NAITSA Bares All for Cystic Fibrosis

CURTIS Comeau

In what promised to be an evening full of fun and laughter, the NAITSA executives continued their fundraising for Cystic Fibrosis last Tuesday at Ezzie's.

The NAITSA executive stood tall as a crowd full of giggling drunks gathered around the dance floor to watch their unforgettable head shaving. "We agreed that if this year's Shinerama volunteers raised more than $20,000, we would shave our heads bald," said nervous NAITSA President Mick Beale, moments before it was his turn to go up.

In an attempt to raise yet more funds for Cystic Fibrosis, NAITSA decided to put a twist on the event. They decided that each member would be auctioned off to the audience and then the winners would get to shave their executive bald.

With the evening bringing in an excess of $2,000 from both cover charges and the proceeds from the auction, it is fair to say that NAIT, once again, did its part in the fight against Cystic Fibrosis. Way to go, NAIT!

Edmonton's Best Kept Secret for Fine Dining is Back!

NAIT Dining Room Re-opens after Renovations

SALLY Poulsen

There have been some changes made behind that familiar blue awning.

For the first time in nearly 20 years, The Dining Room at NAIT has undergone some major renovations - $220,000 dollars in renovations, to be exact.

The restaurant's sparkling new appearance includes a wall-to-wall colour change (beige); new wood and metal accents; and most impressively, new, large windows which brighten and open up the entire room.

The Dining Room at NAIT is run by students of the Culinary Arts and Applied Food Beverage Supervision programs. Dishes on this year's menu include chicken scampi, Trio of Alberta game, and Tournedos of Salmon and Mahi Mahi.

The restaurant re-opens October 17. Hours are Tuesday to Friday, 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Call for renovations at 471-8678.

Mixed News for Electronics Technology Students

Entry-level Salaries in Alberta are Declining, says survey

SALLY Poulsen

The Alberta Society of Engineering Technologists has released its salary survey for the year 2000, and the news for soon-to-be graduates is mixed.

Recent graduates' expected salaries have seen a slight overall decline. Technicians/technologists in training in the fields of electronics, petroleum, and telecommunications saw their average total income fall between $1,500 to $10,000 a year from 1999. The largest salary increase in 2000 went to instrumentation, which saw its average total income rise by approximately $2,000 dollars.

ASET Alberta Society of Engineering Technologists

3,500 members of the Alberta Society of Engineering Technologists completed questionnaires this past spring. Among trends noted in the 2000 survey: Fort McMurray is the highest paid area in the province overall, with Lethbridge being the lowest. There are fewer contractors/self-employed members, and salaries for the former have dropped by between 2 to 10 percent.

The ASET urges readers of their survey to look at other salary surveys done in the area for a balanced perspective on current statistics. For more information or to view the completed survey, go online and visit the ASET website at <http://www.aset.ab.ca>.

The Fish Bowl That Saved The Day

Two robbers were recently thwarted with a new kind of weapon in Winnipeg, Manitoba, last week... a fish bowl. When the Army and Navy Legion was locking up last Monday, a man wearing a ski mask approached the bartender and demanded money. A patron intervened, giving the bartender a chance to grab the robber and throw him to the floor. The other robber, who had been waiting by the door, pulled out a knife and started after the patron. Another patron then intervened, hitting the other robber over the head with a fish bowl. Police are looking for a man in an orange jacket and another man in a black leather jacket with a bump on his head.

How Would You Find Your Balls?

Scientists at Rutgers University in New Jersey believe they are on their way to creating the perfect lawn - by producing grass that glows in the dark. They are hoping to make this discovery available to the public within three years but are moving slowly, however, as they want to avoid backlash from environmentalists. The development of the glow-in-the-dark lawn has been hailed as a great step forward by the association representing golf course managers. It has received a less than enthusiastic response, however, by landscapers, whose organization is urging the university to suspend all field testing. Peter Day, the director of the grass growing project, says they are concentrating on making grass that is resistant to pests, disease, and does not need to be moved as often. He feels the prospect of fewer summer weekends preoccupied with the lawnmower would appeal to millions of suburban households across North America.

A Bird's Eye View

A tanning salon in Kelowna, British Columbia had quite the shock last week when someone kidnapped their pet parrot. After the parrot was reported missing, the lady who took the parrot - reported to be a large, red-headed woman on a scooter - called CrimeStoppers and demanded $2,000 for the parrot's return. When CrimeStoppers explained to the woman that they do not pay for the return to property but rather only for information that leads to an arrest or charge, she got very angry and hung up. She later called the police, however, and told them they could come and pick up the bird. The tanning salon did not press charges against the woman. Instead, they offered free tanning all weekend long to celebrate Kiwi the parrot's return.

Oops They Did It Again

The state of Minnesota is asking 17,000 children to return the $95 they were accidentally sent when this year's tax rebate cheques were mailed out. Already, 11,000 of the cheques have been cashed. The state has given out rebates for the past two years because it had a budget surplus, getting its information on who is eligible by people who receive a minimum Social Security cheque. United States law does not allow people to receive a cheque if they were ineligible. The tax department included postage-paid envelopes with the letters they sent out to the 17,000 children, promising that if the child does not return the $95, it would be taken out of a future tax refund.

Where The Hell Was The Father Then?

Sibling rivalry in Boston, Massachusetts, took a deadly turn when a 13-year-old boy was stabbed by his 12-year-old brother in the heart. The two brothers were fighting over the volume control of the stereo when their father, who heard the stereo blaring, called them and told them to turn it down. The boys were the only ones home at the time. After the boys hung up with their father, the 13-year-old turned the stereo down. The 12-year-old then grabbed a kitchen knife and plunged it into his brother's chest. He was operated on at the Boston Medical Centre where authorities are saying he is lucky to be alive.

