NAIT'S OFFICIAL STUDENT NEWSPAPER

EDMONTON, ALBERTA, CANADA

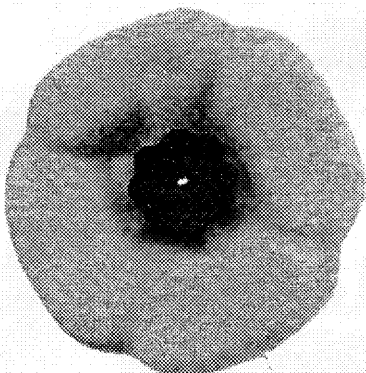

Did you remember?

Jenessa Kirkwood

On November 11, it was Remembrance Day. Did you wear a poppy? People may look at this holiday as a day to get time off from work or school, but the fact is, the point of Remembrance Day is to remember everyone who died for freedom. One student remarked, "It gives you time to reflect on how everything you do effects your children. We can learn from how unselfish they were back then, and let reflect on everything we do now to help our future generations."

Remembrance Day commemorates Canadians who died in both the first and second World Wars, as well as the Korean conflict. The first Remembrance Day holiday originated in 1919 throughout the Commonwealth and was originally called Armistice Day. The last day of the war was Monday, November 11, 1918, at 11:00 a.m. So, in short, the 11th hour of the 11th day of 11th month.

Poppies are the symbol for Remembrance Day, taken from a poem entitled "Flanders Fields." "I think it's great what they did for us. I don't think I'd want to go die for someone I don't know — they were great people!" said Glen Z., a NAIT student. So, it looks like some people still know the meaning, and if you did forget that Wednesday was Remembrance Day, just keep in mind that Canada today would not be as we know it if not for these celebrated veterans.

What A Loser!

Tyler Harke

According to the sign upon entering our fair city, we're still the City of Champions. If this is true, then how do chumps like Brent Maitson get elected to our council? Maitson was rung up on charges of theft under $5,000 and uttering a forged document after a Provincial Court judge found him guilty Thursday.

Last December, Maitson, flying high on booze and prescription drugs, staggered into the Visions electronics store on Calgary Trail. He demanded to a salesperson there that someone go immediately to his riverbend home and fix the sound system he had purchased three months earlier. The salesperson then went to get his manager, leaving Maitson with a cart of electronics worth over $600. When the salesperson came back with the manager, both Maitson and the equipment were AWOL.

police a fake sales order with a carbon copy attached. When police got a closer look at the carbon, they noticed Maitson's signature along with the words, "delivery and payment complete Monday" in his OWN writing.

Maitson was fined $660 by a judge who used the word "desperate" when describing the former deputy mayor's actions. As an added bonus, Maitson is making an encore appearance to his home away from home on December 3rd when he faces assault charges from an April 27th incident.

Let's see... Maitson's a convicted felon, Michael Phair picks up gay prostitutes, and I won't even start on Toquer Gomborg! I'm beginning to lose faith in "Smiling Bill" and his merry band of WEIRDOS running this city. Tyler Harke for city council? At least my record's clean.

Maitson was fined $660 by a judge who used the word "desperate" when describing the former deputy mayor's actions.

When the cops arrived at Maitson's home, the putz showed

A Perfect Murder?

Gang Violence in Edmonton

Tyler Harke

It sounds more like a movie script than a news story. A murder is committed in the biggest mall in the world on Boxing day — the busiest day of the year. There are at least fifty people who see the victim being attacked, and not one of them can positively I.D. the killer (who wasn't even wearing a mask).

The story is all too real for the family and friends of Dominic Mah. Mah was with two friends when all were attacked from behind by teenage males with knives and hatchets. Mah was brutally stabbed ten times and died just beside the Ice Palace.

Hours later, police arrested Quang Tran and charged him with second-degree murder; attempted murder; and possession of a weapon.

The problem begins within twelve hours of Tran's arrest. Another teenager, who cannot be named but who was attacked along with Mah, was brought in to make a positive I.D. on Tran. However, the teen could not pick Tran out of the police line up.

Tran's alibi in court was that he was sleeping at the time of the killing. Apparently, he had been selling drugs that night and went home after completing the transaction. The teenager who was brought in to identify Tran, has told police that he is associated with a local gang known as MR2. He also pointed out that one of the attackers was a member of the Yellowheads, a rival gang of the victims.

A possible reprieve could come when Thi Hoang Le faces trial. Because of his age (18), he is ordered to be tried as an adult. This is the last chance police will have to solve a case that seemingly should have been easy to close. There has been no talk of gang intimidation from witnesses, although it is a realistic possibility.

By-elections

Board of Governors

The two members who are elected represent NAITSA and the student body. This includes attending, as a voting member, Board of Governor meetings once a month. Also, each representative will sit on two of the following committees: Board Development or Campus Development, and Grad or Open House. The representatives are expected to attend these meetings and any other special meetings on a regular basis and perform such additional activities as the Board may specify or delegate. As well, they should become informed of institutional and system-wide educational development issues as the year progresses.

With respect to NAITSA, the two members who are elected are required to attend General Council meetings (twice a month), and consult with and inform the NAITSA President on matters at the Board level pertaining to student affairs.

The opportunity of representing your fellow students to the Board of Governors is one that no student should pass up. As an individual, you will learn more about your technical institute, organizations in general, and most importantly, you will learn a lot about yourself. You will walk away with knowledge and experience at a level much higher than anything taught in any classroom or textbook.

If you have any questions about these two positions, leave a message at the NAITSA office for B.J. Cross.

News in a Nutshell

• Unmarked For Stupidity

Last weekend, two teens were arrested after being caught red-handed trying to steal an unmarked police car. They may have gotten away with it, too, if it weren't for one minor detail — there was a cop sitting in the car! After the officer identified himself to the two teens, they fled the scene. Needless to say though, they were caught soon after.

• Songbird Charlie

During a recent visit to Bulgaria, Prince Charles and the Bulgarian president sang a duet together. This came about when the two officials were touring through a historic site and came across a woman playing piano. As luck had it, both Prince Charles and the Bulgarian president were Beatles' fans and the woman just happened to be playing "All You Need Is Love" by the said group. Apparently Charles and president then just broke out into song. Rumors that Camilla Parker Bowles was in the vicinity are still yet to be confirmed.

• You Can't Have Your Wife And...

A Kuwaiti millionaire has been denied entrance into Canada when it became evident that he was set on committing polygamy. Mohammed Skaik Ali and his first spouse, Al Nabulsi, applied to resettle in Halifax, Nova Scotia. That same day though, his second wife, Nabila Temasmani, applied to resettle in Quebec. Ali's lawyer says he will be appealing his case in the Federal Court of Canada, and that if Ali wins his case, he will be opening the door for other polygamous Muslims to seek status here. Currently though, polygamy is a criminal offense in this country, punishable by up to five years in jail.

