1997 Career Seminar

The Best Yet!!

By Collette Hoppe

On March 18, the Office Administration Program held their annual Career Seminar, and this year's was a wonderfully executed event.

Every year, two classes from OA are responsible to arrange and plan a career seminar as part of their second year curriculum. This year's seminar was put on by the 2B & 2C classes. This industrious group of students put together an impressive trade show consisting of 14 companies; OA Computers, New Life Clinic, Bradson Staffing Service and Campus Reads and Needs were just a few that were there.

Aside from the trade show, the students also held a spectacular fashion show hosted by Eaton's. The fashion show highlighted Eaton's new spring line of clothing for this year.

The seminar also boasted an impressive array of guest speakers and break out session speakers. You may recognize some of these names: Dr. Stephen Murgatroyd and Mr. Jay Falcone. They both delivered wonderful speeches. The OA Students involved with the career seminar also collected an impressive number of door prizes all of which were generously donated by various different companies.

Top Right: Glenda Arden (2nd year OAA student) struts her stuff in some Eaton's apparel

Left: Scott Fediow (NAITSA VP Act) and an unnamed man take part in a fashion show at a predominantly female faculty. I wonder why?

Summer Jobs Abound

by Angela Doyle

Hire-A-Student/NAIT Counseling and Career Services

Summer job time is around the corner with only a month and a bit left of school. It seems, at this time of year, that everyone is out to help us find jobs.

The Hire-A-Student Job Hotline has opened well in advance of the actual job office opening which will take place May 1. The 24-Hour Hotline can be reached at 495-3900. New jobs are posted every day. As well as job listings in various categories, including career related, child care, health care, labour, retail, restaurant, and house painting/landscaping, the Hotline offers information on job search skills and employment equity.

According to Shaliza Shorey, an official for Human Resources and Development quoted in the Edmonton Journal, the Hotline is open now so that more employers will have posted employment opportunities by the time the office opens in May. To post jobs, employers should call 495-2070.

Closer to our home, NAIT Counseling and Career Services, located in the South Lobby, Room O111, offers similar services that are more specific to the technology you are studying. They have job listings sorted by technology, and relative even to last year, you have a greater number of opportunities. To expand on information about job search skills, CACS offers counseling in job search and interview techniques, as well as discussion of interests and aptitudes as related to career.

Angela Doyle Career Advice

The Angela Doyle Career Advice paragraphs are now also available here, in The Nugget. Trust me; I'm an expert.

I must warn you. Standard employment counseling services are valuable, but are not always correct. For instance, a few years ago, I came in to speak to a counselor who advised me not to apply to NAIT because my high school marks were of a quality unsuitable for our school. I listened to him and instead, I wasted four months of my life in Toronto, which was a mostly bad experience.

ADCA's general advice is not to take advisors' words as those of God, don't work for your parents' employer if you can avoid it, regardless of the money, because it won't lead you to any employment that you really want (that is, unless you want to grow up to be your parents), and look for a job before summer starts. Being smart and using common sense is just as important as any of these services to find a good summer job. (i.e. Only morons apply for six dollar an hour Safeway scab jobs, due to low job security, and the action screwing around your fellow workers.) Good Luck.

Special Olympics NAIT gets involved

by Michelle Gatien

Getting involved has taken a new meaning for many NAIT students and staff. Some staff and students took part in a bowlathon Saturday, to help raise funds for the summer Special Olympics.

Two teams from NAIT participated in the bowlathon. One, headed by our president, Dr. Souch, also includes NAITSA's Finance Academic VP Tara Tanguay and Business instructor Gordon Smith. The other team, headed by Vice President Jim Berg, includes Con Ed student Graham Black and Business instructor Anne Jacobs.

The Special Olympics gives mentally and physically challenged athletes the chance to develop specific sport skills; discipline required to train and be a part of a team; gain confidence and learn to set goals and accomplish goals; and develop self-confidence.

The Alberta Special Olympics Summer Games will include 9 events: these events include soccer, track and field, and bowling. Currently there are 100 athletes and coaches registered to participate in the Games June 20-22. At the Winter Games, which took place March 7-9 in and around Edson, 246 athletes and coaches participated.

The Special Olympics Athlete's Oath is: "Let me win. But if I cannot win, let me be brave in the attempt."