Another Way To Dump Your Kids

The Mothers for Mothers Association opened a "Mothers Moses Basket" to the public in Antwerp, Belgium, last week. It's the first of its kind in Belgium and similar to the ones that was opened in Hamburg, Germany, earlier in the year. The "Mothers Moses Basket" is an electronic hatch that mothers can put their babies into and have a guarantee they will be looked after instead of abandoning them in a restroom or a garbage bin. Since opening its hatch in Antwerp last week, already two babies have been left.

The Frisky Truth

Chilean officials were shocked this week when statistics revealed that, for the first time in their country's history, a majority of births occurred outside of marriage. According to Chile's Civil Registry, only 44 percent of all new babies born in the first 8 months of this year were born to married couples as opposed to 69 percent in 1999. Chile is known to be one of the most conservative countries in the world due to the heavy influence of the Catholic church; divorce is not allowed, abortion is illegal, and the use of the morning after pill is expressly forbidden.

Another Senseless Shooting

Police in Sacramento, California, arrested a 13-year-old boy for shooting another 13-year-old boy to death. The two friends had apparently skipped school with a group of other people and ended up at a friend's apartment. The two 13-year-olds then started to argue over who would get the first puff of a cigarette when one of them left the room and returned with a handgun. Upon further argument, the boy pulled the trigger and killed his friend. He then returned to class at Brannan Middle School where sheriff's deputies subsequently picked him up.

Future Of Mir Still Up In The Air

MirCorp, the company that owns the leasing rights to space station Mir, are looking at the possibility of still having to bring her down. This is much to their chagrin as they would prefer to keep the station operating. It already has a deal to fly Dennis Tito, the first space tourist, to Mir. Plans are also in the works for "Destination Mir," a real-life series similar to "Survivor" in which a group of people will train for a mission to the station with one person finally being selected to go.

BAB Ain't No Bunny

Parents and students of Gahanna Lincoln High School in Gahanna, Ohio, are fuming over a decision to ban a student-designed sweatshirt bearing the initials "BAB" on it. High school officials say the decision came after some 90 girls who purchased the bright green sweatshirts told them that the initials did have a double meaning to them. Originally, "BAB" was designed to stand for "Bold and Beautiful" whereas other students have come to interpret its meaning to be "Bad-assed Bitches."

College Students Face Death Sentence

As of last week, under Burmese law, caffeine has now been declared a narcotic. Officials have not yet declared whether coffee drinkers would be prosecuted under the law or what penalties they would face. It is also unknown if the penalties for being caught with a narcotic will be changed as the maximum penalty under Burmese law currently carries a sentence of death.

A Horrifying Discovery

Doctors in Ravenna, Ohio, say a baby cut from his dead mother's womb and stolen last week is doing well, despite the circumstances. Theresa Andrews, age 23, was nine months pregnant when she disappeared on September 27. Her body was found a week later in a garage with her abdomen sliced open and the baby removed. When police attempted to question the owners of the garage, a Thomas and Michelle Bica, Michelle Bica killed herself. Authorities speculate that Michelle pretended to be pregnant and passed the baby boy off as their own. Thomas Bica remains at large as the investigation continues. The baby, who was named Oscar, has been returned to Jon Andrews, Theresa's husband.

Playboy Has FBI Ties

According to FBI documents released on APBnews.com, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover had a great interest in Playboy during the 1960's. A 213-page dossier reveals that FBI agents started to pay attention to the magazine in 1955 after an article was published about government agents checking out the solar system. Then, in 1963, after founder Hugh Hefner wrote a scathing article about J. Edgar Hoover, Hoover ordered bureau personnel to read each issue carefully and summarize it for him. When asked to comment on these recent revelations, Hefner replied, "I knew somebody was buying it for more than the pictures."

A Slimy Situation

An apartment resident in Medina, Ohio, got quite the shock last week when she walked into her bathroom to find a five-foot boa constrictor half in and half out of her toilet bowl. The landlord of the apartment building ended up pulling the snake out of the toilet where police subsequently grabbed it and killed it. No one is sure where the snake came from, though police suspect it may have been a pet who got loose in the building. The landlord is refuting this speculation, however, saying he would evict any resident who kept reptiles in the building.

Yes, Master

An individual calling himself "The Master" is demanding $37,000 in random money for the return of a stolen Enigma code-breaking machine that helped the Allies claim victory in World War II. The machine, considered irreplaceable, is worth $150,000, and was stolen from the Bletchley Park Museum in Buckinghamshire, England. In a letter to the museum sent by "The Master," he claims he is acting on behalf of another person who originally bought the machine on good faith, only to discover it was stolen. He claims the buyer is not a thief and only wants to get back the full amount of he paid for it. Museum sources have said they will pay the money because destruction of the machine would be an act of historic vandalism.

Autom(n)ation To Run Independently

THURSTON Jacks

At a recent press conference held at 8 a.m. (originally scheduled for 7 a.m. but the limey wanna-be slept in) inside the lobby of The Gouda Plaza in Hamburg, Germany, pretentious wordsworth K. Joseph Kijek announced that he was deleting his AUTO(N)MATION series from The Nugget but is pursuing the enigmatic tale and plans on releasing it as an independent publication for late November.

"Through the process of creating AUTO(N)MATION," began Kijek, "I realized that it would be better read if one had it in it's entirety rather than on a weekly basis."

