Are you aware?

Alcohol and Drug Awareness Week is Underway

Jenessa "I can drink a case" Kirkwood

This week promote awareness about the alcohol and drugs around you. Are you sensible and responsible? There are fun activities all week, and if you've been to the milk chugging contest already, come out to the Shaw Theatre and watch some "Strange Brew."

The whole point for this week is to have more students be responsible about drugs and alcohol. Cory

Popiuk and Gavin Kopp are involved with BACCHUS, a national student organization with over 60 affiliated campuses in Canada. They provide information to support campus programs that educate students about drinking habits, and they help our Students' Association provide various activities for the students to enjoy.

The main point is for our Students' Association to get across to us, the students, about the do's and don'ts of drinking and driving. Have you seen the casket in the hallway in front of NAITSA's office? How do you feel? Well, this is the point that they are trying to get across. Cory Popiuk said, "We're not trying to preach about the absence of drinking, but just to drink responsibly," and by this, they are trying to make it a fun week.

Embryos, Anyone?

Tyler "dark rum" Harke

A controversial new discovery could lead to the cures for diseases such as diabetes, heart disease, and some types of strokes. The controversy involves the harvest of human embryonic stem cells, which are capable of forming into any type of cell or tissue matter in the human body. Scientists at the University of Wisconsin are the first to keep the cells alive during the gathering process.

"This is very significant," says Dr. Janet Rossant, a senior scientist at the Samuel Luenfeld Research Institute at Mount Sinai Hospital in Toronto, "In the broadest sense, the ability to use the cell replacements could change the face of medicine." Rossant also just happens to be Canada's leading stem cell researcher (Exactly how many stem cell researchers do we have anyway?).

...they feel it is immoral to create embryos solely for repairs to living beings.

Pharmaceutical companies (who already have a multi-billion dollar industry) are cautious about cashing in the new discoveries. Certain religious groups have already expressed their disapproval over the new technology, stating that they feel it is immoral to create embryos solely for repairs to living beings. The embryos used in the research were gathered from fertility clinics.

The possibilities of these new medical findings are seemingly endless. New spinal chords for people in wheelchairs, new nerve cells for Alzheimer's patients, and even new heart tissue for heart attack sufferers.

Regulations are attempting to be made, but the issue is so controversial that it will surely take years before anything is set in stone. Until then, scientists will have to refine the new technology and wait to see if society approves of it.

News in a Nutshell

Jenny "bourbon drinker" Thornbird

• Boston Won't Go Psycho

Posters promoting the remake of Alfred Hitchcock's "Psycho" are being pulled from subway stations and buses after more than dozen people complained that the posters gave them the willies. The poster shows the silhouette of a woman behind a shower door with blood pooled near the bottom. It is meant to depict the nightmarish scene of the original 1960 movie of a woman being repeatedly stabbed in the shower at a secluded hotel. The remake, starring Anne Heche, is set to be released on December 4.

• A Royal Intrusion Of Privacy

Prince Charles wants an apology from the British newspaper "The Mirror" after they ran a front-page headline claiming that his son Harry suffered a minor sports injury at school and had to be taken to hospital. While Prince Charles does not deny the claim, he feels that the paper breached the Royal Family's request to grant both Prince Harry and Prince William complete privacy in their school lives and that "The Mirror" should apologize publicly to Prince Harry for intruding on this. The paper argues, however, that the public is entitled to know if an heir to the throne is involved in an accident; and that the allegation made by Prince Charles is only a thinly disguised attempt to bully and censor the press.

• Message From God?

While in the midst of passing sentence on a convicted sex offender, Justice Borke Smith had an overhead lighting fixture break loose above him and land on his head. "Was that from God?" Justice Smith joked, but no one laughed as they watched the blood drip from his forehead. The Justice stumbled slightly as he left the bench and was tended to in his chambers by ambulance personnel. He did, however, return to court an hour later to finish sentencing, along with a quite visible cut and a large bump on his head.

• The Sailor Who Did It Solo

A Russian sailor had to perform surgery on himself using instructions via an Email. Victor Yazykov, a competitor in the Around Alone boating race, set out to sea more than two months ago on the first leg of the grueling solo race. While still over 1,500 kilometres from shore, he started to lose the use of his right arm and Emailed the race doctor. Three days later, his arm became infected and he was told he would have to drain an abscess on his right elbow before it ruptured internally and became gangrenous. Yazykov was successful overall in performing the self-surgery, barring a few complications. He arrived safely at his first destination a week later, taking the 5th spot going into the second leg of the race. "It was like following a recipe for brownies," Yazykov commented once safely on shore.

• What's In A Name?

What's in a name? Plenty, if somebody by the same name as yours has a bad credit history. A lady in Grande Prairie keeps getting harassed by different collection agencies demanding money by a phantom namesake. It seems when she's done clearing things up with one creditor, another one from another store calls. The Grande Prairie RCMP are currently on the case of the phantom namesake, but with little success so far. In the meantime, Linda Wold — the REAL Linda Wold — can't even shop at The Bay without being harassed. "I try to tell them the situation," she said, "that I'm not this person, but some get really defensive. They don't believe me."

• Superstitious Bylaw Proposed

Think your street address is unlucky? Want it changed? Well, if a new bylaw goes through, you may just get your wish. The proposed property numbering bylaw, going before a city council in Cambridge, Ontario, next week, is apparently needed to deal with increasing public requests to change addresses. For a fee of $50, you can get your property reviewed to see if it would qualify.

If the bylaw goes through, it will benefit residents with front doors and driveways on separate streets, as well as brand-new buildings; however, if you're in the middle of a block with something like 666 for a house number, you're stuck.

What's on your wish list?

