Blood Clinic Saved Lives

Mark Cappis

NAIT staff and students have just saved 240 lives! On Friday, Sept. 24, NAIT was host to a Blood Donor Clinic put on by Canadian Blood Services. NAIT has been hosting blood donor clinics since at least 1991. Over 100 people turned out, making this one of the most successful September blood donor clinics in NAIT history. Eighty units of blood were collected, and when you realize that one unit can save three people, that means that NAIT saved 240 lives on Friday. Seventy of those who turned out were first-time donors, and Canadian Blood Services Community Development Coordinator Enrico Sirianni says that this is part of Canadian Blood Service's current strategy. With our aging population, Sirianni stresses that younger donors are needed. "This is all about people helping people," Sirianni said.

Canadian Blood Services would like to extend their thanks to all the NAIT staff and students who participated.

The next blood clinic here at NAIT will be on Nov. 19, but don't wait until then to donate blood. You can head on down to the Canadian Blood Services Centre at 8249 - 114 Street. They are open Monday to Friday, from 8 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., then from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Council Meeting Notes

The last NAITSA General Council meeting took place on Sept. 28. As always, it was a rocking shindig of politics and shaping the future of the school. Here's what went down for those who didn't go:

- Six student representatives were elected to Academic Council. Academic Council is one of the highest decision-making council's, which meets once a month to shape the future of NAIT. This year, our student representatives on the council are Nathan Lundy, Curtis Sinclair, Collin Perillo, Victoria Crafford, Jamie Cloutier, and Robert Jentsch. Not to mention your Vice President of Student Affairs, Aleesha Jex.

- The call went out for two student volunteers to sit on the Publication Board. The Publications Board are the folks who oversee the Nugget, the bulletin boards, and deal with complaints about all that stuff. Those wishing to volunteer were to meet with the Vice President of Student Affairs, Aleesha Jex after the meeting. Those students have now been announced as David Fester and Nathan Lundy.

- Concerns were expressed over the recent wave of thefts in the HP Centre, and requests were made to step up security over there. NAITSA said they'd raise the issue with NAIT President, Sam Shaw.

prior meeting (September 14), we were informed that the problems with the wireless network access in the HP Centre has to do with Windows XP Service Pack 2. It was also acknowledged that locker theft is a big problem every September, and that NAITSA is looking into a surveillance system to try to counter that.

And, as always, the doughnuts were superb. Next meeting is on Tuesday, Oct. 12 at 5:00 p.m. in room X107.

As for issues that arose from the

Five o'clock Charlie is Addictive

Laura Johnston

Although Edmonton has been thoroughly fortunate in its hefty supply of punk, jazz, ska and metal bands, it seems we always tend to fall short of an adequate number of alternative groups. Namely, great alternative groups. Last week, I was fortunate enough to find one.

A few years back, when the millennium was young and professional hockey players still played for a national league, Craig Schram, Steve Tchir, Trevor Belley, and Dave Meagher joined forces in hopes of creating a new spin on 'Wilco-like' sound. Five O'Clock Charlie was born with the collective initiative to seed and grow Edmonton's nearly non-existent alternative scene. Their recent climbing success has been a much awaited one.

There is a certain inexplicable and addictive element that is experienced when one listens to Five O'Clock Charlie. If I had to choose, I would probably attribute the appeal to the diverse array of instruments and the skills behind them. Thanks to the multi-talented Steve Tchir, various instruments, including an organ, create a haunting, psychologically structured arrangement of deliciously dark undertones. There are several instances where he even steps back from the norm to add a sequence of 'lap-guitar'- and unusual process in which one plays the guitar flat across the lap, much like a dulcimer. Although all the songs are written communally, the intricate and heart-racing lyrical values are accredited mostly to Craig Schram and add a flavourful spice similar to Modest Mouse or

Let your senses guide you

LAURA Johnston

For the most part, Edmonton seems to miss out on many of the country's artistic tours, whether it be music, special events, or fine arts. I blame Calgary. Thankfully, this isn't always the case, and once in a blue moon the city is blessed with a highly reputable show. For the next two months, four Canadian artists have been brought together to showcase their kinetic similar to speakers. On the front of each, an onomatopaeic word is embroidered. As they are read silently or spoken aloud, they leave an intense impression in the spectator's mind that echos the mechanical sound the words naturally produce.

Montreal native Claire Savoie has also contributed two projects to begin beating someone to a pulp. Kudos to whoever created head-cams.

Among the radiance, enchanting bubbles flow from a niche in the wall and drift about in a transparent orbit.