Kijek went on to say that he will still be writing a column entitled "These Are a Few of my Favourite Things" for the student paper.

"Basically, it will be people, places, things, occurrences, inanimate objects... that sort of thing. Relics of time, if you will," said Kijek.

Kijek chose not to elaborate on the soon-to-be-released column for reasons of secrecy (He even had the nerve to compare the "hush-hush" stance to that of - and I quote - "Stanley Kubrick. He's a hero of mine. Hence, one must learn the ways from their mentors.")

Kijek even went on to say how, when Kubrick died, he sat still for what seemed like hours and received numerous phone calls on how he coped with one of his life-long inspirations passing away.

Kijek was said to be going to Vancouver for the Thanksgiving weekend in order to put the finishing touches on his soon to be released fanzine "Chronomate Wildly: Confessions of an Imposter." As to what the title suggests, Kijek esoterically stated, "It'll be what the reader will want it to be."

What a shmuck! Hey, Kijek, where's your goatee and beret?

When asked why he chose Vancouver to be his "writer's getaway," the maladjusted monkey recited scenic spots that would, and I quote again, "incite his creative circuits."

"Walks along the seawall. Stanley Park. The Sky Train. Robson Street. It's a beautiful city that's always looking toward the future. I'm sure, if not positive, that much reverence will be had."

Sure, hi-jack, whatever you say.

Anyway, our prodigal scribbler will return to the pages of The Nugget next week with "These Are a Few of my Favourite Things."

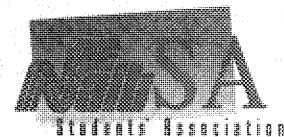

And, speaking of which, as usual, K. Joseph Kijek turned the conference into a forum where his Royal Highness went on to profess, or should I say propagate, passionately on records he's been listening to lately. "The latest Jets To Brazil album is a masterpiece. Remember Blake Shwarzenbach? You know, the driving force and lyrical Merlin for Jawbreaker? Well, this is his new band, and I'm telling you Jets To Brazil are astonishing. A great record for getting introspective in the middle of the night and remembering loves you once had as well as days that never die in memory and, of course, that girl who got away in all ways except from the heart."

Kijek, being the melodramatic prince that he is, took a few seconds to hold back some tears and found the courage to carry on.

"Along the same themes of Jets To Brazil, I'm also re-visiting the bitter sweet songs of The Wedding Present. It must be the time of the fall and the coming of winter."

So, there you have it, folks. Words to live by from K. Joseph Shakespeare. I guess we'll see what happens.

The Ringpost

Turgeon

Welcome, wrasslin fans, to another fine, albeit small, edition of The Ringpost. It seems that the possible sale of WCW is growing even stronger. The latest reports put Mandalay Entertainment at the forefront of this purchase. Incase you didn't know, Eric Bischoff, who used to play a MAJOR role in WCW's glory days, has a major role in Mandalay. What this means for WCW's current status remains to be seen, but if this takeover does take place, look for serious changes to be made to WCW's roster.

Speaking of the WCW roster, it seems that Juventud is in even more trouble. Having just signed his one year contract a few weeks ago, he is making his employers really proud by getting himself arrested in Australia.

Turns out Juvi threw some sort of tantrum in a hotel lobby by yelling and screaming at Disco. He then proceeded to remove his clothing while fighting off police officers. He is facing a plethora of charges ranging from assault to possession and is in police custody.

For those of you who don't know, The Juice was also arrested last year for a DUI.

In WWF news, it looks like the Undertaker is hurt once again. This time, another groin injury is the culprit. Look for him to be out for some time.

In case you were wondering why Steven Regal is being called William Regal, it's because there are too many Stevens in the WWF. WWF officials also feel that William is a more pompous name, and that's the type of character they're trying to get him over as.

There were some familiar faces backstage at the ECW PPV last weekend. Turns out Sonny Onoo was there looking to help ECW get a TV deal in Japan, and rumor has it he may turn up on ECW TV in a WCW shoot angle.

For those of you who don't know, Onoo and other former WCW employees are involved in a racism suit against the WCW. And Lenny Lane was also backstage looking for work. Poor, poor Lenny. He's got a lot of talent, and it's too bad nobody is picking him up.

That's all for now. See you next week.

Women's Volleyball Recap

Over the Thanksgiving weekend, the lady Ooks participated in the Griffin Cup held at Grant MacEwan. With the top three teams there from last year, the Ooks were able to see how the league stacked up in the upcoming year.

The ladies faced Mount Royal College first, and although they lost all five games, the team played well enough to deserve a couple of wins.

Their second match was against Grant MacEwan, the team that the needed to beat to get into the provincial pool (top four teams play against each other in the second half). The play on both ends was a little sloppy at times, but the Ooks won two out of the possible five games. They did show themselves that, come the regular season, they will have a great opportunity to beat Grant MacEwan if they work on some aspects of their game.

Saturday's matches were against Grande Prairie, who won four out of five games, as well as against King's College.

Although the Ooks only won seven out of the twenty games, they have played the top teams over the past two weekends and are very confident that they can beat these teams if they work hard.

The lady Ooks open up their regular season versus Grant MacEwan on Friday, October 20, at their own gymnasium. Hope to see you there!

Ooks Win Pre-Season Tournament

Gear Up for Home Opener

DARRYL
Hodgson

This following weekend was a good one for NAIT Athletics. First off, the men's basketball team won the King's College Tournament by winning games versus Mount Royal and UNBC. After talking to Matt "Shorty" from the team, he said the toughest game was the semi-final match against UNBC. The final was a lot easier. Way to go, gents!!!