Christmas just around the corner

Jenessa "I make killer eggnog" Kirkwood

Can you stand to see all of the Christmas decorations around the city? I don't know, but I think it's still a little too early for all of this commotion. Just the other day, I saw a Christmas tree in someone's window! Well, I started my list in October because if you looked around, there were so many sales on at the end of that month, and even right now you can still find them. I guess I'm kinda contradicting myself because I have my shopping all done — and guess what? I've got the gifts all wrapped, too! Ha! But, hey, look at all of the money I saved. Practically everything I bought was on sale, even at the GAP. I still have to wonder why people put their Christmas trees up right now, though. So, do you know what you're getting for anyone yet? When I went around the school and asked everyone what was on their list, they mostly replied: 1. Clothes; 2. Clothes; 3. Clothes. Ha! Well, sorry if I couldn't help you, but I guess that's just a hot item this year. Two people I interviewed though, replied, "I already know what my present is, and it's a trip to Mexico." So some of us aren't as lucky as them, but there is always a chance of Santa Claus showing up. I mean, to get presents like that you have to believe in Santa, because I just don't see it happening to too many people. Another hot item this year are CDs; pretty original, hey? But if you want to be original this year, you could always go out and get a 3-D puzzle like Jill Bulger, but she wants the one that really works! So, have any of you started that list for other people yet? About 98% haven't started, and won't until the 18th; but you know, that is when they hike up the prices the most, and if you're a starving student like me, you better get out there and catch all of those deals!

...to get presents like that you have to believe in Santa....

Standardized Testing Giving All The Wrong Answers

Tyler "silent" Harke

B.C. teachers are calling for a full review of all standardized government exams currently in use in that province. According to Kit Krieger, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, the tests are an inaccurate way of evaluating both students and schools.

For the last 20 years in B.C., Provincial Learning Assessment Programs (PLAP tee hee!) have been used to evaluate different course content in B.C. schools; however, this year they are being used to evaluate individual student performances as well.

138,000 B.C. students wrote what seem to be very messed up exams last May. For instance, the readability level of one Grade Four booklet was rated at a Grade Ten level while a Grade Seven reading booklet was rated at Grade Four. That hardly seems like a fair test to me.

The May 1998 test even raised major ethical concerns among teachers. One written response question asked students to write about their homes. Because it never clarified whether it was to be fictional or not, there were 26 cases of child-abuse called in to the Ministry of Children and Families. Even worse, none of the teachers knew whether the situations were made up or not.

While this info no longer has an affect on us, any students with little brothers or sisters should know that the same tests are used at each stage of schooling in Alberta as well; beginning with Grade Three and ending with the dreaded Departmental exams in Grade Twelve.

These exams are a major evaluation for entering any kind of post-secondary institute. Apparently, they need to either put much less emphasis on these exams or find a way to make them more accurate in evaluating the writer. Oh well, now I don't feel as bad about that 51% on my Grade 12 Math final.

World Track and Field coming to Edmonton in 2001!

Jenessa "aware of beer" Kirkwood

On November 19 in Monaco, the Edmonton 2001 Bid Committee won the right to host the World Track and Field Championship. Twenty-seven voting delegates of the International Amateur Athletics Federation chose Edmonton as the site of the first world championships in athletics to be held in North America. The Edmonton bid was picked over bids by Stanford (U.S.A.), New Delhi (India), and Paris (France). The Edmonton Bid Committee making the official presentation was Alberta Premier Ralph Klein; Edmonton Mayor Bill Smith; Canadian Minister of Justice Anne McLellan, the Attorney General of Canada, Athletics Canada Chairman Rolf Lund, and Bid Committee Co-Chairs Jack Agrios and Dr. Bob Steadward.

Everyone from the Mayor to the Premier is excited. They probably should be from how this will affect our economy alone. The people of Edmonton have to be excited also.

The World Championships in Athletics are the third largest sporting event in the world, after the Summer Olympics and World Cup Soccer. This event will attract 3,000 athletes and coaches from all over the world, along with 4,000 media representatives. The expected impact on the economy from hosting the Championships is currently being estimated at $386 million.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I have a small problem with your response to J. Zotek's letter last week. First off, we don't care what you "earn" as editor, so why bother bringing it up? I cannot find one single word in Zotek's article that mentions anything about your salary as editor, and as for your comment that all editors edit stories to fit their own "personal" views, it is not true. Lloyd Robertson is not an editor, and he does not edit his writers' stories to fit his own personal opinions, so maybe get your facts straight before you decide to publish. If you seriously think that "editors like yourself" edit for their own personal gain, then get out of the business now and just give up.

I'm not going to lower myself to the standard of telling you to get a life, but the response I am expecting back from you is entirely negative, as are all your responses to people who don't appreciate the job you're doing.

I don't care if the U of A students and the coach of the basketball team "prefer" The Nugget to The Gateway, I still think a lot of what has been getting published is crap; and as a final point, where the hell is this Alberta vs. Saskatchewan thing coming from? Of course two different provinces are going to be different, just like British Columbia is different from the Yukon.

Really, I don't care if you pick something out of here to bash, or even if you bash my name because I know that you're just venting and fuming, and no one cares about what you write. Thank you.

Aaron Kroetsch

-Thank you for your letter. It's nice to hear things from readers who enjoy good writing. Thank you for your input on The Nugget.

Mick,

Have you ever worked on a job or project which was by-and-large a simple affair, but you found that some individuals expected Nobel material of you? Meanwhile, you are quite satisfied with your output (along with the majority of those exposed to it), yet there are those few who take exception to your style? Has that ever been the case?

I mean, I can't see that ever happened at, say, THE NUGGET, but I might be mistaken. From an adult to an adult, let me tell you that if that ever happens to you — that you find yourself defending your integrity and skill — you just give me a name and I'll take care of things.

