VOLUME 33, ISSUE 15

CASH, CARDS AND HANDBOOKS

by Scott Hayes

Christmas came and went and the NAITSA staff sent a little joy to 500 of their friends. The question is: at what cost?

Concern arose over the last few weeks that these Christmas cards with pictures of the executive staff on the front also carried a large price tag. Some rumors circulated that up to $2000 was spent on these gestures of goodwill. Fortunately, they were only rumors.

As Activities vice president Scott Fediow (and the man in charge of ordering the cards) explains, "We spent $425 on 550 personalized cards. They were sent out to department heads, alumni, business associates... as a means of touching base and thanking people for their support."

Meanwhile, there seems to be no relief for new students left without a handbook. Despite the fact that those who have paid NAITSA fees are entitled to the handbooks, supplies have completely run out and a new order is not being placed. President Chris Wilson defended this decision by saying that "handbooks are delivered before the first term starts but one pallet is saved for registration in December." He elaborated further that pallet should have been sufficient but extra programs were added resulting in enrollment going up by a few hundred people. Students receive their copies by simply asking for them and are left to their honour to only take one. Yet the evidence shows that some take more.

Chris Chelmick, the vice president for Communications, indicated that next year NAITSA might seek out more efficient alternatives to this system.

'Students receive their copies by simply asking for them...'

Controlling your wallet

by Ryan Clubb

Did you get caught with large bills this past Christmas? It happens to many people every year. The worst is trying to fit a student budget to all the gifts you have to buy for family and friends. How long will it take before you can pull yourself out of debt, or even be able to buy your second semester books? Here's a few ideas that might help you out next Christmas. Instead of buying gifts, try making them. You don't have to have any talent in order to make a "crafty" looking gift. Many craft stores have very expensive materials. Pick out some things and create a gift for you friends or family. I'm sure you have all heard or participated in a family draw. That's where all the names go into a hat (or a bowl, or a pot) and each person draws out a name. That way, instead of spending twenty or thirty dollars on five or six different people, you can spend up to one hundred dollars on one person. True, it is the thought that counts, but don't you feel better when you can give someone a larger gift? I know I do. Of how about this, start shopping now. Pick up things through the year. Have you ever seen a sale at a shopping mall, where there are a few items that would make great Christmas gifts for one person or another? Well why not pick it up, and then hide it until December! This way, your Christmas budget is balanced over a whole year, instead of one month. Also, you may be left with more money to buy a nice gift for that special someone. Try one or more of these ideas for the upcoming year and see if it helps.

Sexual Healing

Sexual Awareness Week Is January 8 - 12

by Scott Hayes

A man may spend every waking minute thinking about it and never be truly aware.

January 8-12, 1996 has been designated Sexual Awareness Week at NAIT. Although not as event-filled as the AIDS or Alcohol and Drug Awareness Weeks, NAITSA

Fediow explains its importance as "providing information to increase awareness of sexually transmitted diseases" so that people can use that knowledge to think before they act.

A man may spend every waking minute thinking about it and never be truly aware.

An information booth was set up on Wednesday with brochures on primarily sexual conduct issues with some pamphlets regarding other topics like sexual assault and harassment. In an effort to promote safer sex, condoms were also distributed to students.

SEXUAL AWARENESS WEEK

by Ryan Clubb

As you may have noticed, this week is Sexual Awareness Week. Every year at this same time, displays come out, and events are organized for all students. But this year, it is a part of Health and Wellness Month. This is something new and just started this year. What do you think when you hear the words "sexual awareness"? I bet it has something to do with sex. To most students, it does. Some first thoughts include condoms, safe sex, AIDS, sexually transmitted diseases, and birth control. Sexual awareness week has a lot to do with the psychology of sex.