Now for hockey news.

This weekend, the ACAC pre-season tournament was held at the NAIT Arena. This tournament featured every team that competes in the ACAC. The Blue and Gold Ooks first contest was on Thursday night versus the GMCC Griffins. The game started out slowly, which is not unusual for the Griffins. After about ten minutes, the fellas decided it was time to pick up the pace. The Griffins kept it close until the second period when we exploded and filled the Griffins net for the remainder of the game. The CREEP line, led by Jeff "Bionic Ankle" Innes, continued to show improvement. Innes netted two goals for the Ooks and received player of the game for his efforts. Frustration had set in for GMCC by the third period when we were leading 6-1. Some big gangly goof ball from the Griffins decided to jump Billy "Real American" Baker (our smallest rookie). Some wrestling took place and Baker managed to throw around the 24-inch python, but the referees decided it wasn't the time or the place for this type of behaviour. Grant MacEwan scored two late goals to make the score look respectable. Tyson Lafrance got the decision in goal.

Final Score:
Ooks 6 - Griffins 3

This put us against the winner of SAIT/Mount Royal on Friday. I wanted to play SAIT but, to my dismay, Mount Royal won the game and decided to drop out of the tournament. The Wetaskiwin Senior Men's Team decided to take the place of the Mount Royal team. This game was not a particularly fast contest, nor did it contain much emotion. After allowing the Thunder to score first goal on the powerplay, we still managed to win the game. Chuck "Er-E" Beaulieu led the Ooks with two goals and received player of the game for his efforts. Tyson Lafrance and I split the game in goal.

Final Score:
Ooks 4 - Thunder 1

The win against Wetaskiwin put us in the final versus the Red Deer College Kings on Saturday. This game was the first chance for us to see the Kings in action. This was interesting since they had won two close games against Concordia and Augustana. The Kings came out flying and put us in penalty trouble early. Two powerplay goals put the Kings on top. We managed to tie the game before the end of the period. Travis "Mifler" Tipler and Reto Taborgna got the goal of the period. A nice finish by Taborgna on a two on one with Tipler.

A tie was not good enough after the period for the coaching staff. This prompted Aaron "Hillsey" Hills, in his head coaching debut, to come in and give the boys a good pep talk. Coach Terry Ballard had been suspended the night before for arguing with a ref over a questionable hitting from behind call on Steve "Killer" Reade. The pep talk seemed to work as the Kings were not allowed back in the game from that point on. We exploded for three goals in the second. Greg "Flex" Martiniuk, Jeff "I need a new cup" Ainsworth, and Reto "Swiss Dream" Taborgna (with his second of the contest) were the goal scorers. Red Deer was unable to capitalize on a two-man advantage late in the frame. In the third, we kept on coming and got two more goals. I got the win in goal. Reto Taborgna got the player of the game honors.

Final Score: Ooks 7 - Kings 2

This is all in the past. Now we look to the future, meaning Friday night. That is the date of the home opener versus the Concordia Thunder. Come out and watch the Ooks hand out the first savage beating of the 2000-2001 campaign. Enjoy some refreshments at the beer gardens starting at 3 p.m. in the NAITRIUM. This beer gardens is put together by athletics, so go support your team by drinking beer. Is that so hard to do?

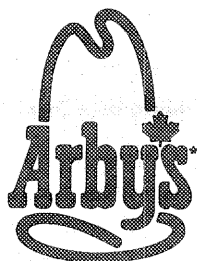

The game is tonight, 7 p.m. in the NAIT Arena. Try and pack the house and show 'em' why NAIT will be hardest school to play at this year. Until next week, ciao from El Chimpio.

TO LEGALIZE

NOT TO LEGALIZE?

KENNY
Total

So I'm sitting around late Sunday night watching Hilary Clinton and Rick Lazio debating themselves silly on CNN when some knob asks the candidates if they feel that the U.S.'s war on drugs has been lost and, moreover, if pot should be legalized.

First off, let me state that contrary to what this weekly tirade may lead you to believe, I do not use any kind of drug. I have no interest in drugs (although I would start a really bad heroin habit if I somehow became the lead guitarist for the Rolling Stones). I have formed opinions about those that use drugs that do not need to be explored here.

Even if I put aside my moral objections, one reason that I can't understand drug usage or addiction is the financial factor. I work really hard for my money, and I like to own nice things. I also have to make a mortgage payment, a car payment, and pay bills. If I were to start a drug habit of any kind, I'd have to be prepared to bank-roll it. It would make me crazy knowing that I put $600 bucks up my nose instead of buying a CD player.

Let me make it clear that I do not shun those that use drugs. Some friends of mine smoke up, and I've worked with more than one person who had a habit to support. When I'm working, I get paid every Thursday. Guys that I work with often need to borrow money from me on Saturday because they partied it all away the night before.

Do I think that I'm a better person than a person who uses drugs? No. Do I have more respect for someone who doesn't use as compared to someone who does? You bet.

Now that we understand why I don't think drug use of any kind is cool, let me explain why we shouldn't legalize marijuana. We (North America) already have one legal drug we can't control: alcohol. WAIT!!!

I can hear ya already. "Jesus H. Christ, Total! When did you become a Born Again Christian?!" Do I really look like a religious wacko? What I think of organized religion is a topic for another day. I'm not saying that we should outlaw booze, I'm just saying that we should figure out how to deal with the problems that one controlled substance creates before we introduce another to the mix.