Let's get real: If the Grapevine represents the NAIT student body (of which I am a part of, rest assured), 90% of us hate another technology for no apparent reason, 50% of us are sexually depraved, about 20% of us cannot write cognizable sentences, and roughly 17 students want to kill someone. That being said, it is futile to demand that The Nugget be comparable to the NY Times since it is student-written. Meanwhile, I would prefer to read one Nugget than a year of the Times, because ours is a paper for US.

Keep up the good work, Mick.

PS: Mr. Zotek, the NY Times is available at the Edmonton Public Library. (phone for hours)

Greg deJong

-Thanks, Greg. I enjoy your submissions. Keep them coming.

Mr. Mick Beale,

Thanks for publishing my poem. I should have realized you do get a lot of requests to publish articles submitted. You spelled my last name incorrect though, — it's Senos. I will in the future, submit other articles. Yes, no need for... supper sometime? Keep up the good work.

Thanks again,
Steven Edward Senos

-Sorry for the inaccurate spelling. We encourage submissions from all students, everywhere. You can email them to us at nugget@oanet.com, fax them at 471-7614, or drop them by a submission box. We can't guarantee everything will get in, but considering The Nugget is the students' paper, we think there should be content from students.

Dear Editor,

I want to know how the woman host of the NHL Cool Shots got her job. Does she know anything about hockey? In my opinion, she doesn't even know what the puck is for!!! She gives all woman who actually understand the game, a bad name!!! All her interviews consist of are, "Oh, this is where Eric Lindros lives, what a pretty house!" or "Patrick Roy, how do you stop a puck? Hello!!!"

Most people with half a brain know how goalies stop the puck, or even better, "Why do hockey players wear all this equipment?" Seriously, woman, grab a brain!!! People are more interested in the players' plus/minus rating, PIM, goals, assists, best plays, worst plays — you get my meaning!!! Any information that actually pertains to hockey would be a bonus. I could care less about what he looks like or where he lives or who he is involved with. If I wanted tabloid info, I would buy one!!!

Signed,
S.B.M.J.

-I visited the NHL Cool Shots Website, and sent a letter to the producers of the show in hopes of uncovering this information for you. If you are interested in girls who do know about hockey, why don't you check out the Lady Ooks hockey team in action — we've got their schedule in the sports section this week.

Euthanasia

Curtis Wood

What is this world coming to when a man can kill himself, videotape it, and have it viewed during prime time hours on a Sunday night by a television audience? Is this what they call quality programming? Dr. Death is willing to die in prison to prove to the world that we should kill people who are suffering. Pretty sad.

This is a slippery rope that will start allowing doctors to put to sleep suffering patients, and end with technicians putting to sleep humans that turn 65 years of age. What, you think this can't happen? What about abortion? It was introduced in 1968 in Canada for the sole purpose of preventing deaths during complications in childbirth.

Now, women can have abortions on demand. Next, women will be forced to have abortions, or be sterilized. Crazy? Wait and see!

The law of nature is that only the strong survive. Deer don't gather around a sick elder deer and then stomp on it to death, do they? They do not kill their own offspring, either; they protect and nurture their young. Why does the human population figure they must do this to their own, then? Compassion, to allow a quick death to a suffering life, or possibly even for selfish reasons like making room in hospitals, to visit grandpa less, or the pure fact that someone is a waste of space. The scariest part about all this, is that nobody is speaking out because we all agree.

From the Editor

Robert Latimer and Barnyard Justice

Mick "Glenfiddich for me" Beale

I like Bob Latimer. He's a man who has enjoyed a life of simplicity until about five years ago. He has a family farm near Wilkie, SK, and he has plenty of friends down at the local curling rink (one can be sure). He's going to be in jail for a lot longer than anticipated, however, and it bothers me.

I may be opening a can of worms here, but I don't think that what he did was worth a life sentence (25 years) in prison. He's an honest man. He said that he killed his daughter out of love in a bid to end her suffering. That's the compassionate father speaking. Some see that as the barnyard executioner speaking. When a horse is in pain, you kill it. You end the suffering. I'm on Bob's side. He was a loving father. He was a quiet farmer with enough character witnesses to fill the SkyReach Center. He shouldn't be imprisoned for anything more than his previous sentence.

I should explain the history behind this situation. Tracy Latimer, age 12, was killed by Robert Latimer using exhaust fumes in 1993. She had a severe form of cerebral palsy. She couldn't walk, talk or feed herself, and she functioned at the level of a three-month-old. She had lived a life of pain and underwent many painful surgeries. His current sentence is life imprisonment with no chance of parole for 10 years. The sentence before that was two years less a day, with one year being served on the family farm. This was appealed by the Crown because they felt that the judge had not followed the law. The sentence before that, handed out in 1994, was overturned by the Supreme Court of Canada because the RCMP, acting on Crown orders, improperly questioned potential jurors in the original trial. Jurors were asked their feelings on euthanasia and other issues that related to the nature of the case.

The case sparked a national debate on mercy killing. Disabled groups worried that if Latimer was let off lightly, it would give the impression that his actions were justified. The most vulnerable in our society would be offed one at a time, with the murderers being let off in a similar, slap on the wrist sort of sentencing.

Latimer felt that he did something out of compassion for his little girl who was living a life of pain. Some feel that he was sick of caring for her. His family believes that the world's greatest dad is now going to prison. I believe that if rapists can be sentenced to 2 years in prison, less a day (to avoid Federal Penitentiary time), why shouldn't compassionate fathers be? Until next week, don't forget to floss.

NAIT Sports Teams

What a Joke!

Vhin P.