NAIT's other connections to the Special Olympics include: business students Brad Carson and Continuing Education's Graham Black, who serves as Treasurer and Finance Director respectively; Graham Black is also a member of the Summer Games Board; CST instructor Nora Jean Paradis, who is a board member of the Edmonton Special Olympics and the Summer Games Committee; Dan Maloney, the manager of Continuing Education, who is a Summer Games board member; Marion Marler, a Con Ed student, who is responsible for recruiting volunteers for the Summer Games; and Linda Hoffman, a business instructor, who is involved with the Edmonton Special Olympics and was involved for many years with the Special Olympics in Virginia.

For more information regarding the Special Olympics, or if you would like to volunteer for the summer games, please call the Special Olympics office at 453-8520.

NAITSA Meeting

by Angela Doyle

Despite twice as many executives as usual, the NAITSA meeting was short. The new and old executive attended the non-typical meeting that included just a few information and decision items.

The new budget was passed with corrections. The final reading of the constitutional amendment to forbid NAITSA executives for serving more than 2 consecutive terms occurred.

Jonathan Hogg, outgoing V.P. Athletics, reminded that there's still time for team captains to sign up for Battle of The Techs. The information brochures can be picked up at the NAITSA office. Six teams of at least 15 players have already signed up.

The next meeting will be April 8 in the Little Theatre at 4:30.

NAITSA ELECTIONS

New and Improved

by Michelle Gatien

Friday night marked the end of a VERY long and stressful week for a handful of students. At 8:00, in the Nest, the results of the NAITSA election were announced.

Pam Dill will take over from Ed Veldkamp as Communications Vice President. Her agenda includes making the Nugget more accessible and exciting for the student body.

Susan Dickson is the Activities VP-elect, taking over from Scott Fediow. Susan will put her time and effort into improving the spirit of the NAIT student body.

Angela Dickson, sister of Susan, is the new Financial/Academic Vice President, taking over from Tara Tanguay. With her determination and spirit, we are bound to see many good things result.

Scott Williams is our new Athletics Vice President. With his vast experience in sports we are bound to see good things coming out of his office.

Tara Tanguay, our outgoing Financial Academic Vice President, will be moving into the President's office. Tara promises to be a strong leader, who will help make NAITSA a strong voice for the students of NAIT.

Rounding out the list of the elected are Larry Stockman and Gordon Bennett, the two Board of Governors' representatives.

Congratulations to everyone that ran. Everyone did a really good job all week. At the candidates' speeches held across NAIT, all the candidates showed that they had good ideas, and usually managed to keep a smile on their faces, even at their most nervous times.

The new NAITSA executive was presented to General Council last Tuesday, March 25. They will take office April 1, beginning with a short training period with the current executive.

