cup". (They had met previously in regular season with the same results that occurred later this day.)

Tight defenses, on both sides of the ball, kept the game close in the first half. Then after a brief rejuvenation period, the "old bulls" began to run away (walk away) with it. In the final series, RTA lucked into a last ditch effort touchdown to put them within 6 points. The "old bulls" then ran out the last seconds of the clock and took the "NAIT Cup". Final score 32-26.

So then, why did RTA get their photo published in The Nugget for being second best? The Instrumentation Apprentices were by far the best team!!

Team members: Birk Bablitz, Craig Best, Brent Block, Don Blanchette, Brian Chayer, Duane Jaschke, Dave Jorgensen, Arden Knaus, Al Loughheed, Rick Lucas, and Darcy Tieule.

The Nugget staff would like to thank Rick for writing this article.

Any contributions are greatly appreciated and will be printed providing we have space.

To Business Students,
So that's what they're teaching you guys over there. How to walk around with boards tied to your feet. You guys looked mighty impressive. I bet that comes in handy trying to do your Accounting homework. You guys suck. Sincerely, Everybody at NAIT who laughed.

Architecture class 2B issues an intertech challenge. For 1st and 2nd year students in Arch. Tech we are challenging you all for participation tech points. If you want that $100 bar tab at the end of the year, you better show it by joining in all the festivities. If you don't know how tech points work... ask! See you all out there! N.A.S.S.T.Y.

GRAPEVINES

To the pedestrian I saw...
Walking towards the LRC on Oct. 18 at about 8 a.m. You have dark hair and darkish eyes. You were wearing a faded blue jean jacket, with jeans that almost perfectly matched and light runners. You also had a navy or black and tan knapsack over your left shoulder. You were looking at me until you were about 1/3 of the way across the crosswalk. I was kriving the first car on the far right-hand side of the road. I stopped to let you cross. I just had to say "Hey, how's it going?"

GRAPEVINES

Dear Rude and Rugged Construction Engineers,
We're finally getting noticed!!
Thank you for thinking of us. If you naughty men made your way out to our parts of the woods, you could find out what we have to offer! Our building is oh so cold, which leaves us spending most of our time cuddling up to the heaters. If any of you single rude and rugged "gentlemen" are brave enough to handle a majority female school, come over and keep us warm!
"Innocently Yours, The Shivering Secretaries of Westwood.

To the "rude and rugged" engineers,
If you guys are really rude and rugged, and can handle our female urges, then come on down! Show us what you're made of, sweep us from our misery, go where no man has gone before!
Signed, 2nd year Westwood girls.

IF YOU'RE DRIVING?
WHO'S DRIVING?

GRAPEVINES

To all of the men,
Listen to what we have to say
We want you to come to our cabaret,
The date is set for November 5th
So come with us and let's get ripped.
It's at Club Malibu on the south side
We're going to drink lots so arrange a ride,
Whether you're a Denturist, Lab
tech or Engineer
Make sure you're there to buy us a beer.
The last day for tickets is tomorrow
So if you don't have 5 bucks find some to borrow,
Tickets are available while quantities last
So everyone come, it's gonna be a blast.
SEE YOU THERE.
Signed, 72 female dental assistants.
P.S. Tickets in main lobby Thur
11-1, Fri 10-12.

To the Unknown Comic,
Just because we enjoy the odd squeezeable Suzy doll is none of you're concern. You should be more worried about your inferiority complex!
Signed, Studs R Us.
P.S. And you wonder why you're unknown! How bout we call you Krusty the Clown.

To the girl with the curly brown hair with the blonde girl sitting on her lap on Halloween in the tower around 1:00 p.m.,
Sorry for looking at you. We don't get many pretty girls like you in EET. Judging by your expression you didn't appreciate the gaze.
Sorry didn't mean to offend.
Signed, Some guy named Joe in EET.

To Tangerine (Pebbles),
Hey you sick little monkey. I saw you eating those funny shaped bananas in the bar. Is Lauderdale's your second home or your only home. Are you still proud of me.
From, Betty.

Thanks for all the support last Friday, and we'll see you all again at the next NASSTY party!
NASSTY Grad Council

Dearest Gill? Keith? (We think!)
in Lab A10,
We have seen you swimming at the pool. Enough said!
Love always, The eyeball in the wall.
P.S. Please reply.

To Desire with an E in ME, Thursday night, Oct. 27, we were having a friendly conversation about Chevy's and Fords. I don't believe we had finished the debate. I'm willing to put my Chevy up against your Ford. So get your tranny fixed Miss L.
Signed, Shane.

To the one who wears the yellow
Meadowlark shirt in Arch 1A,
I have been watching you. I think you're pretty top notch!
Love, A Well-endowed woman.

Hey Jinglebells,
Get a real bar! Join the rest of us at Barry T's. We can teach you a few things. You may have beaten us to The Nugget, however we will see who laughs last...
Signed, Twinkle Toes and Fysh.

To Sherry,
Sorry to hear you were sore after riding Chris. Next time try using spurs.
Signed, Tuesday Night Coffee
Club.