Has anyone ever attended a NAIT Ooks game? Besides watching a friend or a relative, I think not! Then why do we need these sports team? Do you think that the money that is allocated for these few individuals would be better spent on new computers for the school, or even new books for the library? Did you know that the athletes get paid to play? Not much, but it all adds up. Personally, I would rather watch a new series on CBC than attend a NAIT Ooks game. Yeah, the teams represent the school, but I think the hicks in Olds and Grande Prairie have an idea where Edmonton is, as well as the location of NAIT. Do the players of these teams think they have a chance in turning pro? I haven't heard of any NHL players that played for the Ooks! I imagine that one WNBA game would have more fans attending than the total attendance of all the NAIT teams combined in one year. The big shots at NAIT should be more concerned about spending money on education than on sports.

Editor's Note: We pay for our nationally acclaimed sports teams. So does every other school, but there's a difference: our team's are full of heart and a pleasure to watch. Have you hugged an Ook lately?

Life in the Annex

Caroline Fedoruk

Yes, surprisingly there is life in the Annex. Severely deprived life, but life all the same.

To outsiders, it seems to be a strange, mythical place full of engineers and other math-related technologies. Take note! These people are not lab rats! They need space and recognition, too!

Lunch time comes, not signaled by bells or sirens, but by the instructors' sighs of defeat and the flow of students from their classrooms into.. Where?? Where do all these students go?!

Well, let's analyze this like the geeks we are.

NAIT lovingly provides us with two gathering places in this vast building (following Communist concepts of preventing uprisings, I'm sure): The Dock and the Cafeteria.

The only aesthetic value of the cafe is the almost wrap-around windows, giving us a beautiful view of the parking lot and the side of the building.

The Cafeteria is not like the big, fancy Common Market on Main Campus. Oh no. Our caf resembles, well, a cafeteria. There is a food line and a small mass of tables. The only aesthetic value of the cafe is the almost wrap-around windows, giving us a beautiful view of the parking lot and the side of the building. Its decor was warped right from the 60's, complete with tacky floral wallpaper and oxen yoke lanterns. Chairs are old and cracked, uncomfortable at best, and the food isn't exactly flying off the mock-buffet line. That, and it's only open until 1 p.m. Lovely.

The average Annex dweller also enjoys The Dock. In case you don't know the story, apparently our building used to be a Sears department store, and our lounge was the loading dock. The most creative people working for NAIT named it the Dock; ooh, just feel the connections being made.

Picture this:

You lug yourself into the Dock after standing for 20 minutes in line to nuke your day-old Kraft Dinner or Ramen (not Ichiban, but Ramen). You look around for a place to crash and survey the scene: bodies everywhere and not a chair free. You sigh and stand in the doorway, blocking everybody trying to move in or out of your beloved space. The tables are all mismatched, and people are sitting in chairs around end tables or eating their sandwiches around one of the four ever-busy foosball tables. You look up those way too steep slanting stairs to the top level. The crunched tables and chairs are full of people, paper, and books. In a last ditch attempt to park your butt, you look toward that huge, long couch thing. No luck. It's filled with semi-comatose students claiming to be studying (the inside of their eyelids). You sigh and walk away from the glaring light of the oversized, undershaded windows and pick up a copy of The Nugget. You sit anywhere your bag falls and spread the pages of the student life line around you.