Servant Leadership & NAITSA

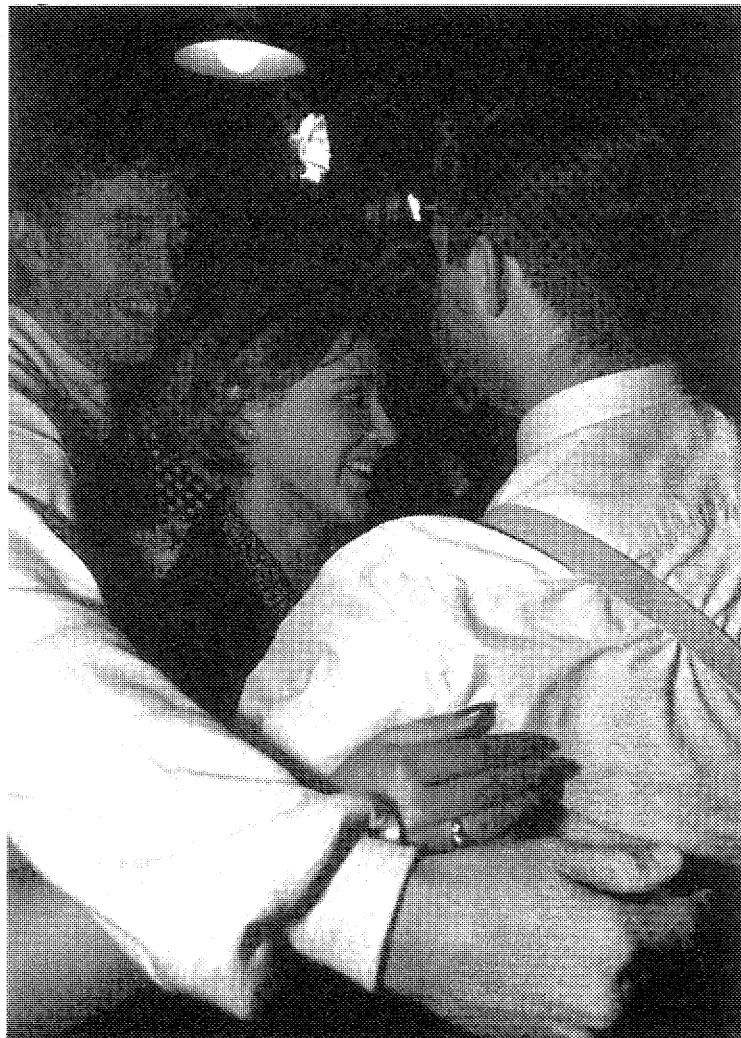

It begins with the natural feeling that one wants to serve, to serve first.

Then conscious choice brings one to aspire to lead. The difference manifests itself in the care taken by the servant - first to make sure that other peoples' highest priority needs are being served. The best test is this: Do those served grow as persons; do they, while being served, become healthier, wiser, freer, more autonomous, more likely themselves to become servants?

(Greenleaf, 1995).

To the sixteen candidates that ran in the NAITSA Elections - THANK YOU!

This year's NAITSA elections were exciting! There were 16 candidates, all of which put up a clean campaign during the week. A special congratulations goes out to those who were voted in as the new Executive for NAITSA, and a special thanks goes out to all who helped make the elections a success. All of the candidates and those members of the counting committee were very professional and efficient in all that they did. Good luck in the next year's activities and responsibilities!

Everyone deserved to win. And although the election experience was altogether good, I'm still bitter. Read this to find out why.

1. GOOD- Almost all of the sixteen candidates started out public speaking chickens, and we are all now pros. For me this means instead of doing all the hours of work on research and writing for group reports and the like, I can now do the shorter but previously more tortuous part, present it to the class.

BAD- Other than increased work load for my class mates, and possible increased feelings of arrogance brought on by politicking, public speaking improvement is the best of the good.

2. BAD- The best of the good is followed by the worst of the bad. We have elected a group something along the lines of a high school yearbook committee. Every member of the new executive belongs to a pre-existing group of five buddies who are all from The Tower. Along the lines of the yearbook committee parable, all the photos in the yearbook are going to be of the yearbook committee and half a dozen of their friends unless some part of the student body gets very demanding. This probably won't happen, though, because no one but the committee realizes how skewed their yearbook coverage is until it's already been published. The committee likes it that way.

GOOD- I know that lots of observers thought that the winners crying was annoying or whatever. But because public expression of emotion is too rare in our society, I think it was nice to see the yearbook committee so happy when they won. I would have cried, too, if I had won. Because besides winning, the yearbook committee won with all their friends and that's all the more reason to be happy and know it.

3. BAD- Our current Activities V.P., Scott Fediow, who did a decently kick ass job for the past few years was defeated. You may be beginning to think that I think Scott is God, having made it to both of the top whatever lists I have written this year. However, although he's a smart and motivated guy, he does have some opinions that are disputable (a matter of contention is his view of males with long hair). He said this while avoiding eye contact with me and my very masculine, yet long-haired boyfriend on the ski trip. I'm only slightly bitter about that one.

GOOD- He was defeated by the most energetic and enthusiastic candidate, Susan Dickson, a woman who probably deserved to win for any position over any other candidate running.

4. GOOD- The high level of stress and activity that the candidates experienced can enable you to survive a day with almost no sleep.

BAD- The high level of stress and activity during campaign week can cause you to learn absolutely nothing from classes despite decent attendance.

5. BAD- It was found that students, generally, have no idea what NAITSA does for them. GOOD- The campaign was an active one which hopefully has lead to a better informed student body. I, as I'm sure did many other candidates, took the time to speak to around 25 classes to explain to them what NAITSA does and could do. Perhaps awareness will inspire students to demand better service from the new executive. (Thanks to all the teachers and students who gave up class time to listen to my little speeches.)