That is, informing people of things they might not have known, and dealing with public concerns. Sex has never been a light matter, but even more so today. Diseases our parents and grandparents had to deal with are still around, but we are faced with some more potent ones. You can't suggest sex nowadays without second thoughts. Another common problem is pregnancy. For all the women out there, what do you think you would do if you had a child while attending school? I don't know what it's like, but there would certainly be some tough decisions to make. And for the guys, what would you do if your girlfriend, or wife was pregnant and had a child while you were still in school? Would you be able to cope with the stress? That's what sexual awareness is all about, helping people cope with their problems. If you have any questions or concerns, or if you just want to get involved, stop by the NAITSA office. "You might learn something that could save your life."

'Some first thoughts include condoms, safe sex, AIDS, sexually transmitted diseases, and birth control.'

Learning to control your drinking

Capital Health Authority - Public Health Services offers a free and confidential self-help program for people who feel they may be drinking too much or whose drinking habits may be causing them a problem. "Drinking Decisions" was developed in conjunction with AADAC to enable people to evaluate their drinking and offers a choice of 3 programs if they want to make some changes. If one of your New Year's resolutions is to cut down on your drinking and you feel you could use some help, call the Drinking Decisions program at 482-9893 between January 2 - 19 for the winter program or contact your NAIT Health Services office for more information.

HEATHER JOHNSON
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

What are your New Year's Resolutions? Most people at this time of year resolve to do something new to better themselves - probably the most common resolutions are to quit smoking and lose weight. Students may also resolve to quit procrastinating.

Theoretically, New Year's Resolutions are a great idea. After all, what a better time to change than at the beginning of a new year. But, when you really sit down and think about it, you are better off making resolutions in... lets say... March.

The problem with improving your behaviour in January is most of us are coming off a string of mis-

Resolved not to make New Year's Resolutions behaving. How many of you worked out during the Christmas holidays? Or, better yet, how many of you said no to that second piece of apple pie.

By resolving to lose ten pounds in January, you will lose the ten pounds you gained sitting on your butt drinking egg nog and watching "How the Grinch Stole Christmas".

I've tried to make New Year's Resolutions before and it was a waste of my time. I didn't make any resolutions this year - not that I couldn't improve my behaviour.

Rather, I'm going to wait until spring to make my resolutions. At least by then I'll be out of my Christmas rutt and back in the swing of things.

May-be this way I'll really be able to improve myself. If I were to make New Year's Resolutions, the best I could hope for is to elevate myself to my November plateau. And that is if I actually stuck to my resolutions in the first place.

NAIT and Hayes

SCOTT F. HAYES
NEWS-EDITOR

There is a less popular Tommy Lee Jones movie from the early 1980's entitled "Nate and Hayes" wherein he plays a good-natured pirate who teams up with a missionary to overcome the forces of evil. Whether Tommy was Nate or Hayes doesn't matter but what does is that he was part of a team. Together, they were stronger than if Nate avoided Hayes.

Allow me to introduce myself: my name is Scott Hayes and I am one of your new News Editors. It seems to be almost a tradition, albeit relatively young as traditions go, for the Nugget to keep a Hayes on staff. Last year, my brother Christopher was an assistant editor here. As you can see now by my earlier yet precocious analogy that Nate, or rather, NAIT, and Hayes make a good team.

Along with my news co-editor Ryan Clubb, it is our duty to provide you, the student body, with all of the information on news that affects you as students. If there is an issue that you feel is important and should be investigated, come talk to me. If you have concerns about the objectivity of the news or any other aspect of content or quality, come talk to me. I'm accountable because I serve you.

It is my mandate to write news stories that are as informative as they are interesting because there isn't a point of writing an article that nobody will read. It compares to asking "if a tree falls in a forest, does anybody hear?" Have no illusions, this does not mean I will write pap, intellectual mush, tabloid-type material. It does signify that if there is a way to write a smart, unbiased news story that people want to read, then I will find that way.