• Raping The Scrabble Board

In Norwalk, Connecticut, a toy department store chain is apologizing profusely to the public after 11 million copies of a flyer advertising a Scrabble game, among other toys, showed two smiling boys playing Scrabble around a board that had the word R-A-P-E spelled out on it. The store chain learned of the problem after a customer with two small daughters called to complain about the ad, calling it "gruesome" that such an error would appear in a flier advertising toys. The store is claiming that an unknown source must have fiddled around with the board, but that there is no surefire way of knowing.

• Reformed Criminal Thanks Blow To The Head

Amnesia, caused by a self-inflicted blow to the head, has apparently turned a habitual criminal into a law-abiding citizen. Michael Pease, a 22-year-old Calgarian, has apparently "changed his criminal ways" and turned into a considerate, caring, and benign guy after he hit himself with a crowbar last February. If a psychological analysis ordered by a Court of Queen's Bench Justice proves the same, Pease will receive a conditional sentencing from the Court. In short, before Pease inflicted this blow to the head, he was up on charges of uttering threats, assault with a weapon, obstruction of justice, and possession of dangerous weapons after himself and three other men terrorized a co-worker's ex-girlfriend's current boyfriend.

• People's Sexiest Men of 1998

People magazine on-line recently released their Sexy Men of 1998 issue. Topping the list for the all-time sexiest man of 1998 was long-time actor Harrison Ford. Other sexy men included Kansas City Chiefs quarterback Elvis Grbac for sexiest athlete; MTV anchor Carson Daly for sexiest anchor; Mark Vanderloo (Versace, Armani, Hugo Boss) for sexiest model; John F. Kennedy Jr. (George magazine) for sexiest editor; GH actor Ingo Rademacher for sexiest soap star; singer Usher for sexiest r&b star; singer Gary Allen for sexiest country star; singer Mark McGrath (Sugar Ray) for sexiest rock star; and Peter Phillips (son of Princess Anne) for sexiest royal.

Newfie Loses Four Years

Likely to get Millions

Tyler Harke

Hey, here's a thought! How about tomorrow, we send the cops to your house, charge you with a phony crime, put you through hell trying to prove you did it, and then toss you into a maximum security prison for four years! Sounds fun, don't it?

That's exactly what Gregory Parsons of St. John's, Newfoundland has gone through. He was charged and convicted in 1994 of murdering his own mother and sent to prison until last week when the Crown prosecutor said, "we f*cked up real good" — in slightly different terms.

Parsons was well on his way to rotting in prison when a Court of Appeals finally overturned the wrongful conviction and ordered a re-trial. Last February, DNA evidence taken from a towel, as well as the deceased's finger nails, was presented at the new trial. The DNA taken from the scene did not match Parson's DNA; therefore, it was scientifically and physically impossible for Gregory Parsons to have murdered his mother.

Parson's wife broke down in tears when the verdict was read at the conclusion of his re-trial. She was quoted as saying, "He's my best friend and it's been a long, hard road, but I feel great." Parsons will also have considerably more time to spend with his four year-old son, Zachary, now that he's out of the slammer.

We seem to be on a roll in the last few years as far as screwing up our citizens' lives. It was only a few years ago that David Millgard's was exonerated due to DNA evidence just like Parsons'. Millgard received over $20 million for spending many years of his life in prison for a crime he didn't commit. Call me crazy, but I'd take the sentence myself. He could have been out sooner, but he would never admit to the killing. Oddly enough, if you admit that you did it they will let you out on parole but if you maintain your innocence you have to stay in jail.

Justice Minister Chris Decker has appointed a former Newfoundland Supreme Court Justice to review Parsons' investigation and prosecution. The Justice will then make recommendations as to whether or not (more likely how much), compensation will be given. The government will then act on the report's findings. As for Mr. Parsons, I'll bet he's never been this glad to walk around Newfoundland before.

P.S. — Mr. Tuckley, was that fluffy enough for you? Tyler.

KISS Concert at NAIT?

Mick Beale

It happened. You missed it. I received an interesting phone call from Kurt Gooch, representing the band KISS, this past Friday. He was calling because he wanted me to go through the old Nugget archives to find an article on their February 5th, 1974 concert at NAIT. According to Gene Simmons records, KISS did indeed play here, in the gymnasium, but only because some other performer named Mike Quatro bailed and they needed a replacement band. Mike who? Anyways, looking through The Nugget's archives, I found tonnes of interesting things that happened here at NAIT, but nothing about a KISS concert here.

We had Streakers in the 1970s. One week The Nugget actually had photographs of some of the construction fellows who ran through the school in their hard hats. The Vice President of Zambia came to NAIT to visit, because he was so excited about things he heard about NAIT from Canadian men and women who were working in his country. Gordon Lightfoot put on a blistering show in 1968. The B.A.S. people had a "STAG Wind-up" May 9th, 1972, with exotic dancers and waitresses. For countless years, the NAIT students would go kidnap the SAIT Queen, dragging her to our cabarets. I'm not condoning illegal activities (that would be violating The Nugget's publication guideline number four), but I just wonder why it seems that nothing exciting ever happens anymore.

I read Nugget issues from the Vietnam era. I read the issue from when man walked on the moon. I READ ABOUT THE BEATLES COMING TO NORTH AMERICA! Perhaps there are things going on right now that just don't seem interesting, that one day our little NAITlets will read about when this paper is in the archives, thinking we were pretty cool cats. I guess I should get to my point. NAIT is what we make it. It's not the classes that we'll remember when we're older, it's the social events we were involved in, and the causes that we thought were important and that we fought for. Sure, there's no wars anymore and the bras were burned long ago, but maybe we could make a difference and leave a lasting impression on the future in other ways. A resurgence of free love would be nice, but we still need to make some news. Good news. I mean things like, "HOCKEY TEAM CURES CANCER" or something like that. That may be stretching it a bit, but you catch my drift.

I've noticed that since the 1980s, the old issues of the Nugget talk about apathy. There's low voting turnout, there's low attendance at NAITSA activities, and there's generally a humdrum atmosphere. Let's work on changing that. Try smiling all day. It may seem like a lame thing to do, but you'll be surprised by the changes. That cute someone may notice you. You may be in a better mood. You may want to streak through the school (once again, we don't condone this, but if you decide to, call us so we can give you "coverage"). At any rate, let's make some news, and let's make a difference. Perhaps KISS wants to do a complete tour of every place they played for before they retire, and they'll come back "here" again. You never know. Until next week, don't forget to floss.

What Are They Building on the Moon?

Curtis Wood

The U.S. government claims they are building an international space station. This could be true, but for what purpose? For Russian space shuttles to re-fuel while drifting in space? How about opening a fast-food restaurant for hungry aliens? Maybe they are building the space station to lure Japanese tourists into expensive hotel accommodations? They all sound pretty believable — not really — but possible.