6. GOOD- Because I was defeated for President, I will, as my parents say, be able to look for a "real" job, which means one where I will earn enough to start paying back my student loans. Also, judging by the small proportion of main campus students who voted for me despite a decently high NAIT profile I earned writing for the Nugget, and assuming the voters are well-informed, my views are not popular on main campus, and a person holding them should not be in a position to represent those who are in disagreement. You're still all wrong.

BAD- NAITSA is stuck with a President who campaigned on her record, her experience as NAITSA V.P. Financial/Academic, which includes nothing that would make me want to vote for her. I would like to state the following more strongly; however, the fear of legal action prevents me from stating what I feel to be true. Shinerama was Tara Tanguays baby and it sucked. From hearing her speeches during the course of the campaign, and from talking to students who had approached her it seemed to me Tara had little intent to do anything to change the way NAITSA deals with students from separate campus buildings. Westwood and The Annex students were clever enough to realize her lack of concern for entire groups of students and voted overwhelmingly for me.

All I'm saying is that it's too bad Adam Powley, the other Presidential candidate who presented plenty of quality ideas didn't get in.

7. GOOD- Our voter turnout increased from between seven and eleven percent to slightly over fifteen percent.

BAD- The fact that fifteen percent is good only shows how sad and apathetic NAIT students are. Just compare it to the University of Alberta, where if Tara, our new President had obtained proportionally the same amount of the student vote relative to student population, she would have been beaten by Space Moose, a cartoon character who ran for the University's Students' Union President. I guess it just goes to show; YOU GET WHAT YOU DESERVE.

P.S. In her election speeches, the new V.P. Communications, Pam Dill, said it was a good idea for the Nugget News Editors to criticize the NAITSA exec as could be justified. Although I didn't think it was necessarily a good idea (News Editor being an employee of NAITSA and all that), her boyfriend, ex-Comm V.P., Chris Chelmick, convinced me of the importance, which is to ensure quality and accountability of the exec. If I had done this earlier in the year, we might not be where we are now, and I wouldn't have felt I needed to run in the first place. Please accept my apologies.

Subtly Skyrocketing to New Lows

Editorial by Scott Hayes

Many dynasties have grown and flourished, then expanded past their capabilities and fallen in fiery flames. The Roman Empire comes to mind. Soviet domination of Europe. American civilization is probably on the list too. Let's look past the overt stuff.

Other dynasties, not just geographical or power political, have suffered the same fate. Earlier this century, radios were by far the main form of electronic home entertainment. Now they don't even compare to cds, laser disc players or the Internet. Sometime in the future, even the Internet will suffer the same fate as the lowly transistor radio, and something newer and better will replace it. There was a time when the horse and carriage was thought to be hot stuff. When was the last time you saw one of those contraptions being driven? Apart from Fort Edmonton Park? I thought so.

Moving beyond the technological, perhaps we should seek the personal, the psychological, the social. It is my belief that there are certain characteristics that exist within the mindset of a large part of our society's population, characteristics that are in the process of self-destruction, or supernova if you will.

It is my belief that life runs in cycles, going from one extreme to another but mostly existing somewhere in between. People are born, live productive lives, and die, coming from nothing, turning into nothing. Before I get really ambitious with this article, let me just analogize once more: all good things must come to an end, but more importantly, all bad things do the same.

Perhaps this has existed for some time now, maybe since Ancient Roman orgy days, maybe even longer than that, and maybe it won't go away. The exploitation of women by men for profit and kicks is a disease of culture but far more insidious than it might seem for a reason not totally obvious. Strip clubs, hookers, pornography... they all feature the sexual objectification of women. I'm going to state clearly that in no way do I want to insinuate that sexuality is unhealthy. Just the opposite, in fact, but it has to be practiced reasonably. Communication and care are two spheres that should have a heavy influence in human sexuality. We're complex beings with complex thoughts. These automatically demonstrate the necessity for a sensitive approach to sex. Responsible, mature, and honest.

Nowhere near this is the degradation featured in strip shows and XXX web sites, a testament to how poorly we respect ourselves and our emotions that we can subjugate people in such a way. If there was one word that could describe this situation, it would be insensitive. Insensitive to the woman's feelings. Insensitive to the gross indecency involved. Insensitive to everything except greed and control. There's more to it too.