Karlee Fuglem is also a supplemental part of the artistry quartet. A single dark room houses both of her projects parallel to each other. The first is a glittering constellation of acetate circles, hung in masses on the wall by finishing line. Gently blowing house-fans circulate air from above, disturbing the plastic's gravitational slumber. It appears as though thousands of tiny stars sparkle in the light cast from the wall opposing it. On the other side of the room, observers are welcomed to touch a barrier's raised surface, which supplies a surprising varying heat when explored.

Germaine Koh has included a mixed-media installation which invites spectators to walk about a rain of tiny ball bearings, which accumulate in puddles on the floor. The experience of the 'dry rain' is accentuated by the 'moving carpet' on which you tread – a true once-in-a-lifetime encounter. The sheer-science of the piece is something to perceive in itself.

Feeling like your sense of taste is missing out? Not to worry. You get a free lollipop when you leave the exhibit. It's worth it, even just for that.

Let the cultural submersion begin! I'm sure everyone could use their fair share. Fear not, starving students. The gallery is always free on Thursdays. Take the time to treat yourself to some serious relaxation – exams will be here before you know it.

talents in the new Edmonton Art Gallery exhibit, Sense. Rather than the traditional gallery atmosphere, where sight plays the largest role, a whole new ambience is created as patrons are invited to explore the space with touch, smell and sound.

Millie Chen of Ridgeway, Ont. has introduced two new works specifically for the exhibit. The first consists of a peaceful white room with structurally patterned eucalyptus leaves nailed to the wall, haunted by a repeating motif chosen from Bach's Goldberg Variations. The fragrant scent released by the plant is not only soothing, but hypnotic in connection with the symmetrical arrangement surrounding the enclosure. The second piece, Buzz Humm, is composed of 38 boxes lined across a wall, which resemble something the display. In Une date, le nom d'un lieu et l'heure d'un rendez-vous, the viewer is secluded in a brilliant cylindrical chamber lit entirely with pure white light. Among the radiance, enchanting bubbles flow from a niche in the wall and drift about in a transparent orbit. This incredible meditative experience can not be matched. Outside the enclosure, a blurred video sequence is projected on an opposing wall. Admired all of this, the unwearied sound of a man and woman counting infinitively resonates from the gallery's open until close. In her second video sequence, Fiction, a pair of hands follows the boundaries of an apartment in a fanatical frenzy. The scene is eerily similar to something out of The Blair Witch Project. There was an undeniable fear that they would suddenly grab a blunt object and

Wake me up when September ends

LAURA Johnston

Oh, September — a mish-mash of confusing scheduling and chaotic, haphazard back-to-school stresses. As it slowly draws itself to a close, I'm fairly sure we're all glad to see this crazy and disorganized first month come to an end. I know I am. While we toast an eager farewell and look forward to the start of a structured daily routine, let us look back in appreciation of one of the greatest things September has brought us — the release of Green Day's new album, American Idiot.

Once again, Green Day successfully reminds us that they truly are the most prosperous punk band the world has ever seen. After the sub-standard production of Warning, fans can finally rejoice in the arrival of a new (dare I say it) Dookie quality album. Thanks to this, as well as Edmonton's large Green Day fan-base, the album has already become a number one seller at many local music stores.

One feature that makes this album quite unique is the track layout. The second and twelfth songs are actually made up of multiple tracks about 45 seconds long. The complete song structure and melody are adjusted and manipulated as each track changes, but the lyrics still contribute to the overall message conveyed. The story simply continues. I must admit, this was, at first, confusing, but the idea being carried out is superbly interesting. It's very difficult to get tired of a song that endlessly changes.

Perhaps you can't afford the album at the time being. Perhaps you only burn music and refuse to pay the artists you truly love for their tireless efforts. Either way, at least take the time out of your busy schedule to listen to your friend's copy. This record is already on its way to becoming a classic and I assure you will be deeply surprised.

Death Cab for Cutie. The set itself is a dreamy atmosphere, cool and calming amidst the mood-swaying crowd.

In 2002, Five O'Clock Charlie's EP, "Red Town," was released, which has since been discontinued. Lucky for us, their full-length album will be for sale in December of this year. As far as my sources have revealed, fans can catch their next show on November 2nd at Sidetrack Café with Cuff the Duke (A Three-Gut Production). Much anticipation is building within the band and all the members hope for the biggest and best turn-out they've ever recorded. This will certainly be a show to remember.

Something wrong at NAIT?

Things not right in the Classroom?

Dwayne Williams

NAITSA President

Over the last couple weeks many different issues have come to our attention here at the NAITSA office. Many issues have been resolved almost as immediately as we hear about them, others take some investigating and talking to people around NAIT. However, we know there are a lot of issues out there that we are not hearing about!

If you are having issues with fellow students, faculty, or just NAIT in general, please come down and let us know about it! Your Vice-Presidents and myself are here to ensure that you have a memorable and positive experience here at NAIT. When something is happening in the classroom that shouldn't be happening, let us know! Whether it is harassment, abuse, or anything else that ruins the experience that we all pay for.