Nope, the real reason is to aid in controlling the human population on the planet Earth. At this point you might be thinking, "Drugs, X-Files, and Internet junkie," — no, but right train of thought. Where else could you place a super weapon that has the capability to destroy specific targets without the possibility of someone tampering with it? Does it really seem logical to build a space station for science experiments when zero gravity only exists outside of the Earth's atmosphere? I admit that I don't know a lot about ants living in zero gravity, but common sense tells me the whole thing is a little strange.

Who wants to rule over us then? Since the dawn of time, individuals have conspired to gain power and control over the masses — has that changed? Those in the past might have failed in their objective, but they have also left blueprints for future individuals with greedy appetites. New technology, combined with historical knowledge, makes this insatiable desire all too possible for a crafty bunch.

Is there a chance for me to escape this one-world order? Yes and no — yes, if your life span doesn't exceed past 2005 or if your dad has voted for the Liberal Party since he turned 18 — otherwise, the Democrats are your leaders for life.

Hey maybe McDonald's possesses political power in Washington afterall? Who knows?

Jimmy Carter and the power of the Stoooge

Dave Timm

All right, listen, because I'm talking to you now... I will be leaving NAIT at the end of this semester, but there are some things you need to know before I leave. For example, the NAITSA elections can be rigged like the Hibernia Oil Project. I know it, Jimmy Carter knows it and you better get square to it because it involves you money.

The whole problem centers around the yes/no vote. What is the yes/no vote? Well, anyone who voted in last years election should realize that in the event of an uncontested race, i.e.. a single candidate running for a particular office, the electorate is faced with voting yes or no for that candidate. To win,

In the history of NAITSA elections, I believe only one person has lost on the yes/no vote. Even Pee-Wee Herman could win a race with those odds.

the candidate simply has to achieve a greater number of yes votes than no votes. It is essentially impossible to lose under these circumstances. In the history of NAITSA elections, I believe only one person has lost on the yes/no vote. Even Pee-Wee Herman could win a race with those odds.

To this point there is still no serious flaw. That is because you probably see the yes/no vote being resultant of a natural lack of competition. What if I told you I could rig the election under its existing rules to guarantee any given candidate runs a yes/no race? That is, to artificially eliminate the competition. It can be done, and all it takes is the power of the stoooge.

The stoooge is a dummy candidate. A candidate that appears to be competing against you but is really working for you. Once the election nominations are over and the eleventh hour approaches, your stoooge drops out of the race and you are left with a yes/no vote.

If one stoooge is good, nine stoooges are better. Face it, people don't like competition. So what do you think will happen if your slippery candidate is really alert and ensures that his nomination form and those of his nine stoooges will get in the door first? John Q. Public will walk down to the NAITSA office and ask "How many people are running for X office?" When faced with the answer of ten, the would be candidate will turn and run. Once again leaving the race open to slippery Larry and his stoooges. (Cake walk)

Unfortunately I don't have a golden set of guidelines for the election committee to eliminate this problem. Moreover, I seriously doubt that Jimmy Carter will be showing up to scrutinize the NAITSA elections. The responsibility for ensuring that this type of corruption does not occur this spring is now up to you.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I am amazed at the lack of support one technology shows for another in this school. We are all here to learn, and should support that. Don't get my wrong, a little competition is a really good thing, but let's draw the line at just saying, "Your technology sucks! Yuk, yuk, yuk." If that's how you want to act, then take it outside to the bike racks.

My point is this: We have a radio station here at NAIT. Some of you may not have known that — and the person you hear on NR92 may be the person you hear next year on The Bear or Power 92. "Tim", a NAIT grad, is now on Mix 96. I know another guy who graduated from RTA last year as well. He told me that NR92 is cabled throughout the school to many different locations. Campus Reads & Needs, The South Lobby, the pool, the arena, the Nest, the Tower Lounge, all of the cafeterias and NAITSA all have the ability to be playing NR92 at any time. I may be wrong about some of those locations, but you get my point; so, why don't we have the station playing tunes all the time at those locations? Why isn't NAITSA and NAIT supporting its students AND NR92? What a great experience these students would get if we could hear them and give them feedback.

I personally would like to hear the station broadcast through the school, wherever and whenever possible, so, NAITSA and NAIT — why don't you support your students?? Play NR92!!

From,
Robert S. Tuckley

-Bobby T., Thanks for your letter. I've asked around and no one seems to know why it isn't played everywhere. I know that NAITSA supports RTA by playing RTA TV outside their office on Thursdays. I suggest that you come by with an in-depth investigative report on the matter, so that we'll all know why it isn't played everywhere. Ed.

Dear Editor,

In the November 5th issue of The Nugget was a great article for all students to read — the one dealing with transgendered individuals.

I know there was little room to write all about it, but it dealt with issues for everyone to think about. Transgenderism is a very touchy and taboo subject, especially for conservative and religious people; however, most people do not understand the issue; therefore, there are many misconceptions. The biggest one is the one with transsexuals being perverts, lesbians, or gay — which most are not. As well, it is not a disease!

It is very difficult to be transgendered and to eventually "come out of the closet." Many people put transsexuals down, but they are exactly the same as "everyone else," except for being trapped in the wrong body.

There is one thing I could tell everyone — I am a transgendered person, and my spouse knows and is all right with it and fully supports me. I will eventually complete the long process of making

Many people put transsexuals down, but they are exactly the same as "everyone else," except for being trapped in the wrong body.

things right. There is one problem though. People need to be more acceptable of us so we fit right in and not seem like "freaks" to them. We are always stressed out and need the right to fit in and cope with our problem without being harassed. I am not saying everyone hates us, but there are people who are okay with it — more people need to be though.

For a little more information, just because some people are transgendered, it does not mean a sex change will occur. It could be because of (1) being afraid of others; (2) it being financially unavailable; and (3) it being a long, painful process.

I know what other transgendered people are going through, and I feel for them. There is always hope of being accepted and to one day have confidence. I hope I have helped some people in a way and to touch a little more on the subject — even though there is a lot more to be said.

Sincerely,
Hoping to be free soon

Students Denied Access to Higher Education

Association of Baha'i Studies

The association of Baha'i Studies views with grave concern, recent events that have occurred in the Republic of Iran. Between September 29th and October 3rd, the government of Iran has shut down the Baha'i Institute of Higher Education (BIHE), arrested 36 faculty members, and raided 532 homes and looted files, equipment, and personal property. These actions sanctioned by the government were carried out by elements of the Iranian Ministry of Information.

Since 1980, as part of a government-directed attempt to destroy the intellectual and cultural process of Iran's 300,000 member Baha'i community, young people who declare their Baha'i identity have been expelled from universities and blocked from acquiring or pursuing a higher education. Deeply concerned that an entire generation of Iran's best and brightest have been denied access to higher education, the Baha'i community of Iran launched a creative and wholly non-violent response: the establishment of its own independent, full-fledged, yet centralized university system — the BIHE. BIHE, which is an open university, has been in existence since 1987. It has an enrollment of more than 900 students. The institute offers bachelor's degree programs in 10 subject areas. Among some of those subject areas are computer science, civil engineering, chemistry, and accounting. Number 150, its faculty members, all volunteers, comprise of doctors, dentists, engineers, and lawyers; some of whom have degrees from MIT, University of California, Berkeley, and Sorbonne.