What is it about dominating behaviour that reflects back on the person who exerts it. Something like self-incrimination. The simple act which treats the subject negatively shows up as a mirror to the face of the person committing it, projecting the image of a person devoid of merit, someone of such poor morality to commit the act in the first place. In a sense it proves a valid point: the one who exerts this kind of power doesn't have the integrity to even own the power. Taking that justification and twisting it around a little, being degraded can empower. The stripper has something the club owner doesn't have. The same thing the club patron likes to watch. Her body. Objectively, it seems difficult to believe that so much fuss can be made over someone's body. Beauty is only skin deep, remember? What that means is that if you want true beauty, you can't be as shallow as to judge a person by their appearance. Within the psyche and soul is where a person's true mettle lives.

While I'm being overly ponderous, let me extrapolate even more. After reading the fluffy philosophical book of fiction called Strip Tease, written by Carl Hiaasen, an important train of thought evidenced itself early on. Apart from being able to discover the quote which states a major theme of the novel, I'm going to paraphrase instead. Men, by virtue of their continued attempt to dominate women, reveal themselves as the real weaker sex since they are so heavily influenced by something as simple as nudity or as natural as sexuality. From this, we envision a cartoonish type scene where Archie and Reggie are walking along a beach, perhaps even having an intelligent discussion, but as soon as they pass a beautiful bikini-clad young woman, their thoughts become clouded by hormones and their knuckles drag the ground, their tongues wag helplessly as hearts glaze over their eyes. Apparently, sex and intelligence are mutually exclusive, diametrically opposed, and all men are to be dumb and promiscuous.

Exhibit #1: Hooters Restaurants. A front for socially acceptable soft corn porn. How else could it possibly be explained, that the mainstay of a so-called "Family Restaurant" is a squadron of waitresses, no waiters anywhere, whose uniforms consist of revealing midriff t-shirts and skimpy tight running shorts. Tacit is it that the women are what we typify as 'sexually attractive'. As proof of the real drawing factor to eat at this establishment, on its first day of business, a man I know stood in line for 3 hours to get in for lunch. Later that evening, he wanted to go back.

Exhibit #2: the proliferation of pornography on Internet web sites. Although many are not so graphic in their content, still a great number feature explicit sexual situations, younger women, and all manners of immoral behaviour like bestiality and forced intercourse. Hardly the stuff of what great minds are made of or made from.

Exhibit #3: Larry Flynt's Hustler. If you'd seen it, you'd know. Along the same lines as Exhibit #2, Hustler's pictorials generally enjoy topics of degradation, demoralization, and degeneracy.

Where does that leave us? If we as a society are so far gone in the way we treat women, it can't be too long before the entire structure crumbles like the Roman Empire. Perhaps the wall is crumbling already. Hiaasen was hinting at it by saying that all women need to do is realize how powerless men are when they see some naked flesh. So strange is the notion that perhaps in a hundred years it will be men performing erotic gyrations in peep show parlors after the balance of power shifts. Maybe it's not so strange all things considered.

Look at the front of the paper. It says Issue #24. Taking into account that there are only 25 papers in a year, that means that this would be the second to last issue this year. That also means that next week's paper is the absolute final armageddon 25 out of 25 paper to end all papers. Watch for it. Read it. Frame it. Love it.

Odds, with the Bloody Chiclettes
at Dinwoodie Lounge
Thursday, March 20, 1997
Singer-Craig Northey
Bass-Doug Elliot
Guitar-Steven Drake
Drummer-Pat Stewart

review by
Miranda Jordan

A mosh pit for Odds? You betcha. When less than 1000 people are crammed into one space at general admission, anything can happen. The Odds visited the Dinwoodie Lounge at the U of A last Thursday in support of their recent album, NEST.

The Bloody Chiclettes opened, and although I love them—unfortunately, I was unable to see their whole act. (From what I saw, they were great) Vancouver based Odds took the stage at approximately 9:30 p.m. and began performing immediately as the crowd danced, sang, surfed, and drank. Recent hit songs: Someone Who's Cool, and Make You Mad were crowd pleasing, as well as, other exceptional hit tunes: Eat My Brain, I'm Satisfied, and The Night That Elvis Died(?).

Steven Drake also sang a cover of Only The Lonely, while Craig and Doug did Elvis poses with their guitars, which was one of the evening's highlights.

The Odds visit the U of A frequently, but this show in particular was unique because they did an unplanned (not on original play list) second encore for their dedicated Edmontonian fans.