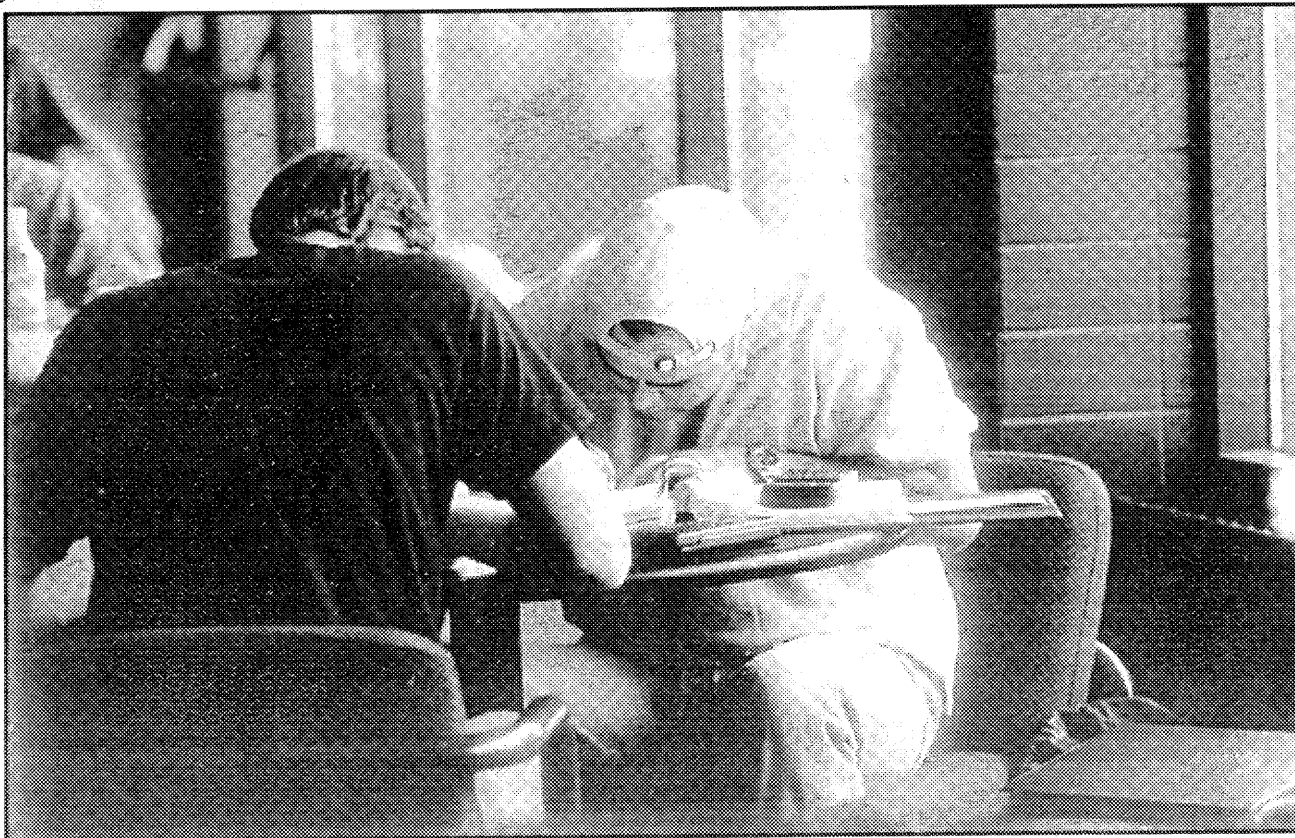

Somehow you manage to block out the Addam's Family song echoing from the pinball machine. You curse the brand-new, louder than ever air-hockey table, thinking foosball can't be that evil, and settle down for some trashy reading. In The Nugget you read all about inter-technology warfare and competition, wondering when it started or who the hell Twin Towers and Big Man on Campus are, or more importantly what they're talking about. You read articles about entertainment at The Nest that you had no clue was happening; and about OOKS action in the gym and you're thinking, "Hey, when'd we get a gym and where the heck is it?" Then you read on through mindless ramblings about trivial matters of personal hygiene and a 3-part series on the injustices of society's rejection of multiple body piercing.

Confused, you sit back and realize how isolated we are at the Annex. Sure, we battle people for parking spaces in the main lot in the morning, but where do all these people go, and how come they look significantly less confused about where they're going between the bookstore and the Project Factory?

Ahh, life at the Annex. Who would trade it for anything on Main Campus? I would. In a second.

The Mount Royal Cougars — the #1 ranked team in Canada, defending National Champions, 1st place in the ACAC with an 8-2 record, were up against the surging NAIT OOKS Men's Hockey Team this past weekend. Your OOKS, who had recently knocked off the undefeated SAIT Trojans, were on a five-game unbeaten streak heading into the weekend series with Mount Royal.

Game One went Friday night at NAIT, the first matchup this season versus the powerhouse Cougars. The game turned out to be one of the fastest paced games of the season. Both teams were blessed with great and talent, which led to an enjoyable battle. Jeff "I go kooky bananas when I score" Seguin, scored the game's first goal off a rebound shot from myself and linemate Chuck "Bionic knee" Beaulieu. The game was controlled by the homeside OOKS, with numerous hits and aggressive play throughout. Two more goals then followed, one by 3rd year veteran Trevor "Fred Couples" Hart and 2nd year man Leigh "Jesus, where did you get legs like that?" Arsenault. The OOKS held on for the shutout, thanks to some big saves from Mr. Patience Darryl "Cup-o-soup" Hodgson. OOKS 3/Cougars 0

After the big win Friday night, we knew Saturday's game in Mount Royal's olympic-sized barn would be a tough task. The game started off in what we thought to be our advantage, with an early power play goal by Friday's hero Jeff "Westlock Warrior" Seguin. The big goal was quickly called back with a questionable crease violation by the referee. We put the bad call behind us and fought hard throughout the rest of the period. Soon after, Mount Royal took the lead with a goal of their own. Former table tennis champ Mike "My ping-pong game's the shits" Mychalysyn, ripped a long slapper to tie up the intense match. The momentum was back in our hands, thanks to yet another goal late in the period by Jeff "Redemption" Seguin. Mount Royal managed a goal in the second period to tie up the game heading for the third. The third period was somewhat a sloppy frame compared to the first two. The Cougars went to the power play midway through the third, and received a greasy bounce off a leg and into our net to take the lead. We never gave up fighting to the end, but we received the empty net dagger in the back later in the game. The hockey owls come up short on the road: OOKS 2/Cougars 4

Former table tennis champ Mike "My ping-pong game's the shits" Mychalysyn, ripped a long slapper to tie up the intense match.

The last two weekends were a true test for our club against the two 1st place teams from the south. Finishing off the fourth game with a loss hurts, but all in all, our team is still satisfied with a 3-1 record vs. the Calgary clubs. Next up for the 6-5-1 OOKS is the across-town Grant MacEwan Griffins this Saturday at 7 p.m. in the NAIT Arena. Hope to see you there! Until next time, keep your chin strap done up.

Stamps Capture The CFL Crown

Andrew "I can't stand Calgary" Hore

Every athlete has heard the old phrase, "Let's play a full 60 minutes tonight!" once or twice in their careers. This year's Canadian Football League Champions, the Calgary Stampeders, did just that — played a full 60 minutes.

With small change remaining on the clock, Calgary's quarterback, Jeff "I'm a little light in the loafers" Garcia, led an offensive drive to set up for a game-winning field goal

With small change remaining on the clock, Calgary's quarterback, Jeff "I'm a little light in the loafers" Garcia, led an offensive drive to set up for a game-winning field goal by Mark McLoughlin. With the wind behind and his late father watching from the heavens, McLoughlin made no mistake splitting the uprights for the breathtaking win.

As much as I hate Calgary, they deserve credit where credit is due. The team never gave up, and showed composure throughout the entire game — remaining confident right up until the big kick was made.

The Hamilton Tiger Cats, led by ex-Eskies coach Ron Lancaster, receiver Darren Flutie, and quarterback Danny MacManus, gave a brilliant effort in the Grey Cup game which, in the end, really could have went either way.

Calgary now becomes one of the powerhouse CFL teams of the 90's, capturing their second cup. You Calgarians should be proud, but until your town is named the CITY OF CHAMPIONS and your hockey teams wins five Stanley Cups, don't come a barkin'.