On July 21st, a Baha'i by the name of Ruhollah Rowhani — a 52-year-old medical salesman and father of four — was summarily executed in Mashhad after a revolutionary court upheld his death sentence. His crime — being a Baha'i. Two other Baha'is who have also been sentenced to death, are languishing in prison in Iran.

A secret government memorandum, drawn up by the Supreme Revolutionary Cultural Council in February 1991 and signed by Supreme Leader Ali Khamenei, was made public in 1993 by the United Nations' Special Representative on Human Rights in Iran. This memorandum establishes a policy by the Iranian government to systematically destroy Iran's 300,000 member Baha'i community by blocking their progress and development intellectually, culturally, and economically.

Iran is party to the International Covenant On Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights, which was adopted by the United Nations' General Assembly in 1966. Parties of the covenant "recognize the right of education" and, more specifically than that, "higher education shall be made equally accessible to all on the basis of capacity by every appropriate means." These latest developments in Iran constitute a gross violation by the Iranian government of that covenant.

More than 200 Baha'is have been executed since 1980 because of their religious beliefs. Often, they are accused of fictitious crimes. Thousands have suffered arbitrary detention. These include men and women of all ages, as well as professionals, educators, and laymen; who have committed no crime often than their non-violent and peaceful belief in such principles as oneness of mankind, oneness of God, and equality of men and women. So, as you walk into your next class, let us remember those for whom that very act is but a luxury.

Caronport: The Untold Story

Part II

Andrew "I have triplets" Hore

This past weekend, the NAIT OOKs Hockey Team embarked on a journey into the depths of the unknown... Caronport, Saskatchewan. Caronport is home to the Briercrest Bible College Clippers, who had their sophomore ACAC season last year. The Clippers finished their last season campaign with a 0-26 record. This year's Clippers team is much improved from last year with the addition of some former Junior "A" players. Our team was looking for a sweep to get back to 500 as we left for Briercrest...

The bus left Thursday evening at 11:00, and it would take a good eight hours before arriving in the small town of Caronport. Game One went Friday night at Sparrow Gardens, an arena that left the "old dogs barking" due to the extreme cold. It was the home opener for the Clippers against our team, so we knew they would be fired up for the contest. The game started positive for us, with many hits and early pressure on the Clipper goalie. Finally, after a flurry of shots through the 1st period and a 1/2, I managed to get a goal to put our team in front going into the 3rd. The Clippers never gave up, even though they were outshot by a total of 50-20. With a breakdown on our powerplay, the Clippers managed to sneak one home to even up the match; much to the delight of the large, home town crowd. With excellent goal tending by our own Kelly "I almost lit the hostile on fire" Ainsworth, and the Clippers goalie -- who faced close to 60 shots -- the match ended up in a disappointing 1-1 tie. OOKS - 1/Clippers - 1

Game Two was played Saturday afternoon at 2:00, so we could get home in time for last call at the bar (Just kidding). The game started out with excellent goal tending again by the Clipper tender that our team was beginning to become frustrated due to no goal production. The pressure and hard work was there, but the goals were not. With a spirited goal by Brad "I wish all the ladies" Wilson early in the 2nd, the visiting OOKs finally started to score. A former teammate of mine, Jason Strudwick, (who now plays for the Vancouver Canucks) always used to tell his teammates, "Goals come in clumps," and that's exactly what happened next to our team -- a clump of goals. After the 2nd, we were up 5-1 and in complete command. The 3rd period was a somewhat different story though. The Clippers came at us hard and surprised us OOKs with three quick goals to pull the game within one goal. We managed to kill off some important penalties thanks to some hard work and slick tending by Darryl "1998 Miss OOK Champion" Hodgson. Our club bounced back with two goals of our own to finish off the Clippers by three. OOKS - 7/Clippers - 4

All in all, the weekend was a good one for the Hockey OOKs, bettering our record to 3-4-1. Up next, will be a true test for our club though. The upcoming events will be against 1st place teams from Calgary's SAIT and Mount Royal. This Saturday night, The SAIT Trojans will be here at 7 p.m. in the NAIT arena. Come out to a game and see and rivalry so intense that you won't be able to stay in your seat! Until next time... keep your chin strap done up.

Opinion

How could they do that?

Jenessa Kirkwood

You know, I can't stand hearing about all these deaths around the world. A few years ago, my friend died in a car accident; and ever since that, I have noticed how many people are dying. I guess I never realized it before until someone died close to me. Now, people dying is bad enough -- but 3-year-old girls being beaten to death with all that porn around? I'm sorry, but I think that is just sick! Not only that, but it's immoral. How could anyone think that it is natural if they really are a human being? I know how it feels to lose someone close to you, but can any one of you imagine in the future when you have children, how it would feel to lose your own child? For all of you mothers out there, can you imagine someone doing this to your own child?! I can't even imagine being more hurt than I was when I lost my best friend; but losing your child would have to be ten more times the pain, and twenty more to find out your child was beaten in such a immoral environment! I'm sorry, but that lady in Utah was f*cking sick -- she shouldn't even be labeled as a human being! Nice to know she was from Alberta, hey?! If anyone feels sorry for her, then they have something wrong with them, too! Do you know how many families there are out there that can't have children? Can you imagine how they must feel about stories like this -- like -- why couldn't this mother just give her child up for adoption instead before this happened? Now I know that she is possibly facing the death penalty, and I'm not usually for that, but in this instance, she doesn't deserve to live. Why should anyone live if they're not a human being, anyway? This may sound pretty harsh to wish someone dead, but I'm sorry, I just can't imagine a little girl having to go through all that, with no defense or anything. I just hope that the little girl is safe up in heaven now.

INTRAMURAL ACTIVITIES

Fan Bus to Cowtown!

Get in on the NAIT "kook show"

Andrew "I wish I were a spectator" Hore

This upcoming week end, our wonderful NAITSA has planned a fan bus to Calgary for the weekend! The NAIT "kooks" that come will enjoy a NAIT OOKS hockey game against the rival Trojans from SAIT on Friday, November 13; then they will stay over for the Western Final on Football match between our Edmonton Eskimos and the Calgary Stampeders. How's that for a weekend of fun?!!

The price package includes:

- Tickets to the CFL Western Final
- Transportation (licensed Kook bus)
- Two nights at the Best Western (only 5 blocks from Electric Ave)
- Tickets to the NAIT OOKS hockey game!

This crazy trip is only $70 bones -- are you kidding me? I will personally give you the HORESY guarantee that you will have an unbelievable time during the Gong Show weekend. This trip is well worth the $70 so get on the fan bus to Calgary and watch two Edmonton teams kick some Calgary ASS!!! It's the first of many to come this season!

If she gets bored easily, this place may fix the problem for you. How can anyone be bored here? She doesn't like pool? There's always NTN. Too stupid for NTN? There's a few good video games there. They've got all the answers to keeping someone busy and happy there, not to mention a great menu.