If you've stayed with me this far, you're most likely thinkin', "Maybe you're right, Total, but we aren't talking about legalizing it for everyone. We're just going to make it legal for sick people to take it."

To this, I pose the question: "How many people do you think actually NEED to take Viagra?" I'm sure that a bunch of horny old seniors are glad to get some wood, but I'll bet you a burlap sack full of dead monkeys that there are a lot of horny, able-bodied people (men and women) who are taking the magic blue pill regardless.

The point that I'm trying hard to make is that just because we make rules doesn't mean that they are always obeyed. How many of us had a drink before we were of legal age? How many guys had a Playboy or Penthouse (Hustler, in my case. That explains a lot, doesn't it?) stuffed under his mattress when he was 13? We've all been there.

What makes us think that if we legalized marijuana, only sick people will use it? We'd be buying prescriptions for weed off the Web if they made it legal. Besides, when was the last time you were watching the evening news and saw a protest to legalize marijuana put on by people hooked up to life support sitting in a park singing Kumbaya? Never. It's always punk kids sitting around telling everybody it would be, like, totally f*ckin' far out, man, if pot was legalized. For medical use only, of course.

I don't really understand the complaint with the way we've got things set up now. The cops have a "Don't f*ck with us, we won't f*ck with you" attitude. Smoke yer weed, eat some pizza, party, and have a riotous good time. The cops tend to leave you alone. If you get caught driving a car under the influence or with a hydroponics operation in yer basement, don't moan when you get arrested for illegal behavior.

In conclusion, I don't like drug use, but I am not gonna try to convert you. You wanna smoke a big rock? Go ahead.

What Exactly is the Web

Olson

To put it bluntly, the web is coming to you. Forget the days of being able to say, "I'm a computer illiterate," with a clear conscience. By the time you graduate, not knowing how to operate a standard PC will cost your company in productivity and may eventually cost you your job. Get on the bus, because computer's matter and your "aptitudes" don't mean shit.

Besides success at your choice of vocation, computing and the Internet are starting to make a few basic changes to our social hierarchy, changes that affect us youngsters more than anyone.

Don't believe me? Check out <http://www.earthcam.com> and smile for the picture.

Napster vs. The Record Labels

Even though the media may be making a mockery of Napster's case, the fact that music is now free is undeniable, and it changes things. Say good-bye to record labels as we have come to know them and say hello to the Bulk CD section at Costco. This means no more paying for music. Hooray for us.

Freedom of Information and... privacy?

Do you really think all the info that you provide to websites, even the phone company, is private? The fact is, nothing is completely safe on the Internet. Am I full of rage about this? F*ck no. Get used to having less privacy. Just remember to smile for the camera.

Sex - and what some people call "sex"

So, as it stands, we gained free music forever and lost all of our privacy. Not so bad, especially when you take into account that the Internet has created a forum for every off-the-beaten path fetishist there is. Like feet? Like farm animals? Like office stationary? It's all there at the click of a mouse. So, now that anyone in a category labeled deviant can find friends with the same interests, you can expect a lot of people toting around their re-

DRUGS AND ALKĒHOL

Current Nugget staffer James Olson and ex-Nugget staffer John Shields show why they get astronomical marks at school.

J.A. Acosta

“Man, this one time me and my buddies went down to the valley and got soooo wasted. We hung around for a few hours, kicking stuff and laughing. Then we went to this field where all these cows were standing around ‘cause they were sleeping. So we snuck up on them and pushed them real hard and theys all fell over. It was great. That was the best night of my life.”

This is the sort of story I heard growing up. That particular story comes to us courtesy of Russel Bradshaw, now head gas jockey of “Howling Wolf Gas and Food.” He’s really done well for himself, despite early problems with drug and alcohol abuse.

As many of you probably have no idea, this week is Alcohol Awareness Week here at NAIT. It’s the time when we all take a step back and examine the role booze has in our life. Or, for some of us, we examine our role in the life of booze. Bullshit. Reflection is for people with no life left to live.

So, the point of this article will be to disclose an alternative grading system of my own invention. This system is quite a breath of fresh air to the current pass-or-fail methods of evaluation and might turn a few of you into geniuses overnight.

Simply put, the “Acosta System” is based on a ratio of your consumption of mind-altering substances versus your performance on standardized testing. The minimum requirement is three beers a day. If you fail to meet this requirement, you automatically fail and forfeit any chance of re-admission into your program.

To gauge your competency, all you have to do is maintain the lowest ratio possible. For example, if you don’t drink too much, you must get equally as low marks on your tests and assignments to succeed. If you drink like a fish, you have to get astronomical marks to do well.

Looks as if some of us are in for a tough year.

Nugget photographer loses “IT.”

Whoville

Fool
(Watchman Records)

This Edmonton-based band have been playing together for quite a few years now and have finally come out with a debut CD, Fool. Whoville has put together a good collection of songs, and for a local band, I was surprised that no cover songs appear on the CD. Usually, a smaller band will do a cover song just to get some novelty exposure, but Whoville put all of their own material onto the CD. This demonstrates the musical integrity of the band.

With all that said, I might as well tell you about the music. My favorite song on the record is "Anyway" - it really expresses the band's true talent. From the lyrics, varying tempo, and catchy guitar riffs, this song sounds like the way a good rock song should. The words ("In the silence, I hear whispers, I hear your voice, It's telling me to, Keep holding onto my choice") could very well stand by themselves, but picture those lyrics with a voice that truly exemplifies the feeling portrayed.