More Resolutions

by Ryan Clubb

The old year is gone, and the new year has just begun. Every year people make resolutions by which to better themselves. How did you do with your resolutions from last year? Better yet, what resolutions did you make for this year? Some common ideas were to lose weight (especially the weight gained over Christmas break), cut down on smoking, and drink less. Some not so common ideas were to be nicer, gentler person, or to "love" as many women/men as possible. Myself, I didn't make any resolutions. Why make promises I can't keep? I suppose there are ways I could improve myself, but what happens if I don't reach the goals I set? I get depressed, and feel bad about myself. Besides, you shouldn't have to make promises just to be a better person. However, resolutions are a tradition, and have been for many years. So here's a resolution I think we can all agree on, in Latin (or so I was told): PUKUS NOMORUS.

The Internet is out of control

by Greg Scratchley

Oh God! It's happening again!

The 1950's brought North America into a new era, one of technology, commercialism, and competition. Television became a fixture in our homes, changing the face of communication and business without remorse or hindsight. Well, it's happening again.

In my last article, I spoke about the general impact of the Internet. Now it's time for a specific consequence of its massive growth.

Watching television the other night, I was pummeled nearly senseless by what must resemble the first "sale" on T.V.'s in 1950. The Internet, in addition to becoming a wonderful source of information both educational and entertaining, is turning with violent ferocity into a Global Billboard.

What started me to this conclusion? Two commercials back to back advertising "World Wide Web page" addresses for their respective corporate identities. No mention of services, no mention of products, or the benefit of dealing with these entities, just their addresses. With a colorful, bold and almost frightening style, two of this country's largest banks postured for battle on the biggest playing field yet, the Internet, and we all know BANKS don't spend a bloody nickel unless they plan to get something out of it.

Where am I heading with this you ask? Where is the 'net' heading with this? Easy. To the bank.

MONEY. You know, that green stuff we students don't see much of? The 'net' is going commercial, and in one mother of hurry. Some say this is Baaaaad, some say this is Gooood, but who is right?

This rampant infusion of capitalism has provided the Internet with some good things; standards for conduct, and a tighter regulation of the forms of design and scripting of the language of the net. Both a welcome change. However, others feel that this commercialism is an invasion of their haven for free speech and expression.

Truth of the matter is that the influx of commercialism hasn't invaded the news groups, the REAL free speech capitol of the telecommunicating world. Moreover the world wide web is still the biggest hodgepodge of goodies out there from the Blue Chips of Fortune 500, to the Blue Room at Dirks Dirty Ditties. I say to the advertisers, "Hey, just don't get pushy" and to the die-hard users, "Hey, don't worry."

"The times they are-a-changin'." So fellow long time users... we who are knuckle deep in sweat of the Internet will be it's organizers, and proliferators one day, so be advised — WE HAVE A RESPONSIBILITY to try to maintain the largest bunch of yahoo partiers in the world, while allowing the Fancy Pants exec's to pass out free goodies! Think you can handle it?

Well? Can You?

Video Review

by Alex Machine

If you just want to lounge at home this weekend, watching a decent comedy, the "Friday" is a must see. This film has to be one of the roughest comedies I have seen to date. The movie stars rapper Ice Cube and stand-up comic Chris Tucker. Together these two give a hilarious performance as two homies hangin' out in the hood on a Friday. The film charts the course of the whole day, the various characters the guys come into contact with, and the crazy st they manage to get into. Almost every character is enjoyable to watch, especially Mr. Jones (Cube's dad), Ezel (crackhead), D-bo (the bully), and Cube himself. Though without a doubt, the funniest of them all is Smokey, portrayed by Chris Tucker. Tucker's various voices and mannerisms are crisp and original. Ice Cube also deserves praise for co-writing the movie, along with D.J. Pooh. The film's soundtrack is also dope and features old funk, new funk, R & B, soul, and of course, rap. So check out the Friday movie and soundtrack, you won't be disappointed.

Book Review

by Alex Machine

If you like to read novels, particularly thrillers, then check out "Relic" by Douglas Preston and Lincoln Child. The book is about a mysterious beast that is stalking staff and visitors at the New York Museum of Natural History. Initially, the book reads almost like a detective novel, as the police and other parties scramble to discover the cause behind all the recent murders. Then the book shifts gears as the beast is revealed and becomes more thriller-oriented. All in all, "Relic" is a damn good read, up there with Jurassic Park and The Lost World. The movie will be coming out later this year and it will be interesting to compare the two and see if the film can do the book justice. If the film becomes a hit, remember you read it here first!