Women's Hockey

Great news! NAIT now has a women's hockey team, and we're full of potential and skill — the only thing we lack, are fans!!! You heard me — FANS. So, now that you know we have a hockey team, you should come out and support us like you do for the guys! Our stats so far are 2-5-1. We usually play Monday nights at 9:15 p.m., and I know that seems a bit late to come out, but trust us, you won't regret it. The night will be filled with fun and entertainment. The best way for all of you to show your support, will be this Friday and Saturday at NAIT's 2nd Annual Women's Hockey Tournament. The schedule for the tournament, along with our regular season schedule, is at the right.

The Best Places to Kiss in Edmonton

Robyn "Kevin's on a Holiday" Buckley

Giovanni's Italian Restaurant

10130 - 107th St.
426-2021

Moderate to Expensive

Finally. A restaurant that ensures passion. The interior design here is incredible, with Giovanni himself choosing the decor. The food here is exceptional, with the mother of this family-owned restaurant spending time in the kitchen to insure perfection. The meals are prepared in a homemade way. The meat sauces and pastas themselves are made within the kitchen, ensuring one-of-a-kind quality.

I'm sick of going to pseudo-romantic places, it's about time I went to a restaurant that epitomizes romance. Italian music plays softly in the background. Authentic Italians roam between the tables, dealing with customers in a courteous and polite manner, going above and beyond the call of duty. You know that it's a good Italian restaurant when there's real Italians working and eating there. All I had to say to convince my boyfriend to go was, "They've got the most amazing meat." Men are simple. I tell him to come for the meat sauce and lasagna, and I get to dine on the finer items like the Pesce Misto del Marinaio. He can always order the New York Steak, but see, if you can turn him onto the bona fide Italian dishes, he'll bring you back again. Even if he says he's not into the menu (because he can't understand what the dishes are), you can win him over with the wondrous selection. Besides, you can always ask what the dishes are for him so he's not embarrassed.

If you're lucky, you can get a table by the fireplace. The candle on your table is romantic enough, change. Order up some Agnelotti di Casa (in oyster, mushroom and cream sauce) for him, and watch the oysters do their wonder. I know, we're always promoting oysters in this column, but really, if it works, stick to it.

After the big meal, be sure to order up a pair of desserts. The cappuccino (made from a classy, old-school machine) is marvelous here. Be sure that you have something to sip on after the meal, whether a wine from the huge assortment of intoxicating beverages or a coffee. You'll want to have after-meal time with your man to let him know how much he means to you, and how much you appreciate him taking you to one of the finest restaurants that Edmonton has to offer. This place is number one on our list of the best places to kiss in Edmonton.

Poetry

On Falling Asleep With A Cat

Daria Morgan

Fat and furry, orange blob purring,
Paw reached out to touch my arm.
Tiny mind finds my head alluring,
Safe from dogs and other harm.

Now the distant clock reminds me
Tomorrow comes too soon, too quick!

Night swoops down on me and kitty
As I reach up and the lamp goes click.

Nightmare stalks on silent feet,
Around the carpet 'neath the bed.
But this night's fate cat and me cheat,
And nightmare nasty won't be fed.

Birthday Party (memory of Leone)

Marcia O'Conner

we gather in celebration of a life
in a large room
with many flowers

a man speaks
in a sombre tone
of the young woman
born eighteen years ago

sobs punctuate his words
we look from him

to the coffin
there will be no gifts opened her boyfriend

misses the party
rests in an expensive room
his cuisine drips from a bottle

the other driver
no longer festive waits at home
fears his penance

You Never Called Me Back, Ya #@S^@%*!

Anonymous

I phoned last night but you weren't home

So I'll phone you like a metronome.
You never ever returned my calls —
Just wonder if you'd play fastball.

I thought I liked Squash, though I really stink.

It must be all the Coke I drink...

"Diablo" is loaded, all ready to play
But I've been calling you all friggin' day.

I love movies, yes I do
Three... four a week. How 'bout you?

I was calling you 'til late in the night
"Let's go for a drive and pick a fight!"

Oh, if only you would have called back
We might have gone play hacky-sack.

Believe it or not, I've got lots to say.
If you answer the phone, I could talk all day.

I speak a bunch I kid you not,
Some might call me Sir Blabs-a-lot.

I've been calling you for the whole darn weekend,
I was hoping to borrow some bucks to spend.

No wonder I'm late once again for school,

I was up calling you. I am such a fool.
Calling you up is like no more fun

I'll just call you when your homework's long done.

You got cash on hand? Hey, how 'bout lending me some?

What? My credit's shot? But I need some rum!

...Or Coke, for that matter. Just love that taste.

That stuff will turn my stomach to waste.

My Discman's batteries are just 'bout shot,

And I can hardly count the CDs I bought.

I love to sing many-a-song
And I'd been calling you all night long.

My team thought I'm lazy, but that isn't true,

I just do not care when that project is due.

I've got your number up on the speed dial.

That's how I call you when I sense denial.

I've a student loan, given to true learners,

But my cash will be used for a CD Burner.

My lab's due tomorrow! Now I'll be up all night.

I guess I'll be lucky to get twenty percent right.

That lab's due today! I'm just really tired.

I'd better drink more Coke to keep me wired.

How come when I call you, you are rarely home?

Oh well, I've come to the end of the poem.

The King and I

Kevin "Bring on the Duff" Pedersen

The King and I will be playing at the Shoctor Theatre November 28-January 3rd. Presented by Canada's Citadel Theatre, this is the captivating story of Anna, an English nanny who travels to Siam to teach the sixty-seven children of the King. Her overcoming of the culture shock and the romance between herself and the King make for a wonderful tale.

This Rodgers and Hammerstein musical premiered on Broadway in 1951. Jan Alexandra Smith, who stars as Anna, says that the tale is very timeless and can be enjoyed by all.

She mentioned that Jodi Foster has been trying to make the movie but has faced opposition by the people in Thailand. "The idea of the King being influenced by a Western woman is inaccurate, and most Thai people feel that this story mocks them and their way of life." Ms. Smith has been in quite a number of productions in a number of roles ranging from a production of Anne of Green Gables in Japan to Ray Bradbury Theatre on television. She's been nominated for a Sterling for My Fair Lady and she's won the 1989 AMPA Award for Best Actress.