These guys are really serious musicians, because I heard on this record a sound that I have not heard from any other local band - the 12 string. The 12 string is not an instrument you can just pick up and play. Generally, it is used after you have played a 6 string for a long time and just need some new sounds to keep the interest up. In this case, I believe that Glen Peters has reached that point as his guitar playing is great and is very fitting for the music Whoville plays.

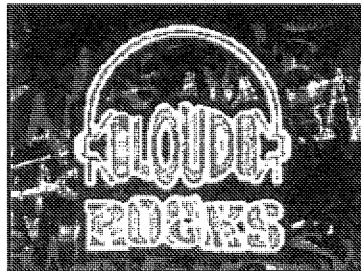

This record has basically resurged my faith in the future of local rock music. Whoville play many gigs around the city, and I really think that all those guys who are supposedly proud Canadians, think the Bear is the coolest, and have a big Molson's decal on the back of the Mustang your parents bought you, should go and see them. Keep your eyes and ears open, because I figure that Whoville will only be playing the local circuit for a short time because these guys are going places. Expect them to be on the foreground of new Canadian music in the near future, so you might as well see them now and support local talent when they really need it.

Various Artists

Loud Rocks
(Epic/Loud Records)

Many new artists/groups are now mixing the hip-hop with heavy metal or rock. Groups such as Limp Bizkit, Papa Roach, Korn, 311, and Rage Against the Machine, have all made great music incorporating genres of Hip-Hop with Rock or Heavy Metal. And don't get me wrong, I can handle groups as said before at all times.

Loud Records has released a various artists album entitled "Loud Rocks." When I first popped this CD in my stereo, I was so hyped, 'cause I was expecting some dope heavy metal remixes. WRONG!!! All I got when I listened to this album was a bunch of misfits who basically butched all the once hit singles. Hit tracks such as "Still not a player" by Big Pun, "Hip Hop" by Dead Prez, "What U See is What U Get" by Xzibit, and "Wu-Tang ain't nuttin to Fuck Wit", all appear on the compilation album in a horrible form. Groups such as Incubus, Sevendust, Static-X, and Tom Morello & Chad Smith all remix dope singles into whack garbage!

I have no idea who the owner of Loud Records was trying to sell this record to, because I am pretty sure Hip Hop Lovers won't feel this album, and neither will Heavy Metal Headz! The album has 3 strong tracks that don't make up for the other 11 horrible remixes. "Los Angeles Times" performed by Xzibit and Endo is straight up hardcore. But 4real da beats are dope and the heavy metal style compliments Xzibits MC'n skillz. "Shook Ones Part 2" performed by Mobb Deep and Everlast has got to be the best song on the album by far. Former MC of House Of Pain, Everlast goes back to his Hip Hop styles and raps to the fly beatz of the ever-popular single "Shook Ones" by Mob Deep. "Los Angeles Times" performed by Xzibit and Endo keeps it raw at all times. The track can get kinda too "HEAVY" at times, especially in the chorus, but besides that, it's pretty dope.

The worst song out of the other 11 horrible songs would have to be "Still Not A Player" by Big Pun and Incubus. It is so bad, I can't even explain it. If you heard the hit single "Still Not A Player" by Pun himself, you will laugh when you hear the remix Incubus did with it.

All in all, if you wanna hear the worst Metal/Hip Hop album in da Universe, by all means, buy this album - actually, I dare you! I give all respect to all the groups and producers who tried to make this idea of remixing dope hits with Metal but, sorry, homeboy, it just didn't work.

"Loud Rocks" gets 1.5 bottles of O.E. outta 5 all day everyday! Peace. Sharmz iz out like da Blue Jays.

Soulfly

"Primitive"
Roadrunner/Attic Records

The brand-new release from Soulfly picks up right where their self-titled debut left off - in your face! This album has everything you would have to come to expect from Max Cavalera and crew - hard, crunchy riffs; angry, throaty vocals; influctual tribal beats; and intense political/social lyrics. If that wasn't enough, there are guest vocals on a number of tracks by some of the biggest names in metal and hip hop including Chino from the Deftones, #8 from Slipknot, Sean Lennon, and Tom Araya from Slayer.

As angry and intense as is this album is, it's also very musical and melodic with a variety of styles being exhibited, and thankfully the one rap track isn't typically generic like most of what is produced these days. Favorite tracks have to be "Back to the Primitive," "Bring It," "Jump the F**k Up," "Mulambo," and of course "Soulfly II."

The Misfits

SHANE
Turgeon

October, the scariest month of the year. And what better way to spend the Friday before Friday the 13th than with The Misfits. It's been just over two years since the legendary horror punk band last infected our city with a terrifying live performance and man, was it worth the wait.

The show was held at Reds and opened with local favorites Les Tabernacles rocking the house and whipping the crowd into a frenzy. It's unfortunate that they were followed by suckass Canadian hardcore (and I use that term loosely) band, Guy Smiley. They suck.

This was the same Guy Smiley who sucked when they opened up for the Misfits back in '98, and one has to wonder why it is they keep getting put on the bill. Did I mention these guys suck?

Next up was Speed Dealer, who was recently here with Motorhead and Nashville Pussy, and they brought with them the usual raw intensity of a Speed Dealer performance.

Next up, The 'Fits. Seeing as how they are currently on tour supporting their most recent album, "Famous Monsters", it was only fitting that they played a trimmed down, edited video version of horror classic, King Kong. The sad thing was that I actually heard a guy behind me comment, "Why are they playing this stuff?" Hmmm, let's see, jackass, maybe it's because the title track to the new album is called "Kong at the Gates!!!"