Next Wednesday at 5:00 p.m. in the Nest, Phil Dechambault, Roland Dechambault, Ron Dechambault, and Richard Keller; collectively know as "Not Goin' To Vegas", will be performing live in what promises to be an intense, diversified show. The group consists of two brothers (Phil and Ron), their cousin (Roland) and a childhood friend (Richard), who all hail from Russell, Manitoba. They are relatively young for a band (the guys came together in 1993) but have amassed quite a following in Winnipeg playing the nightclub circuit. "Not Goin' To Vegas" is also popular among the local music critics and many reviewers have compared their sound to that of Watchman. The band has also been praised for giving exciting live performances and their gig at the Nest should be no exception. I had the opportunity to listen to their self-titled debut CD and the group shows a lot of potential. The production was solid and lead singer Phil has one of those intense voices that invoke emotions. If this quartet sings and plays the way they do on their album, the show next Wednesday should be pretty damn good. So come down to the Nest next Wednesday at 5:00 and check out "Not Goin' To Vegas" on their cross-country tour.

'So come down to the Nest next wednesday at 5:00...'

And you

1996. I knew I lived to see this year arrive for a reason. In only a few months I'll be eating, sleeping, and breathing the gala that comes around only twice a decade — the Summer Olympics.

It's been four long years since Barcelona. This summer, Atlanta, Georgia will be hosting this — the Academy Awards of the sports world.

The USA, China, and Russia will battle it out for top medal count as always. And what about Canada? Our native land is going to give it their all. Canada won't necessarily bring home a truck load of medals, but they will give the world something to think about. The summer Olympics aren't Canada's forte. The winter Olympics have always been more gratifying for us North of the border. But every year, our Canadian athletes gain more respect.

I only wish it was the same for our Oaks. NAIT's reputation is climbing the ladder of respect slowly, but we are moving up. My hopes for the Oaks in 1996 are rather

'The three championship banners decorating the gym are getting lonelier each year.'

big, but significant. It would be amazing to be able to give this school some pride. The only way this is going to happen is if our Oaks start winning big. While, it's far from sight, a new banner needs to be hung in the gym and even in the arena. The three championship banners decorating the gym are getting lonelier each year.

With the exception of our hockey, swimming, and badminton teams, the Oaks have a lot of ground to cover. There are only 6 weeks left of league play. The basketball clubs are fighting to stay alive. They're seated last in the league. Our volleyball teams are in mediocre contention for a championship as they're sitting in fourth place in their division. If they can play to their potential, NAIT volleyball could be the ones to bring hope to our student community.

On the other hand, NAIT basketball is echoing Vancouver's success in the NBA. It's nearly half-way through the season and the men have yet to win a game. At least the women are doing better than last year. They have a win under their belts.

NAIT is housing some amazing talent. It's a shame another season is being flushed down with the rest — never to be remembered as anything special.

Or will it? Can the Oaks pull it off and win in the end? It's all up to the athletes and coaches. How bad do they want to win??

NAIT Mens Volleyball

by Mark Mahl

Over the Christmas holidays, the men's volleyball team embarked on a 7 day eastern excursion to Oshawa for the 1st Annual Durham College Overkill Cup. This tournament was going to spur the men to make the play-offs in the second half. This tournament sported 5 nationally-ranked CCAA college teams and 4 CIAU competitive university programs. After getting spanked by the University of Montreal in our first

'... meeting a women's Swedish hockey team...'

match, the Oaks woke up pushing 14th ranked Algonquin College (ON) to three and then crushing Wilfred Laurier University 15-9, 15-7. That victory looked to be the qualifier for "A" side playdowns, but the crazy upset victory from Laurier over Algonquin sent the men's volleyball team down to the "B" playdowns by 1 point.