If you bring her here, be sure to wear something that you can two-step in. Well, maybe not, but it'd be pretty cool. You can bring her by any day, anytime (24 hours a day), and you can be sure that they'll treat you well.

I recommend making the date for a quiet night when the three pool leagues that play here take the night off. That way there will be less traffic and less people you know barging in on your date with your baby. The booths have comfortable seats (there's a few leather ones) and there is great lighting for making out. Getting busy.

A receptive staff gathers at the front of the bar at The Highrun Club.

"Garcon? Garcon? I'd like to order the dried ribs to start. For dinner, Luscious will have the Cajun Chicken Salad, and I'll have the Cajun Chicken Alfredo." You can order the tuna melt when you're out with the fellas. There's a number of standard diner items on the menu (burgers, burgers, lots of appetizers, wings and fries, salad).

Relax with her on one of the comfy couches or in your booth. Ladies love leather.

-Sorry if this sounds a lot like last week, but Super Dave Entertainment Editor sent Kevin and his date out to a sports bar for the second consecutive week. Look forward to classy diners in the near future. Give Dave some suggestions. The Ed.

United Way Concert Showcases NAIT Talent

Allison Miller

On Friday, November 13, the Shaw Theatre in NAIT's South Learning Centre will be the scene of a gala evening. Staff and students from NAIT, who have made their mark as professional soloists and musicians, will treat us to a command performance followed by a gala reception.

The line-up of talent includes soloist Jacqueline Biollo, piper Alastair Briggs, classical guitarist Sia Samimi, pianist Lynda Stewart, and violinist Laura Hols accompanied by Karen Kamphof.

Jacqueline and Lynda are both Alumnaitss, Alastair is a NAIT student, and Sia is an instructor in the CST program.

Tickets are $15 each and will be available from United Way Steering Committee members or at the NAIT cash office. Plan now to support the United Way, and enjoy a wonderful evening of entertainment.

Bar of the week:

Ezmeralda's

David Veilleux

What can you say about this bar?

How about good times, friendly staff and management, and excellent value. I must admit, before I began attending NAIT, I was skeptical as to whether this was a good bar. After my first cabaret there, I was hooked, and everyone I know who goes there has a good time. I know a lot of people think that it's a country cowboy hangout, and to some extent that is true, but it is also a venue that allows the novice country listener to enjoy themselves. Where else can a cowpoke and a city dweller have a good time together? I learned how to two-step there, and even though I never would have thought it, I find myself to be a mild country music fan. Tuesdays are the night that I like to frequent this bar, and I find that I miss that old country twang if I can't make it out. Try to visit Ezzie's as soon as you can, they won't disappoint.

Here is a little Ezzie's history:

- Originally established as "The Midway" in 1966
- Became Ezmeralda's in 1981
- Has a music format composed of 80% Country and 20% Dance/Rock.
- Has no cover charge! (Unless for the purpose of fundraising for charities or cabarets, in which all proceeds go to the charity organization)

- Main source of clientele are NAIT students
- Has been and still is one of the hottest Edmonton nightclubs for over ten years running
- Is renowned for its many charitable donations (Contributes to Muscular Dystrophy, Cystic Fibrosis, Santa's Anonymous, Heart and Stroke Foundation, and the United Way)
- Is a host to numerous cabarets benefiting NAIT students

A week at Ezzie's can be spent as follows:

- Monday: Closed (Available for private functions)
- Tuesday: The stuff of Legends — 85 cent draft. Get there early!
- Wednesday: Starvin' student night — $1.49 Hiballs, $4.99 pizza!
- Thursday: Country dance lessons! — $1.49 Hiballs, $2.49 beer
- Friday & Saturday: Happy hour 8-9, $1.49 Hiballs, 85 cent draft
- Sunday: country dance lessons at 8, half price Hiballs all night

As you can see, Ezzie's is a very charitable bar and has much to offer. I recommend checking it out tonight! V.I.P. cards are available on the last Thursday of every month. If you would like more info regarding this fine establishment or upcoming events, call Ezzie's at 453-7320.

Get on the "CRAZY" Fan Bus for a Weekend of Hockey and Football!

Take the OOK Fan Bus to Calgary Friday Nov 13th and attend the OOKS hockey game at SAIT, then stay for the CFL Western final on Sunday. All this for the amazing price of:

This includes:

HOROSCOPES

Daria Morgan

Capricorn

(December 23-January 19)

What's that sound, you say? It's sorta like Grape Nuts — except it's under your feet! AAAAH! Time to do some cleaning! By the way, your friends will probably ditch you for someone cooler. If it makes you feel any better though, they never liked you anyways.

Aquarius

(January 20-February 18)

Why are you so @#$! sour?! I bet if someone were to squeeze you, they'd get curdled milk! Also, don't even think about letting your creativity run away with you this week — while you're busy day dreaming and playing absolutely no attention, someone will kick you in the nads.

Pisces

(February 19-March 20)

Frantic.. people everywhere.. turkeys pulling the rug out from under you. Tame them with the creamy gravy. Gobble. You're also feeling strangely motivated this month, so see if you can motivate yourself to find a life.

Aries

(March 21-April 19)

There once was a chocolate midterm in a chocolate class by a chocolate Sci Li. with a chocolate curve... ah... how sweet. Needless to say, your boredom will drive you crazy this month. If you get too bored though, you can always go out, rob a bank, and kick some day dreaming Aquarius in the nads.

Taurus

(April 20-May 20)

Okay, so you're sick of everyone being so bitter, but it's the 90's, man! What can you do, spike everyone's drinks with sugar? Maybe you're just feeling incredibly down this week because your Pisces friend is out chasing imaginary turkeys and completely ignoring you. Gobble, my friend — gobble!

Gemini

(May 21-June 20)

Uh oh, it looks like it's time to put your nose to the salt lick — or is that your tongue to the grindstone? Ground tongue! That's disgusting!

You find that you need a change this week. By doing what, you ask? By stepping on really big bugs that go CRUNCH underneath your feet. Ask a Capricorn for pointers.

Cancer

(June 21-July 22)

You want some acid, little one? I mean, the REAL stuff — like citric acid. It'll get rid of that nasty head cold that has lobotomized your brain this week. Also, try some lime and coconut (it's a spell of mine). By the way, you are getting way too much money this month! You should put it to a good cause like... The Daria Morgan Fan Club. I hear they're always in need of donations.

Leo

(July 23-August 22)

If there's one thing you should do this week, it's to leave all the liquor in your fridge alone until Friday. If you can't do that, then lose your date this week and call me. You see, people are starting to complain that you have way too much energy this month — and you're driving them crazy. If liquor consumption and me won't help, then a surefire way to calm yourself down is to constantly run into a wall until you knock yourself out cold.