Be sure to get your tickets soon, as the shows are selling out. Tickets are available at all Ticketmaster outlets, or at the Citadel Box Office.

HORRORSCOPES

Daria "I am aware of Pilsner" Morgan

Capricorn

(December 23-January 19)

You will fall asleep in at least one of your classes this week. Next week, try and liven the dozey atmosphere by bringing, oh, a few live scorpions to school. Dropping them randomly as you walk to your desk will really do wonders for social interaction.

Aquarius

(January 20-February 18)

You will find a fertility statue in one of the vending machines on campus. If you set it on top of your television and watch soaps all afternoon, you will discover that at least one person in each soap you watch is pregnant. How's that for an accurate prediction?

Pisces

(February 19-March 20)

You will answer the phone today by shouting: "You bloated sack of protoplasm!" Unfortunately, it's not your friend calling — it's your mother. Whine, whine, whine... Oh, a giant piece of cheese will fall on your head on Saturday. You'll first think that there's a rodent problem, but really, it's just your friend leaning over you, with a bottle of Cheese Whiz in a Can.

Aries

(March 21-April 19)

This is a really good day to make a face like a rodent and hold your paws up in front of your chest. When someone asks you what the hell you're doing, chitter at them and scurry away. Did I mention that you should go into Accounting just for the hell of it? You divide the legs, add the...

Taurus

(April 20-May 20)

Ah ha! You will finally have an opportunity to use the word "plumbaginous" in casual conversation today! You will either be discussing push-up bras or garter belts at the time. This is also a good time to start becoming a connoisseur. Start with something fun, say, like all the beer leftover from the Tell concert. (Pay me $50 and I'll tell you where it is)

Gemini

(May 21-June 20)

You will come across a matchbook that will change your life. Inside the cover it will read, "You, too, can become a criminal mastermind..."

Cancer

(June 21-July 22)

Someone will ask you for advice — don't give it! If they insist upon it, simply shake their hand, mutter, "Much bad juju," and refuse to clarify. If you break down in a moment of weakness and give advice though: Beware. Something will become overly intimate with you, and it'll take 7 days and a London Drugs coupon to go away.

Leo

(July 23-August 22)

It's okay to whistle while you work. Your co-workers will draw the line yodeling while you work, though. They're probably just jealous. Did I mention that this would also be a good time to show the world that plaid and stripes do too mix?

Virgo

(August 23-September 22)

They say that a dog is a man's best friend. Oddly, that's only true in some European-derived cultures. In sub-Saharan, Africa, man's best friend is a blue-tongued skink. They just have a heck of a lot more trouble fetching the paper. You may find your own best friend type soon though — you know, one that will wine you, dine you, lick your feet, and call you George.

Libra

(September 23-October 22)

Nobody knows the trouble you've seen — except for Bob, that is. You know... the quiet neighbor, with the binoculars? This would also be a good weekend to put together an emergency survival kit incase an earthquake strikes Edmonton. You'll need Pilsner beer, AA batteries, chocolate sauce, a strobe light, a radio, spiked heels, and a feather boa.

Scorpio

(October 23-November 21)

Bad news, people think you're becoming paranoid. Isn't that just typical, though? I mean, they don't even HAVE invisible, malevolent, air-squids spying on THEM, do they??? Spiked collars are on sale at The Dock for 25 cents each.

Sagittarius

(November 22-December 22)

This is a good day to be logical and willing to admit error. This will amaze and confuse everyone, and some of them will be flustered that they'll try it themselves. Just don't keep it up for too long — you might get stuck like that and go through the rest of your life being nice to people. Scary thought, eh?

If today is your birthday...

Today you will either be snug as a bug in a rug, or snug as a thug on a drug. Hard to say for sure.

David "Be Responsible" Veilleux

Apparently many of you did not know that Rusty played a free show for you, the discerning NAIT student, this past Friday. Maybe the signs were put up too late, or you didn't see the large advertisements in The Nugget. Some of you might not have heard Robbie and I as we toured NAIT with a megaphone to advertise the event. At least I hope so, because if that isn't the case, I am sincerely appalled at the student apathy running rampant here at NAIT.

We are all here, NAITSA and

The Nugget, with the explicit goal to provide you with the greatest campus environment possible. NAITSA has done a stellar job this year, giving current NAIT students a plethora of academic and entertainment options. I know that your studies are of paramount importance, and finding time to attend some of these events is hard, but that is why you should pick the upcoming event that best suits you and make sure you attend. You must also keep sight of the fact that these events are designed to benefit you, alleviate your stress, and allow you to meet and greet your fellow students. Everyone I meet at these events benefit from them. How can you not have a good time when you're out with old friends, making new ones, and listening to a top-notch band like Rusty?

This band kicks ass — and takes names, as those who attended found out quickly. Their high energy show sent us all away happy. Thanks go out to Rusty and the good folks at Molson for helping to put on a hell of a show. Special thanks to all those that attended; good people make for a great party. Overall, the beer gardens/concert was small, intimate, and a joy to attend. Fans of Rusty made the short jaunt to Red's to see them play some more while, if you wanted to stay at NAIT, you could have caught the Rockin' Highliners swingin' away at the Nest. Not only were there some really good swingers in attendance, but the band was so good it made even the novice dancer attempt to get down.