Man, it's pretty clear that guy had no business being at a Misfits show.

Anyway, after the montage, the Crimson Ghost stalked the stage with a fiery torch, and then a Gravesless Misfits came out with bassist Jerry Only filling in on vocals (singer Michael Graves was unable to cross the border). Jerry did an admirable job of filling in for Graves as he and Doyle Wolfgang Von Frankenstein played classics old and new for over an hour. After the set, Jerry Only stayed on stage and signed various Misfits articles.

The only complaint I overheard from fans at the show was the venue. No offence to Reds as Reds is a great venue for most concerts but, in all honesty, most people into the Misfits aren't exactly into the atmosphere at Reds, and the show should have been held where it was back in 1998, at the Polish Hall. Nevertheless Reds did what they could to support the crowd and should be commended for doing so.

After years of solid performances, so many great albums, and through the legal battles with former frontman Glenn Danzig, it's obvious, even to non-fans, that the Misfits are legends in their own right and will continue to scare the bejesus out of main stream music marks. Demonomania forever!!!

A Shady Character?

DUKE Hazard

Ever since Eminem's new LP came out, there has been a lot of controversy over most of his lyrics. Yet, his singles keep topping the charts and his album keeps making record sales. Well, the Americans are fed up with Marshal Mathers (Eminem,) and a committee has been set up in part to review the effect that his lyrics have on listeners. Now, I am a fan of some of Eminem's work, but I agree that a lot of it is out of line. I know there are a lot of die-hard Eminem fans out there (some of them good friends), and they will tell you the same thing I am right now - are you ready, people... "He says those things to shock you."

This committee is a bad idea. If anyone thinks that some group of politicians can stop this stuff, they are ignorant and are insulting people's intelligence. Most fans of this kind of music are at least fairly intelligent and educated people and can distinguish between fantasy and reality. This committee has no power' and if they do manage to lobby a law before the American government' it will just be thrown out because of their freedom of speech act. The biggest problem with this committee is that if you give this thing too much publicity, the flame will become a fire, which will influence other artists to adapt his image to their own.

People have been rebelling against society since the beginning. Luckily' right now' it's mostly with music in North America. There were musical rebellions with the Beatles, Stones, Doors, and others. Eminem is just the latest to latch onto it. So, just ignore him, politicians, and he'll go away.

Finger Eleven

The Greyest Of Blue Skies
(Sony / Wind-up Entertainment)

From the darker side of mainstream rock comes Finger Eleven, brandishing their new album, "The Greyest Of Blue Skies". Highlights of Blue Skies can be found on their first single titled "Drag You Down," in which the lyrics sound something like "Blow me under / before I try to drag you down," and a track titled Suffocate with "They force you down / strap you in." Every song seems to follow up the previous with the same generic, angst-filled theme. Keep in mind that, these days, no album is complete without ripping off an old eighties tune, in which Finger Eleven succeed at with a heavier version of Depeche Mode's "Walking in my Shoes." Finger Eleven's sound seems like it could have possibly derived from giving Coal Chamber too much valium or the boys from Creed high dosages of Speed (you figure it out).

Keep in mind that, these days, no album is complete without ripping off an old eighties tune....

Either way, despite the album's weak musical presence, I found myself with only one major problem - I can't seem to force myself to take it out of my CD player. Due to the fact that I'm feeling generous, I'll give Finger Eleven one enthusiastic big, hairy toe up.

JOKE OF THE WEEK

DARIA
Morgan

While vacationing in Spain, a tourist enters a restaurant and is shown to his table. As he browses the menu, he notices a gentleman at a nearby table eating what appears to be two large brown balls. The tourist is very curious, so he asks the waiter for the name of the dish.

"Oh my," the waiter exclaims. "This is our most prized culinary delight. Each day there is a bull fight. The matador confronts the bull with his red cape. The bull charges him several times, and each time the matador bravely escapes death. Eventually, the bull fighter will stab the bull with his sword and kill him. It is at that precise moment that the balls of the bull are cut off and rushed to our kitchen. We then prepare the dish with our best spices and serve it to one of our customers."

The tourist is intrigued so he makes a reservation for the next serving of bull testicles. At 3 p.m. sharp the next day, he arrives and is escorted to a table. Some complementary wine is brought to his table with a large bowl containing the balls. The tourist bites down and begins to slowly savor the meat. Within a few minutes, he finishes the meal and motions to the waiter, "I'm curious about something. Yesterday, I noticed that the balls were so large, but today, the balls that I was served were very very small."

"Oh my," the waiter replied, "I must have failed to mention that sometimes the bull wins."

HORRORSCOPES

DARIA Morgan

Capricorn

(December 22-January 20)

You will have an urge to declare war on ham today - possibly on all pork though, not just ham. Why? No one will know except the voices in your head.

Aquarius

(January 21-February 18)

If you want someone to change, it's good to give them a painful option and a less painful option and let them pick one. For example, "Do you want to pick up your underwear off the floor or would you like a live weasel stapled to your leg?"

Pisces

(February 19-March 20)

Old Engelbert Humperdick songs will circle endlessly through your mind today. I recommend screaming and pounding your head on your desk.

Aries

(March 21-April 19)

A person wearing a pink tutu will appear, uninvited, into your life this week. He will become quite ornery when you ask him to leave.

Taurus

(April 20-May 20)

Good day to go around nudging people.

Gemini

(May 21-June 20)

This week is an extremely poor week to use obscure euphemisms or medical metaphors when trying to pick up the opposite sex. In particular, avoid "kajobies" and "shvontz" like the plague.