Virgo

(August 23-September 22)

It's a mug.. it's a coffee cup.. it's coffee + pot.. it's CAFFEINE WEED! Just kidding. Actually, you're going to find that you want to tell people what's bugging you this week. I mean, you — yes, you — are actually going to want to share your feelings! But you know what? No one but a Leo is gonna care, and the only reason they're gonna care is because they have liquor in their fridge. Take advantage of your Leo friend today.

Libra

(September 23-October 22)

You big tart. While cross-dressing may not make you any more desirable to the opposite sex, it will attract some of members of the Ooks Men's Hockey Team. By the way, you're annoying people to death with all this talk about starching women's pantyhose. If I want Buns of Steel, it won't be by making my fishnets as stiff as a board!

Scorpio

(October 23-November 21)

Do you really think those honey-coated words are fooling anyone? Definitely not me. Perhaps you? You know... if you're itching to do something outrageous — don't. It's just gonna make people think you're weirder than you already are.

Sagittarius

(November 22-December 22)

This week is gonna be hotter than hot — in fact, it's gonna be so hot that it's salsa! Curious tastes await you over the weekend. Slurp. By the way, your self-esteem is gonna get way too high this weekend, too. Don't worry though, by Monday, someone will most likely find a way to lower it back down to nothing again.

If today is your birthday...

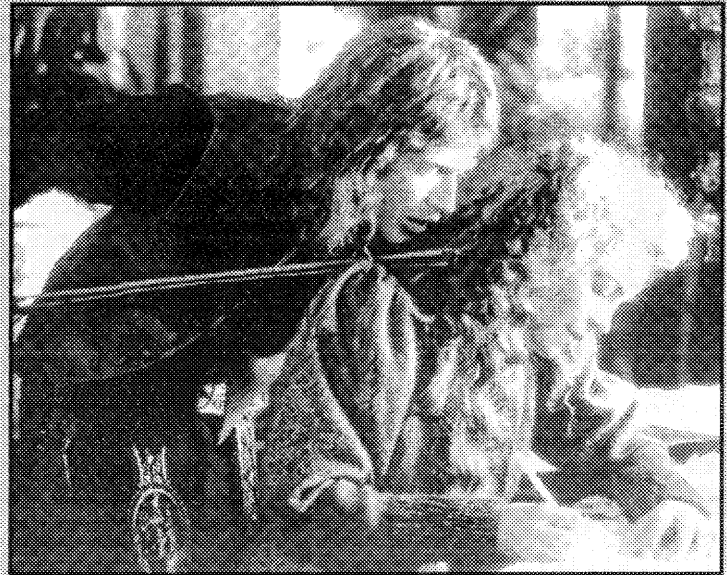

The person with the g-string that is scheduled to jump out of your cake is really your grandmother — sorry — but the 1998 Miss Ouk Champion was already booked for a complimentary bikini wax that same afternoon. Better luck next year, eh?

The Red Violin

Kevin Pedersen

"The Red Violin" starts Friday at the Eaton's Center Theatres (Cineplex Odeon). Samuel L. Jackson stars in this new film by Don McKeller and Francois Girard, which is about a master violin maker who loses his wife in childbirth. He becomes determined to create an everlasting tribute to his love: a Perfect violin imbued with her spirit. The story of The Red Violin takes place over several continents, cultures and centuries, inspiring passion and obsession in every life it touches. Definitely a date film.

Better than a rope and a bucket of pucks...

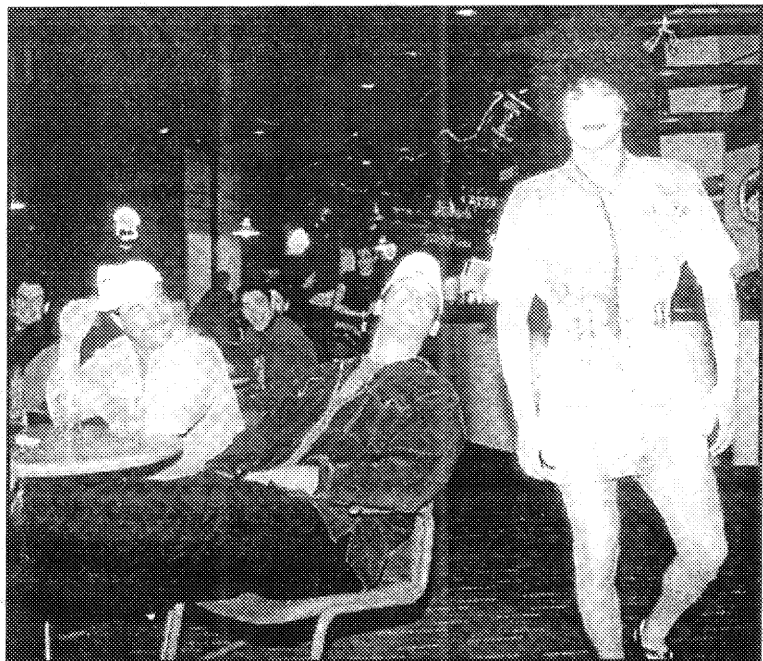

David Veilleux

On Tuesday, November 3rd, the Nest was host to the annual NAIT Oaks Hockey rookie party. This party is fondly known as this Miss NAIT Oak Pageant. Why is that, you ask? Well, each rookie must dress up in their finest drag apparel and compete for booze and notoriety.

All contestants were first introduced to the adoring audience all winner, somewhat in part because he nailed the finalists question.

The event was well attended, and service at the Nest was excellent. It must also be mentioned that I find the NAIT camerawoman and girls Volleyball team to be most pleasing to the eye. After the event, most everyone hightailed it down to Ezmeralda's for an evening of 1998 Miss Oak Pageant champion Darryl Hodgson schmoozes the fans this past Tuesday at the Nest.

and then asked a skill-testing question. (Dealing with some of today's most complex social issues, these tarts are not just big tits and curves you know)

Each contestant was then asked to perform a talent. These talents ranged from downing a pitcher of beer, skipping rope, giving hooter shooters, and singing an extremely hilarious and creative song. (You had to be there)

Darryl Hodgson was the over-fun and festivities. Never a bar to disappoint, Ezzie's provided a setting for a night to remember. (Or kinda hazily remember, in my case)

This night was evidence of what fun it can be to attend this school. Don't forget that even the most serious scholar has to let their hair down occasionally, O.K.? Thanks go out to the Oaks Hockey Team for providing this entertainment at the expense of their rookies.

Miss Oak Pageant contestants participate in a naughty group feel.

Dave Does Edmonton

David Veilleux

Edmonton was graced with the presence of a premiere band on Saturday, November 7th. Who could that be, you ask (Really, this is where you ask that)? Well, it was the Dave Matthews Band.

These guys are SOLID. It was a non-stop jam session that gave everyone in the crowd at the newly renamed Skyreach Centre something to dance to. These guys just never stopped, their musical talent is absolutely amazing. I came in to the concert only knowing "Crash into Me" and "Don't Drink the Water", but left as a through-and-through fan. I was surprised at the diversity of the crowd, as it seems that people young and old enjoy these high-energy musicians.