The band played until around 11:00 p.m., then the crowd proceeded to leave drenched and hearing impaired. So the event wasn't so odd.

A Lawyer That Can't Lie

Starring: Jim Carrey,

Maura Tierney, Jennifer Tilly, Amanda Donohoe, Jason Bernard, Justin Cooper, Cary Elwes and Swoosie Kurtz

Written by: Paul Guay and Stephen Mazur

Directed by: Tom Shadyac

Universal Pictures

review by
Miranda Jordan

Jim Carrey is back in LIAR LIAR. If there is one man in Hollywood that deserves a $20 million dollar plus salary, it is him. Carrey has a true talent of exploiting himself to deliver the best possible performance he can. His talent for molding his rubber face, and emphasizing his distorted speech would make even a straight faced tightie crack a smile. LIAR LIAR is an all-out comedy which features Jim Carrey's embarrassing style utilized in a new way. He's not intended to be annoying like in the Ace Venturas, and he is not intended to be dumb or mental like in Dumb and Dumber or The Cable Guy. However, Carrey's sarcastic, mouthiness is what makes this a superb, all-audiences film.

From the opening scene to the end, LIAR LIAR spins with comedic value with only a few serious moments intervening. Some highlight scenes are as follows: Tina Turner impression, bathroom scene, court room scene, and the conference room scene. Carrey plays a big shot lawyer/father/ex-husband, Fletcher, who lies for a living and frequently neglects his son. After missing his son's birthday, his son wishes

(when blowing out his birthday cake candles) for his dad to be unable to tell a lie for one day. The duration of the movie spans over this one day of forced honesty; and unavoidable mishaps cause potential trouble for Fletcher.

LIAR LIAR is an exceptional comedy because the comedic pitches range from simple mumbled statements to full blown slap stick. Another factor that makes this film a hit with audiences is that although the preview is funny and attracts people to go see it, it doesn't give away all of the punches.

Of course I recommend this flick to all audiences; it's light hearted and hardly offensive. LIAR LIAR has been touted as being Carrey's comeback success after The Cable Guy (What was wrong with The Cable Guy?); but Mr. Hollywood doesn't have to prove anything. However, if you aren't a fan of Carrey's schtick, leave this one alone—it will only annoy you.

Chris; as well as, her brother, sister and mother.

- The accurate detail of costumes and series of events.
- The performance by Edward James Olmos was exceptionally strong. He played the role of a protective father, provider, and sometimes a fiery-tempered jerk.

LOVES

- Showed Selena Perez's rise to fame starting from 9 years old until her death in February 1995. The movie was made to commemorate her life and her contribution of Spanish and English (crossover) music to the music industry.
- Showed Selena's vulnerable side and her care for people.
- The film touches more on relationships than her success. (Selena's relationship with her father, Abraham; her husband,

HATES

- Some parts were too drawn out while other scenes such as when she was shot and taken to the hospital and her funeral, were too brief.
- poor sets (particularly the Grammy awards set).
- Didn't show very much real-life footage or pictures of Selena.
- had the potential to be stronger.
- On the technical side, the split screen for a concert scene was unnecessary.

Elevator Music is NO Snore

Splendourbrog with Baker

review by Glenn Stewart

What makes a floor shake, rattle, and roll 3 inches in every direction? Alright, I won't hold you in suspense. The Splendourbrog and Baker concert. If you've never encountered or experienced "The Bog" before you missed a phenomenal show! (the floor was literally bouncing 3" vertically) I call it an experience because I found it to be more than just another aggressive Celtic rock band. Their "Canadiana" humor and tongue in cheek action on stage set the crowds laughing, hopping and moving across the country singing highly aggressive ballads that take you from the Atlantic coast to the Coquihalla.

The energized skirl of the bagpipes introduced the Splendourbrog. Performing in front of a crowd of moshing, slamming, bouncing fans their repertoire ranged from traditional to original selections including "More than a feeling" (Boston) and "The land down under" (Men at Work). Elevator Music, their first CD was released only 6 weeks ago. There is really no question as to why they've opened for some really phenomenal bands like Great Big Sea, Feeding Like Butterflies, and Captain Tractor.

Baker, The opening act, is a prime example of what can happen when a young group of musicians dare to get together and go all the way with their dreams. They entertained a sold out house with inspiring rock in a similar style to The Newsboys. You'll probably be hearing a lot more about Baker in the near future.