Another thing to remember is the importance of establishing a class representative. Make sure your class has someone who can bring forward these complaints to us at NAITSA, and then we can work with this person to relay information back to the class as we deal with the issue.

If the issue is instructor related, make sure the instructor is notified of any issues that might be experienced in the classroom. It is only fair to give an instructor a right to work with you and help resolve any issues. However, if that does not work, please come down to our office and notify us of this issue as well.

The academic and student grievances contact at NAITSA is Aleesha Jex, Vice-President of Student Affairs, at 471-7607 or though email at aleeshaj@nait.ca.

I am also available for contact at 471-7608 or dwaynewi@nait.ca. Remember, don't let others ruin YOUR experience here at NAIT.

Questions? Concerns? Contact Dwayne Williams at 471-7608 or dwaynewi@nait.ca

Vice President of Finance and Administration Position Update

Elaine Devine

Hello everyone. Well it has been a very busy week here at NAITSA. I would just like to let all technologies and clubs know that if you are planning on organizing a raffle or a 50/50 for a fundraiser, you need to fill out an Eligibility For a Raffle License form at the NAITSA Office. We then have to fax that to Alberta Gaming & Liquor Commission and they then have to send back an AGLC ID# . This process can take two weeks or longer as the AGLC is very busy. So, if you are planning a raffle or think you may want to have one, please come in ASAP. The longer you wait, the longer it will take. Apologies to anyone this has inconvenienced, but we can't make this process any faster and you only have to do this once a year. If you have any questions, please call me or e-mail me and we can set up a meeting.

Thank you

Try Breathing Under Water

Aleesha Jex

VP Student Affairs NAITSA

Breathing under water... that's exactly how it feels when I have an asthma attack. Just in case you don't know what it's like to have asthma, I thought I would give you an idea. I've had it since...well, as long as I can remember. Everyone has his or her own weakness, and mine just happens to be breathing.

It's a lot like other illnesses, I take medication everyday, but there are many things that can trigger an asthma attack. Some triggers are not recognizable. In the middle of the night, occasionally I will wake up because I am unable to breathe. I would love to live a normal life, and not worry about passing out by the time I climb to the sixth floor of the business tower.

Don't get me wrong; I am in pretty good shape. I have been dancing since I was the age of four. Even now, I'm enrolled in one of NAIT's hip-hop classes; as well, I am taking salsa lessons each week.

In the end, when a person has a weakness, they usually try to improve on it. Well, to improve on my weakness, I have to increase my stamina and my lung capacity. To accomplish this, I have to challenge myself sometimes.

Just a simple THANK YOU to the individual(s) who approved the purchase of the new computers in the basement of the tower! It's nice to be able to see our tuition being put to good use... now all we need is more of them!! :D) ~Thankful Business Student~ to all the smokers in the annex. Move farther away from the doors. It is your own problem that you get cold, but there is no need to block the doorways. Maby you all should smoke somewhere else. <Pissed off Student>

To the jerks who crudely propositioned my girlfriend (and other girls) in the HP Center on Sept. 30: Get a life. That kind of crap won't get you laid, really. Read page 42 of your student handbooks, top of the third column. Harassment isn't cool. ~RD~

This is in response to Steve who's looking for a blind date. You intrigued me. I have long brown hair and brown eyes, a nice tall 5'6. New to the city and need some excitement. Think you're up for the challenge? Reach me through the grapevines, set up a meeting. Hope to see you soon. Nicole this one is going out to all the computer, and gaming geeks. I want to challenge you all to a good old time game on double dragon. Any takers, let me know at mrshow_on_hbo@hotmail.com

BOO!!!! To the French-Irish Pirate in Business lil' A

I am a Christian student here at NAIT. It is very difficult to find Christian fellowship in a secular school such as this one. I am wondering if there are any Christians out there who I can talk to or potentially form a Bible study group with, have lunch with, and/or play a sport with, etc. If you guys and girls are out there, please e-mail me at forgivenessner20@hotmail.com. I will try to e-mail you as soon as possible. Take care and God bless!

Important Notice Student/Staff PARKING During Open House

To accommodate our visitors on Friday, October 15, parking will be free to staff, students, and visitors. It will not be possible to protect staff and student stalls from visitors. Therefore, please come early that day to ensure a parking spot. If you vacate your stall during the day, there will be a strong possibility it will not be available upon your return.

Please note that the meters along 118th Ave in front of the NAIT Dining Room are City of Edmonton property and are not included in the above notice. Please be sure to pay the meters if you decide to occupy them. Inquiries should be directed to 471-7477. Thank you for your cooperation! Parking Services