Some people haven't heard of the Dave Matthews Band, and if you are one of the few, here is a little history: In 1991, Dave Matthews decided to record the songs he'd been writing in his spare time. Not wanting to record only his voice and guitar, he gathered up some fellow musicians from his hometown of Charlottesville. As a bartender at the jazz bar called Miller's, Dave had heard and conversed with some of the area's best up-and-coming jazz musicians; mainly Carter Beauford and LeRoi Moore. Dave told them about his plans to record songs, and they agreed to help. Stefan Lessard, a 16-year-old upright and electric bass player, was also chosen for the project. The band then found that they needed a string musician for a few songs, and Boyd Tinsley with his high-energy violin was invited. After sitting in with the band on a few different occasions, Boyd was asked to join full-time, and The Dave Matthews Band was born. The DMB's first album was "Remember Two Things", released in 1993. In 1994, DMB's popularity grew and they released their major label debut, "Under the Table and Dreaming." "Crash" came in 1996, and they have just recently released "Before These Crowded Streets." The DMB are a musically eclectic and diverse band, and are growing into one of today's more refreshing musical alternatives.

Opening for DMB were The New Meanies. The New Meanies are an excellent group with talent to spare. They warmed up the crowd and left more than a few wishing that they had played more than an hour. Watch for these guys in the future. All in all, it was an excellent night of quality music presented at the good ol' Skyreach Centre, and I'll be sure to catch the DMB when they come rolling by again. You should, too.

THE COUPLE

Patrick J. Radulski

With but one glance
at him, my heart does prance for joy! The pleasure - the sight of him, my treasure!

Her tender touch, delightful, quickness my growing excitement,
so full,
that merely a look at her does start to bring contentment to my heart.

His departure - my pain,
I long, long for him to remain,
I yearn for his touch,
I love him so much!

Away from home, I want her,
I miss her,
The clock ticks slow,
I cannot wait, I must go,

To meet her, to greet her.
Once we meet, we become each other.
We give, we share,
all our love and all our care.

Apart -
no more,
together - always,

The Couple.

An open letter to the guy who stole my girlfriend:

What do you think you are accomplishing by stealing my girlfriend? Don't you know she's mine? I saw you walk by one day and I thought, "hey, I should watch out for that guy". But as always I didn't listen to myself. So here I write as you are enjoying my girlfriend...didn't you think I was still using her? Well didn't ya, huh, ya a*shole. I find myself strolling the streets late at night, just watching people, well...girls, go by, and I catch myself thinking about stealing any number of the girlfriends I see out and about. I hope you are happy about turning me into a monster.

An Acoustic Sin...Of Four Corners

Girafe Productions

SpanishFly

My lawyer has advised me to admit that upon my first listening of An Acoustic Sin's new cd called "Of Four Corners" and immediately afterward, my critical opinion did not put the defendants in a positive light. However, Your Honor, I would like to make it perfectly clear that my instincts and my professionalism prodded me to a second listening. It is at this point exactly where my opinion changed. With a little latitude I would now like to prove to the court, the jury, the audience and the world at large that the music of An Acoustic Sin is worthy of acclaim and recognition, strong sales and extensive contract offers followed by several worldwide tours.

Thank you, Your Honor. It is my meagre estimation that the true signs of artistic integrity are the ability to adapt and the ability to craft a subtly multifaceted piece that requires concentration and endurance to fully and completely understand and appreciate. The defendants exhibit both of these traits as far as I'm concerned. Please allow to demonstrate.

As far as the first point is concerned, AAS creates music that does not fall entirely within one genre. Not even two genres. I could not pin a number down but I would conservatively say 'several.' Folk rock, blues, flamenco, Gothic hard rock, Russian stump, Celtic fiddle swing... this list obviates a diverse heritage and an eclectic musical playlist. Also, Your Honor, I have done extensive research into this New Brunswick-based band and studied dutifully its lyric sheets. I submit evidence that listening to the melodious, harmonious, mellifluous, and indeed sonorous sounds of An Acoustic Sin produces a mood of alternating ambient tranquillity and cacophonous noise. However, upon reading the words that compose the songs themselves, I discovered that mere decibel level was in actuality a poetic deconstruction of symbolic words previously built up into a verbal smattering of non-linear vocalizations. In essence, Ronnie LeBlanc, the lead vocalist, did not utter the words in a straightforward fashion at times and this led to difficulties in understanding which were soon corrected by reading the songs.

Summation: ladies and gentlemen of the jury, this disc was really good.

Unbelievable Truth...Almost Here

Virgin Records

SpanishFly

Warning: This cd review is fraught with superlatives in the hope that someone in the industry will read it and want to use quotes from it in some official band literature. E.g. Unbelievable Truth has according to one reviewer, "the talent, the style, and the production values to finally give U2 a run for their mega-money."

I want to be known as the one reviewer who gave UT (Unbelievable Truth, not U2) the last inch of credibility that they needed to become a global force and a superpower in the music industry. What UT needs on their end, and I swear that this is all that they need, is a song, any song, that has some kind of Cherry Poppin' Daddy feel to it. Some kind of superswinging jive buttshaker, a megahit, something that can be mass marketed on t-shirts or made into a fantastic musical movie like Tommy or Pink Floyd's The Wall or something.

Alas, I do not think this will ever happen, or if it does, it won't be anytime soon. The reason most likely lies within the band itself. I think they have too many credentials, too much integrity, to sell themselves out in the name of the almighty buck. All I can do then is to just give you the facts and let time and circumstance play out their fate.

UT is obviously and heavily British. They have names like Andy Yorke and Nigel Powell, the disc was recorded at a place called Great Linford Manor, and although this is still ROCK music (whatever that means nowadays), the list of instruments isn't limited to guitar and drums but also includes an entire string section, replete with viola, cello, and violin.

The entire list of songs on the disc isn't your typical collage of differentia, some fast, some slow, some fun, some sad.... Everything on "Almost Here" seems to me to work towards building a specific mood, one of sombre reflection, an introspective journey into the nature of self and the quirky relationships that us messy humans engage ourselves in. You can't spin it in a club and expect people to dance to it but then not everything should be danced to.

Jamie Zotek in Accounting,

I stopped believing rumors years ago — why didn't you? A lot can happen in 5 years, and before you go shooting your mouth off prematurely, maybe you should get brought up to date on the facts first. It's 1998, Tugboat, not 1993.

Deda and Cory sitting on a... couch — with a big blanket. Only 43 more days until your innocence is lost forever! What will happen in 6 months again? Don't fall asleep and miss it! Can't wait to hear about the Mrs. Claus routine up on the table. "Cory likes me! Cory likes me! Cory likes me!" I guess this means buying you a speaker phone for Christmas is out, eh?

Your Best Budinski

Cinderella 2C2.

Like, so sorry about your parents, like, I didn't mean to cut them off as I was letting your dog off his leash, and like setting fire to your house. Like, sh*t happens! Like, since you lost all your possessions, like when your house was torched, I could lend you, like a hairbrush. By the way, don't bother trying to smile for my benefit, if I had to look at the stupid smirk on your face for 24 hours, I'd puke.