Tyron Lifeso (L) and Jody Melicher (R), both PreTech students, have a jam session in the hallway. Lifeso has played guitar for 1 1/2 years and Melicher has 4 years experience. The duo play guitar in between classes to break up the monotony and enjoy themselves at the same time.

Random Thoughts From an Empty Head

Wade Fennig

Last week it was pretty obvious how bitter I was over our loss to SALT in the finals. Well, my talk with Dr. Jack Daniels ended on Saturday and it seems as though life as I know it is going on smoothly. There is one thing I've learned over the course of the last week. There were a lot of people out there who you come in passing with that can add a little to your life by sharing their experiences. Two of the people I was fortunate to talk with last week were Hugh Dunnigan and Jim Cross. The only similarity that these two men have is that they're both proud hockey fathers. Hugh is the proud papa of my roommate and our very own Don "Don't Drink" Dunnigan. Jim is the father of Tampa Bay Lightning defenseman Cory Cross.

I talked with Hugh and his wife Audrey at their home in Spruce Grove. Don, myself, Ned and Coke Machine were out for a barbecue and a few sodas. After supper we sat around and chatted for two hours. In that time frame Hugh told us about his love for rebuilding hot rods and old cars and of course, a few stories about his loving son Donald. He was not shy to cut down his son, but in the sincerity of each of his comments was an immense pride in Don's and our accomplishments. That in itself is what the game's all about. We came up short this year. We still don't like it. But life goes on and there are those who are proud of us for never giving up.

I talked with Jim Cross at a small party at the Edmonton House Hotel after the Oilers - Lightning game this week. I was fortunate to be invited by Cory who is from my hometown of Lloydminster. Jim is also a proud hockey dad. And deservedly so. Cory made a jump in hockey not too many people make. From the Uof A Bears to the NHL via the IHL.

The ten minutes or so I spent talking with him were truly an education. He had told me how he'd have been just as proud of Cory if he was still playing in the IHL, but was obviously overwhelmed with his son's NHL career. He took a few moments to carve up Lightning coach Terry Crisp, and had a few comments that were hilarious but unfortunately can't be printed.

The moral of this story is life is all about success and failure. No matter what it is you're attempting there are those who stand behind you when you put your best on the table. Win or lose. They know you did your best and it doesn't always make it easier but it is nice to know that they're there for you. Hugh Dunnigan and Jim Cross have spent a better part of their lives watching their sons triumph and fail. They've been behind their kids unconditionally. Because they're proud hockey dads. Because they've won and they've lost. Because they care.

Current Status: On the Roster (as of March 26, 1997)

Although he's suffered through a very trying season full of injuries, Sandy still remains one of the toughest customers in the league. This kook was once teammates with Canucklehead Gino Odjick in the juniors. The gruesome twosome terrorized the QMJHL with a freak show that sent most running for the exits. When not pummeling some hopeless kook into submission, McCarthy can be found putting the odd goal in the net, proving he's a two dimensional player. Make no mistake, he knows his number one job with the Flames. Anybody touches Fleury of Iginla and they'd better book a room at the Foothills Hospital in Calgary.

NAIT To Host '98 Badminton Nationals

by Wade Fennig

While the 1996-97 season has just barely come to a close for Athletics here at NAIT, it has just been given a tremendous shot in the arm for next season. It has been officially announced that NAIT will be the host of the 1998 C.C.A.A. National Championships. Ooks badminton coach Karen Marner commented on the importance to not just the sport but the effect on all of NAIT. "Any time your school gets an opportunity to host a National Championship, it is a tremendous lift to the entire athletic program," she said, "You want to put on a classy affair to keep the impression of NAIT untarnished and setting new precedents for those hosts down the road."

Any National event takes months of preparation and organization in well before the athletes take to the gym to bang around the birdies. "It'll take plenty of volunteers and their hard work to get the ball rolling," Marner added. Areas such as accommodations for visiting teams, score keepers, scheduling, transportation all must be taken care of. "It'll be a lot of hard work, but I know we can get the job done and put on a Nationals that NAIT will be proud of", Marner concedes.

While the tournament has yet to have an official date, look towards next March. While that seems like a long time away, it really isn't. Any of those of you wishing to help out with this event can contact Karen Marner at the coaches' offices located just down the hall from the Nest.