From there the Oaks went on to crush L'Outawaay third ranked in Quebec, 15-7, 15-7 and fought hard to win the Consolation Cup over Medicine Hat 17-16, 15-13. Team MVP went to upstart setter Richard Bowie from Banff.

All players contributed and improved over the weekend, notable stellar performances were by John Huk against Laurier, Luc Billo against Algonquin, Richard Bowie against Medicine Hat, and Sasha

Richard Bowie, Tourney MVP, setting against Cambrian College.

Pokeda against L'Outawaay College.

The Oaks just didn't play volleyball all 7 days. We did the tourist thing, taking in the Hockey Hall of Fame, Skydome, CN Tower, Wayne Gretzky's Restaurant for dinner, meeting a women's Swedish hockey team, and we also managed to be interviewed on City TV and did a guest appearance on Much Music with VJ Natalie Richards introducing a video. A display of our trip will be up by the gymnasium for your viewing. Please come out and catch the rivalry against the GMCC Grifins on Saturday, January 13th (Women: 6:30, Men: 8:00 p.m.). After the game, enjoy some fun @ Club Malibu Bourbon Street on us.

WADE FENNIG GUEST COLUMNIST

After a twelve day sabbatical in Switzerland over the holidays, it sure was nice to get to Edmonton for some "home cooking" and a little Hockey Night in Canada. Never in my life would I have thought I'd have missed watching Todd Gill. This is not to say the hockey in Switzerland is not interesting. Those fellas can really throw the biscuit around over there. The problem for us was the only contact they enjoyed or allowed was in the pre-game handshake. It took us a while to adjust (translation: picture Mick Vukota getting put on a line with Mario and Jagr).

After two games of sitting in the penalty box, we got our acts together and started to play their style.

We finished with a 3-1-1 record, representing our country and our school admirably. This does not mean they didn't think we were crazy, but for the most part, our reception from the Swiss was overwhelmingly pleasant. Over the course of the trip, we learned a lot about the country and a lot more about each other. Jay Lines learned the most German profanity and became fluent in the art of insult. Mike "Jibbs" Walker impressed scouts with his play in two sports. He played stellar in goal while amazing many with his ability in the full speed body tumble luge which just happens to be an event considered for the next Olympics. Darby

'Darby Walker, Rob Mante, and myself somehow uncannily learned how to snore in unison...'

ONE FLEW OVER THE OOKS NEST

Walker, Rob Mante, and myself somehow uncannily learned how to snore in unison, much to the discontent of "perfect sleepers" in our room Stacey Rayan, Dan Kopec, and Josh Ray.

Rick Nichol became a wine connoisseur and quite a favorite with the ladies. He will deny this but he had quite a following. His play was out of this world. Trevor "Woody" Ball perfected the art of bad Roman Grekko wrestling. His 0-19 record for the trip was a personal low.

So as you can see, our trip was a success not only hockey wise, but culturally as well. We went over to have fun and play well and we feel we accomplished both. We saw a beautiful country, but learned there is no place like home. I love this game!!

Brandi's hopes for 1996 . . .

•The Summer Olympics — a Canadian to win an event and not get stripped of the medal.

•The Super Bowl (NFL) — who cares, the (San Francisco) 49ers are out.

•N B A Championships — the Toronto Raptors or Vancouver Grizzlies to smuggle the championship across the border and make history. (OK it's next to impossible, but someone needs to get revenge on the US for stealing our Grey Cup).

•Stanley Cup (NHL) — I'm not a die hard Oilers fan (sorry, I left my heart in Vancouver), but it would be nice if they were to pull off a miracle and bring home the Cup. (If not, can we take down the darn "City of Champions" signs around town??)

•World Cup Soccer Qualifying — Canada to qualify!

•World Figure Skating Championships — it really doesn't matter. The important part is that the championships are here in Edmonton!

•Golf (LPGA) — it doesn't snow when the pros come to town this summer.