To the girl who likes girls,
Sorry, dental assistants don't like girls,

Disco Daddy Rene,
I'm thinkin' you and me and the bottle makes three tonight. I've got my eye on you, and I always get what I want so keep your head up. I'm on the hunt, I'm after you.

Hungry Like A Wolf

Big Daddy is sick of all these incompetent monkeys trying to talk a big game. For instance, I used the Bath House joke last year on Mike "Never gonna get any" Hunt, and since the size his brain is the size of a gnat's penis, he had to use it this year. Big Daddy would also like to remind everyone that Mike Hunt's mom is like a full-size sports sedan. She handles well at high speeds and can accommodate six at once.

Your future boss, Big Daddy

To a certain guy in CST,

I've seen you at the top of the tower with your red Jansport backpack and your black polo coat. You look so damn good with your spikey hair. I would like to take you into an empty computer lab and upgrade your floppy to a hard drive.

CMS

To Sacha D.,

I wanna take you on an adventure, starting with your toes.
Remember Me

Free Concert:

Rusty is coming on Nov 20th. Come out for some beer in the gym. Brought to you by NAITSA and The Nugget.

To Freyja & Cassiope,

Maybe the guys aren't approaching you because you're just too damn scary looking! Maybe it takes a guy 10-12 beers just to even want to give you the time of day! Think about that before you go man bashing. Maybe you should consider talking to the "girl who likes girls" if you can't get a man.

The Swinger in Business

Dear Freyja & Cassiope and all other ladies,
Personally, I'm kind of shy. The problem is, I don't know if all you ladies are already hooked up or not. (by the way, ladies, I am terribly single, and I'll treat you right. Reply via Grapevine if interested). XOXOXO!
Kodi the DM

IET 1A+1B,

What kind of men are you? Tough guys to pick on a girl. Are you going to take out the 2nd year girls, too? Think about how hard it would be to be out-numbered about 10 to 1. Besides, maybe you're threatened because the girls are smarter than you. Grow up, jerks!

IET Control Freak

I don't know Jenny Thornbird, but I am a full-time NAIT student who reads The Nugget regularly, and I think Jenny Thornbird ROCKS! I'm not a big fan of body piercing, but I am of people who aren't afraid to speak their minds and have facts to back up their opinions. So, Jenny, don't worry about your small-minded critics or their overly protective siblings. Some of us out here recognize intelligence and heart when we see it.

CST Guy

Lady-of-the-Balls,

Did your parents have any children that lived? I have a tendency to believe inbreeding gives off offspring of your type. How's your brother, I mean your father, I mean your uncle?

Page-of-the-Balls

To the BUS student and her lawyer,
Read back in the Grapevines a couple of weeks. YOU asked for our opinions, remember? Oh, to MOM, lick my bag, you're not worth my time. You too, Cryptic.

The Instrument Boys

— I can't believe you lick your mother with that mouth! You keep my MOM outta this, and I'll keep this outta your mama! Ed.

Steve in Culinary Arts,

I see a mirror in your pocket and I see my hands in your pants.
From, The A Far Girl

To the girl who likes girls,

As if we would talk to you about your cavities. We don't know, or care to know, where that mouth has been, but if you're looking for a bunk buddy, why don't you buy one of those birds that pick parasites out of large mammal's mouths? Maybe that would be more up your alley.

DA Girls

Flyguy,

I'm not as shy as I look. Come talk to me.

Join the official "We Hate Jenny Thornbird" Club. Meetings are every Thursday at noon at the Dock (in the Annex).

Marcel,

I found out your name. I'll give you a hint about mine — A famous person in history had the same name as me. I want to meet you. Write me a time and place via Grapevine. Mondays are bad. N.

To F.O.C.,

What's that stand for — F*ck Off, Casey? See, even subliminally, you agree with us. We find it funny how when guys reply to a girl in the Grapevine, the first thing they insult is either our looks or our intelligence. As for us not being lucky enough to know your friend Casey... we do know him! And we can't stand the squirt. He's arrogant, matter-of-fact, and annoying. Obviously you share the same traits if you're aiming at our I.Q.'s to attempt to insult us.

The Girls With Taste

Earth to Space Cadet,

Well, it's just too bad Crazy Steve is so picky, but red will always be my color.

Signed, Not Enough Freezies To Go Around

Cory,

I was one of the people you interviewed for you TV class. You were in a hurry, so we couldn't talk for long. Write back through the Grapevine if you're interested.

Camera Shy

Freyja & Cassiope,

Whatever happened to "Women's Lib" where the so-called "90's female" was just as aggressive as a guy? Or is it just that you pick and choose when to be modern and when to be traditional at your own convenience? Maybe, according to you, being a feminist just means to bitch and moan a lot! Or is it that women are the biggest hypocrites ever to walk the face of the earth — or maybe it's just you! (pick one) this "male bashing" is starting to bore me. Do you got something to hide? I got the Moxy, do you?

Billy K.

Annie Annex,

Brilliant. One short Grapevine, and you managed to prove how stupid and ignorant you are to 200 hard-working Culinary students and staff. Get down out of the Tower, the oxygen isn't reaching your brain. We all carry knives... enough said.

Love, Ronald Mac

Attention Miss Ooks:

We would like to thank the entire hockey team for their co-operation in the on-going process of filming a commercial promoting the team. It's been fun so far, and more footage needs to be taped. We'll see you on Saturday, November 14. Good luck against SAIT, we'll try to get it all. Oh, if you want copies of the pageant, let us know... it's entertaining!

The RTA Gals

Dearest Tarobbie,

C'mon and see the Chef for some sweet lovin'. Those baby blues of yours cut through me like lust lasers. My sister's not into it, but can your grandpa come and play? Oh, make sure to drag along your quitter friend. You also look kinda queer as a blonde.

Hugs + Jugs, Notorious B.O.C.

Mr. Burns,

Schmaggin' in the hostiles is illegal, especially when you put your teammates lives in danger the night before a big match! Ten second smashes are also illegal.

Wotashus,

4 smashes, 3 batches. You do the math.
Bussy Denis

Jill,

Where's my Chimp picture?

NAITSA is looking for 15 volunteers to work the Rusty & Rockin' Highliners stage set-ups Friday, November 20. Please see Crazy Mike at the NAITSA Office in Rm E-131 or phone 471-7603 if interested.

— Once again, I'd like to mention that there will be no Grapevines printed containing inter-tech bashing. I've let people settle up, but that's it. I like my job, and I'd like to think that you like the paper. Problems with people in your program? You can vent them here — I check the student numbers to find out your program. Want to meet that guy with the thong in your morning class? Try here. The people up above who don't pay for the paper are unhappy that there is a Grapevine section, so let's enjoy it while we can. We'll continue the good fight. Your acquiescent Editor in Chief, Mick Beale.