NAIT Athletes Honored as Academic All Canadians

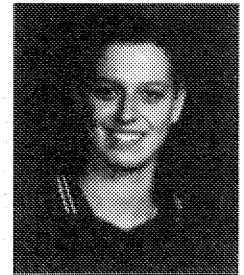

by Wade Fennig

NAIT athletes Isaias Martinez of the men's soccer team and Jodie Arbuckle of the women's volleyball team were announced as CCAA Academic All Canadians. These two stellar student athletes were on a prestigious list of only 38 students representing 87 member colleges across Canada. Their work both on the playing field and in the classroom has been recognized by this award. Congratulations to both Jodie and Isaias for their excellent seasons.

SAIT Chokes at Nationals

by Wade Fennig

After defeating our very own NAIT Ooks in a hard fought best of five series, the SAIT Trojans looked to have the easy road at Nationals. The Trojans opened up with decisive victories over Cambrian College (5-2) and the host Conestoga College (6-1) advancing them directly to the final. Cambrian beat Conestoga and the stage was set. But the story was different. The Trojans dropped the ball, losing a tight one 3-2. Cambrian College brought the National title home to their native Sudbury. Despite dominating the round robin portion of the tournament, the Trojans came up short.

National Notes: The decision for the host of next year's Nationals has not yet been made. It has been rumored that an Alberta College could be awarded the honor. If that is the case it has been confirmed NAIT will make a strong bid in hopes of putting on an unprecedented show.

One Flew Over The Ooks Nest

It's test time kids. I know, you've tested too many times this season just watching the Leafs play on TSN. Remember now there is no wrong answer.

- When then Jets G.M. John Paddock traded Teemu Selanne for Oleg Tverdokovsky and Chad Kilger, he was:
 - At gunpoint
 - Sniffing Glue
 - Sniffing glue at gunpoint
 - Caught having an affair and was blackmailed
 - All of the above
- The reason why Louie DeBrusk hasn't been fighting for over two years is:
 - he's had a bet with Dave Semenko for a 26 of whiskey
 - he believes he's actually a 50 goal man
 - he's afraid of being hit
 - his girlfriend says he can't
 - All of the above
- The San Jose Sharks are sucking slough water because:
 - they've been counting on Todd Gill to lead the way.
 - they thought Ed Belfour could make a difference.
 - they want to be relocated to Winnipeg
 - Steve Guolla hasn't quite reached his potential.
 - All of the above.

- The New York Islanders appear to be stranded once again because:
 - they thought Doug Houda was the next Denis Potvin.
 - they've been sniffing glue.
 - they're still living in the past.
 - they're still living in the past and sniffing glue.
 - all but a.
- The reason Vancouver won't see anything but a golf course come April is:
 - a defensive core that could easily be replaced by six triple A midget players.
 - a defensive core that is so stationary it should be spray painted orange.
 - a defensive core that handles the puck like it's a curling rock.
 - a defensive core that turns like an aircraft carrier.
 - All of the above.
- After scoring his 500th career goal at the ripe age of 40, the next thing Joe Mullen did was:
 - jump back in his wheel chair.
 - return to the bench to see his grandkids.
 - return to the bench to be put back on life support.
 - pay off Patrick Roy.
 - All of the above.
- The best thing about this year's playoffs is:
 - we no longer have to watch the Leafs play.
 - ticket prices double
- the Oilers actually look like they're gonna make it.
- they'll be two teams filled with Oilers, the Rangers and the Oilers.
- All of the Above
- The hardest part of watching a 2-2 tie between the Canucks and the Kings is:
 - staying awake until the interesting commercials come on.
 - seeing Gino Odjick pass Donald Brashear the puck.
 - trying to identify one single King player.
 - cheering for anyone.
 - All of the above
- The difference between Lightning coach Terry Crisp and an unemployed person is:
 - nothing in about 7 games.
 - there's a chance the unemployed person will get another job.
 - there's a chance the unemployed person isn't a dickhead.
 - there's a chance the unemployed person was once an NHL head coach.
 - All of the above.
- The similarity/ies between Tim Hunter and Barbara Steisand is/are:
 - they have the same size nose.
 - they are both Ray-Ban sunglass models
 - Neither can sing
 - Neither have won a fight with Dave Semenko.
 - All of the above.