Cancer

(June 21-July 22)

That rash should clear up soon. Oh - stop worrying, I won't tell anyone where it is.

Leo

(July 23-August 22)

You are being stalked by an invisible mutant from Planet X - or at least this will make an excellent excuse to skip a day of school this week.

Virgo

(August 23-September 22)

Time to look for a new job. You should be able to land a job as a surgical assistant in no time - and stop worrying! Everyone else lies about their background, too.

Libra

(September 23-October 22)

You will acquire a pet dog this week and name him "No Clothes On." That way, you can use the cool phrase, "I'm going for a walk with No Clothes On."

Scorpio

(October 23-November 21)

Good week to count your blessings. Both of them.

Sagittarius

(November 22-December 21)

This week you will turn over a new leaf. Good for you! We were all getting a little tired of you, you know, as you were before.

If Today Is Your Birthday:

Don't go out today without a spatula. I can't say more.

Words Of The Week

KELSEY Farnalls

Disgruntle is my first word for this week. It's a verb. Personally though, I have never heard anyone say that they planned on setting out to disgruntle someone. It means to put into a state of sulky dissatisfaction. Not just dissatisfaction, but sulky dissatisfaction. Or to make discontent. I would like to hear the word disgruntle used in its present tense, as opposed to the ever-so-popular disgruntled. Like, I was fairly disgruntled when my dog jumped into my bed and spread his fleas around. I find it kind of odd though that there seems to be no such word as grundle. If you can disgruntle, why can't you grundle?

Anyway, the second word is a doozy. It's disestablishmentarianism. It's, like, nine or ten syllables, and it refers to the opposition of established order.

And, finally, we have that cute little word niggle: to spend too much time and effort on inconsequential details; trifle. Also, to criticize in a peevish way. And it's also a pretty diverse word. There's niggled, niggling, niggler, and niggly. Niggly is my favorite.

Well, that's about it for this week. Have fun!

the stage will be graced by the upbeat comical stylings of Tracy Smith. Opening for her each night will be David Acer and Bob Chomyn.

And the last weekend of October, the 26th to the 28th, Glenn Ottaway will be performing. Glenn may look like a veteran biker, but it doesn't take long for an audience to realize he is their friend, their soulmate, and their voice in this ever-changing, complicated world. Darnell Davis and Harols Preuss will be opening the stage for Glenn Ottaway.

So, get out there and have some laughs at YukYuk's, located in West Edmonton Mall, Bourbon Street.

Valentino's

West Edmonton Mall (Bourbon Street)
444-3344

Located in West Edmonton Mall's bustling Bourbon Street lies a charming little eatery that specializes in genuine Mediterranean cuisine. Offering an array of tasty choices from Lebanon, Greece, Italy, France, and such, Valentino's menu has the depth to satisfy any craving. "When we first opened up, my mother and father (Najah and Hassan Shtay), designed our menu," comments sous chef Hasib Shtay "It was taken so well by our customers, we haven't changed it much since then."

Their innovative gourmet pizzas have been on the menu since the beginning and are a must-try for first time diners. There are 22 choices in total, and every pizza is made with homemade sauce, can be ordered in either thick or thin crust and are topped with fresh mozzarella cheese. I suggest going with the Con Pollo (mozzarella, spinach, tomaatoes, fresh garlic, and tender chicken breast).

Should you decide to take in a complete three-course meal, start off with their fine appetizers like Escargots (baked in mushroom caps topped with melted mozzarella cheese) or a delicious Hommus (zesty Lebanese dip served with freshly baked herd bread).

Valentino's entrees are considerably large, offering generous portions and therefore should be chosen very carefully - or you may find yourselves not being able to finish what you ordered. Some of their first-rate entrees are the Chicken Luciana (a sizable chicken breast in fresh basil with mushrooms in a light cream sauce) or Spaghetti de Mare (a delightful combination of seafood tossed with olive oil and garlic).

Combining exceptional food served in a relaxed setting, that boasts eccentric paintings accented by stylish Roman pillars spread throughout the dining room, Valentino's gives its customers the opportunity to immerse themselves in a world of friendly, Mediterranean, bistro-style dining.

Toy Line of The Week: Rainbow Brite

CURTIS
Comeau

You know, when I first started the Toy Line of the Week a few weeks ago, I thought that I would just feature toys I played with as a kid - you know, GI Joe, He-Man, and Star Wars. But, within the last week or so, I have received a several letters from females who wanted toys they played with as kids featured, too. Being the non-sexist guy that I am, I have decided that this week we will feature Rainbow Brite. Sorry, guys, next week it's our turn.

In the late 80's probably the most unlikely company to launch a cartoons series and toy line, did. Hallmark Cards, Inc. invented, patented, and worked with a cartoon animator to bring about the world of Rainbow Brite. Aided by an excellent marketing plan that captured the imagination of many little girls, the Rainbow Brite toy line did very well. By the end of '85, Hallmark had created several lovable characters: Rainbow, the seven Colour Kids, the furry little Sprites, five animals including Rainbow's horse, and of course, the villains Murky Dismal, and Lurky.

Hallmark introduced Rainbow Brite and her companions to the public through an onslaught of colouring books, 12-inch stuffed dolls, PVC figures, videos, and several miscellaneous items like lunch boxes, etc. Even though this toy line came to an end in 1987, there is still a substantial Rainbow Brite fan base that has survived to this day. For any of you who want to find out more information about Rainbow Brite check out <http://www.rainbowbrite.net>.