As this article has turned out to be somewhat of a soapbox, I'll also take time to address the subject of the Entertainment Section's content. I have not received one written comment, good or bad, about the section. (With exception to those that have come up to me personally. Thanks.) Do you not care about what you read? I know I'm not perfect, but without your comments I'll never improve. If you have any suggestions as to content or direction, then please submit them to me. I can only give you what you want if you tell me what it is. Thanks for listening, now get out there and have fun!

damn good too. Not just straight classical guitar, they get plugged in for a couple songs too. I'd really love to see these guys in a bar somewhere. They've got power and energy - a great combination (wait till EPCOR hears...) In fact, I'm finding it a little difficult writing this just cause I don't know where to start and I don't want to sound too generous.

But the fact is... I really liked this stuff. And if Mick didn't specifically say that I had to return this disc (and also if it didn't already have the band members' signatures on it) then it would be no skin off my nose, you know. The writing was real but not too heavy, the musicianship was pretty good, and the singing was pretty close to Melissa Etheridge, strong but not strained. Beautiful. Sorry that I missed them in Edmonton last week. If I find out that they're coming back again

I will let you all know.

Also, for you total A is A fanatics out there, make sure you check out the cool website listed earlier. Solid graphic design AND concept, a rarity among many music-oriented sites.

When looking this one over on the c.d. racks, do not get confused just because the cover shows a computer generated image of a man and woman, both naked. Normally, I'd perceive it as techno of some variation. But then, I would be wrong.

Instead, A is A is more the classic example of a she-vocalist he-guitarist group, along with a drummer and bassist.. And pretty Ralph Klein and Scott Williams boogie down to Rusty. Ralph loves the NAIT students, and we love Ralph!

To Your Secret Admirers: No name and no student ID number means no Grapevine submission for you! Better luck next time.

To all the Freyja & Cassiope fans, We're not complaining that we can't get a man, we're just stating a fact that if you boys would stop staring at us women like starving beasts and actually did something about it, then maybe someone would want you. Also, the 90's women's superiority is in effect: It's just that we won't approach drooling, pathetic wimps with obviously no balls. Sorry! Ever Yours, Freyja & Cassiope

Hey Sweech-pea,
It was nice to see you on Friday. I'm still thinking about you!

To the Radio & Television Students, You sure do know how to throw a piss poor party. My 12-year-old cousin could do better. On the bright side, the drinks were cheap. Better luck next time, eh?
The Swinger

NAIT is lame: It's Friday afternoon, a free concert and cheap beer, and less than 2% of the student population shows up. Come on, people! It was a good show, and the band (Rusty) deserved better.

P. in carpentry,
You may think that your ass-kissing, keener ways will get you far in carpentry, but we have one thing that you don't — experience. You should try working in the industry before you come to school next time, you schmuck. Also, quit your whining about all the instructors, nobody wants to hear it. Soon you will be back on the job hauling material for us real carpenters if you can handle the work.

To all the girls who wrote in to the

Girl Who Likes Girls,
Seeing as you girls go to NAIT, I would assume that you are educated. It is the 90's, and we accept ALL races, genders, sexual preferences, and denominations. Are you that insecure about your own sexuality to bash a normal, natural sexual preference? You should be very flattered that someone — male or female — finds you girls attractive, but obviously, personality and class says it all; and now you D.A. girls are probably not as attractive as you once were. Oh, and to the girls who used to find the D.A. girls attractive? You shouldn't waste your time on used material, and should instead invest it on someone with respect and class like me.
Signed,
A Girl Who Likes Girls, Too

To CurlyGirl,
We're one day away from our big day, and it's been an experience no one can ever take away from me. Thank you for helping me see the beauty in the world, and thank you for opening your heart to me. You will forever be immortalized and etched in my memory. Happy Anniversary, (Raising his glass in a toast) CurlyGirl.
Sticky

Hey GB,
Let's get a big blender and make psycho soup. Ingredients are 1 part each of DW, HK, and a dash of HCl to taste. Man, there are some freaks at NAIT. By the way, CP wins prize for Most Cool.
From GD

Jenny,
We're love to have you come bitch at us, as you haven't published any garbage in the last 3 or 4 weeks. Perhaps you could define your parameters and help us link you to Hitler; or even better, maybe you could give us another unending rant on body piercing. Nota Bene, we're changed the time to 11:30 at The Dock.
The Club

Hey Swinger,
I saw you at the rodeo. You were molesting a dead bull (you can eat all you want, big dog!). As for Mike, here's a little song that depicts the Hunt family Christmas: "Jingle Bells, Mike's mom smells, Mike felches bison all the way, Mike's dad is (I pulled a couple lines here, imagine them- The Editor).
Merry Christmas to all! Big Daddy

High Horsepower Club,
Nice essay... was that your entrance exam? By the way, we don't care about your intelligence, we know you're idiots anyways. Oh, here's a job for you... Domo looking for highly qualified personel to pump gas and clean washrooms.
The Rat Pack

Editor's Sweet Grapevine of the Week (GIVE THIS GUY A CHANCE!):

To the petite, blond lady with glasses in the E-wing,
Everytime I see you my knees start to buckle and my heart begins to race. I think you're very sexy. I'm not going to tell you some cheesy one-liner, 'cause that's just not me. I'm not the richest person on earth, so I can't buy you diamonds, silver, or gold. I can't drive you around in a fancy car, and I can't impress you with fancy clothes. What I can give you though is my heart. I would really like to get to know you as an individual.
A Trainer

W's,
A list of job requirements: Sweat stain on a wife beater, 2 grams of pot in possession at all times, able to read and write at the Grade 3 level, must own rusty Trans Am, family reunions resemble singles bars. Losers!
The Rat Pack

Hungry like a Wolf,
I have no clue who you are. Write back with some hints so I can find my way to the wolf den!!!
Disco Daddy

Disco Daddy Rene,
Have you ever heard "Closer" by Nine Inch Nails? Next time you hear it, think of me. Sweet dreams, baby.
Your Wolf Girl

Sorry about the things that were said. You are a wonderful person and I admire you for your hard work. Don't let the idiots get to you. Concerned follow IET person.