'... it would be nice if they were to pull off a miracle and bring home the Cup.'

NAIT Hockey in Europe

by Brian Stein

For the first time in six seasons, the NAIT Ooks Hockey Team embarked on a European tour during the holiday season. The Ooks traveled to Switzerland this time and posted a record of three wins, one loss, and one tie.

On Wednesday, December 27th, the 1995-96 Ooks made their Swiss debut in Films against EHC Chur of the Swiss National "B" League. NAIT scored three goals in each of the first two periods en route to a 7-0 win. Peter Kasowski notched a pair of goals while Stacey Rayan, Rob Plante, Josh Ray, Dan Kopec, and Trevor Ball rounded out the Ooks' scoring. Mitch Walker recorded the shutout for the Ooks blocking 30 shots.

On Thursday, December 28th, the Ooks traveled from their home base of Zug to Luzern to take on EHC Luzern of the Swiss First Division. NAIT jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first as Darby Walker and Stacey Rayan found the mark. Don Dunningan and Terence Oliver notched second period goals before Patrik Reuthemann broke Mike Walker's shutout bid. Patrick Mares of Luzern and Stacey Rayan traded goals in the third to give the Ooks a 5-2 triumph.

On Friday, December 29th, the Ooks faced their toughest test of the tour — a game against the defending Swiss National "A" League champions EHC Kloten. With a number of members of the Swiss National Team in the lineup, the Ooks played valiantly and trailed 6-4 early in the third before dropping a 9-4 decision. Wade Fennig completed the hat trick for NAIT and Derek Robinson added a single for the Ooks. Roman Wager turned in a four goal performance for Kloten with Michael Diemer chipping in a pair. Felix Hellenstein, Oliver Hoffmar and Manuele Celio rounded out the Swiss scoring.

On Saturday, December 30th, the Ooks traveled to the outdoor rink at Wohler to square off against Olten of the Swiss National "B" League. Stacey Rayan and Armand Boucher each tallied twice for the Ooks in a 5-1 win. Sandro Pisani also scored for the Ooks. Rene Achermann ended Mike Walker's shutout bid with 1:31 left in regulation.

On Tuesday, January 2nd, the Ooks and EHC Thurgau of the Swiss National "B" League battled to a 3-3 tie in Weinfelden. The Ooks received a pair of third period goals from Stacey Rayan to rally from a 3-1 deficit in the third. Derek Robinson also tallied for NAIT. Ralph Oll, Robert Weismann, and Rolf Schrepfer accounted for Thurgau's goals.

The wide ice surface and the cool temperatures in the smoke-filled venues and the rain and snow in Wohlen will leave a lasting impression on the Ooks as will the outgoing of appreciation from the fans, particularly those in Weinfelden who waited patiently outside the Ooks dressing room for autographs and pictures.

GRAPEVINES

To the Brewmasters at Westwood (and we don't mean beer), We heard your brew is fine; regular and fresh ground. It has come to my attention that some of you were caught cheating on your midterms; you used instant coffee instead of brewing your own, I can taste the difference. This type of behaviour will not be tolerated on your final, nor in the office.

Your idol, Juan Valdez
P.S. The photocopier is out of paper as well!

Be green, not blue; Environment Week could use you. Ideas should be dropped off in NAITSA's ENV mailbox, or volunteer at meetings Monday and Thursday at 16:30 in E-129.

To the girl in automobiles with the pink head band. If you like romance, respond via the Grapevines. I want to meet you.
L.G. From a guy who'll do ANYTHING for you.

Welcome back!
Well I hope you all had a great Christmas and a Happy New Year! Good luck to you all in '96 and have a fun semester.

Scott,
I met you at Club Malibu, I think you said you work there. I would be interested in getting to know you better. I am blonde, with green eyes and you complimented me on my blouse. Respond via grapevine
Alice in Wonderland.

Hey there groovy girls of NAIT. What does a hip dude gotta do to get a chance of meeting you? I would enjoy a night of confabulation with you, baby!
