NAITSA Does It Again

Collin Perillo

Editor-in-chief

I don't mean to come across as tooting the proverbial horn of our student body council, but great job guys! Naturally what I am referring to is Shine Day and more specifically the Shine Day Thank You Party, dedicated to all the Shinerama volunteers. This all took place at the Nest on Saturday the 25th.

I must confess; after Ookfest I thought that it was all going to be down hill. And reasonably so I should add, I mean Ookfest was the biggest, 'baddest' (bad like Vegas not bad like bad eggs) rock show I've been to in a bit. Thus, it lined me up for a world of disappointment for the coming year. Now, I'm not going to go as far as to say that the Shine Day volunteer party could triumph over the mighty Ookfest, because it would be a matter of comparing apples and oranges, but I will make public that my now enlightened expectation of what is to come from the NAITSA's event planning crew has had the bar kicked up a notch or two.

The peachy keen selection of Social Code to be the secret headliner for the Shine Day celebration, exclusive to Shinerama volunteers, bewildered and entranced all who were in attendance. The cameo by Chris Ruddy from local up and comers Drive By Punch was a welcome addition to the mostly acoustic set that warmed the ambient atmosphere of our campus pub. The band not only preformed brilliantly, but also stuck around to meet, greet, and drink with volunteers from the event and then later limo it over to THE RUM to finish up the night celebrating the success with the rest of the party. In addition, this image would not be complete if I neglected to mention the lovely entourage of groupie-esque girlie friends following Social Code who materialized and conquered my gaze for the better part of the show. (Hi sexy Mel!)

The after party sentiment was reminiscent of post-orgasmic conversation; partly produced from a state of breathlessness, somewhat euphoric, but mostly just shiny. Now that the masterful events planning skills of Mike Anderson, Jen Grundke, Jamie Cloutier and NAITSA have been twice proven this year, the standard has been set. I now know what to expect from them in the forth coming year, and I'm sure they won't disappoint.

Doing Nothing A Daring Exposé

catch phrase, and all of a sudden, nothing was in. Everyone started leaning all over the place, until the government made it illegal to lean without an adult present. Doing nothing eventually went underground, and people were doing it like it was going out of style. Unfortunately, it did.

Seriously, writer's block is a b*tch. I sat down at my computer this evening, opened a bottle of Colt 45 (still in brown bag), put on my stained white tank top, and cried to the heavens. "Why have you nothing for me? Why can't you give me something to write about?" No response. I sat in the dark, with absolutely nothing in my brain. Then it hit me. Nothing! Of course! I'll write about nothing! (Yeah, yeah. Total Seinfeld rip off). Nothing is totally underrated.

Doing nothing was first invented by James Dean. The original rebel, he was always found leaning against a wall with one hand in his pocket. "I don't do nothing for nobody" was his famous

Until the sixties, that is. Of course, hippies were responsible for the revitalization of the nothing mindset. The mind altering 'medications' taken by these forward thinking visionaries enabled them to do nothing twenty four hours a day, seven days a week. Of course, doing nothing for that long had its downsides, and the hippies eventually started thinking of things to do. Making 'love' was popular in this particular group, which led to the next fad: naming children after things in the sky. This could have been a result of doing nothing, or a result of doing drugs, but either way, there are far too many 'Skylar Moonbeam Smiths' as a result of this.

Lady Oaks Battle For First Win This Season

Trevor Elliott

Heading into last week, the Lady Oaks had dropped four consecutive losses and were sitting at the bottom of the league standings. To make matters worse, the women had a date looming with the league leading Concordia Thunder. It was no wonder that a few of the women had already chalked the season up to experience

Coach Sue Melnyk was able to keep the team motivated, however, and the women were rewarded for their hard work and commitment by earning themselves a well deserved 2-2 draw at home against the Thunder. The women then turned around and won their first game of the season 7-5 in a high scoring thriller in Grande Prairie.

Melnyk attributes much of her team's slow start to the non-existent pre-season this year. The team usually relies upon the pre-season to work on team coherence, defensive toughness and strategy; however, due to the addition of a new college in the league this season, the ACAC avoided the pre-season. Hopefully the Lady Oaks can use last week's success as an incentive to perform well in the second half of the season.

The men's soccer squad faced the league leading Concordia Thunder last Wednesday afternoon. The Oaks played a fantastic game overall and controlled the ball for the majority of the match. The Oaks couldn't capitalize on any of their numerous offensive chances and, as a result, the Thunder took advantage of a defensive lapse by the Oaks and scored the only goal of the game just at the start of the second half. The game was marred by inadequate officiating and time-wasting tactics by the Thunder. The Oaks, determined to improve on their performance against the Thunder, handled the Wolves easily beating them 3-0 in Grande Prairie on Saturday.

Both teams now travel to Fort McMurray on Saturday to play Keyano College. The teams will then take advantage of a two week rest before playing SAIT at home. Despite the ability to score goals, both squads need the week of practice to work on defense. Regardless of the success of the past two games, the Oaks still have a lot of work to do and need to focus on the preparation and discipline to have success this weekend away against Keyano College.

Parking problems and solutions

KAREN L. Kay

You're sleeping in bed, the alarm goes off, you hit snooze and roll over. There's no need to rush to class, you have a parking permit, you were one of the lucky ones who met the 'special circumstances' and got that coveted, secure spot. Huh?...that wasn't you. Then you'd better get up, and stop dreaming. The reality of finding a parking space is about to begin.

For many NAIT students, finding a spot can be a nightmare, after all, and the number of students far outweigh the number of spaces. There are 18,300 full time students, and only 1,400 yearly permits, as for daily entry—a mere 923 spots. Hmmm, have you considered a bus pass? Full-time student Kris Bruckmann says it's the only way to go, "it's easier and I don't have to worry about having to park." Bruckmann, who is in Food and Nutrition Management, uses the bus even though he doesn't really like it, "there's a lot of standing and pushing and shoving, but it's cheaper." Computer Technology student Samantha MacDougall agrees. MacDougall says she can't afford her car, "parking, maintenance, and gas," she estimates it would cost her $50 per week if she drove. MacDougall says the bus doesn't run when she wants it to, "if it ran when I was done, instead of just peak hours, it would be great, but..." a monthly student pass is only $54, and you can pick it up at Campus Reads and Needs. It's easy to find your route, call transit information at 496-1611, or go to www.takeETS.com and click away.

As simple as that sounds though, some students are still against public transit. Ronnie Morin, full time Business Administration student, says he likes to come and go as he pleases, "I don't want to wait 15 minutes to take a bus; it's more convenient to bring my car." Morin took 40 minutes to find a parking spot last Tuesday. Bryan Scriven, full time computer student says he has to drive, "because the bus service in Sherwood Park is horrible, it's about a 45 minute ride." Scriven says he usually comes early, because by noon-time spots are rare.

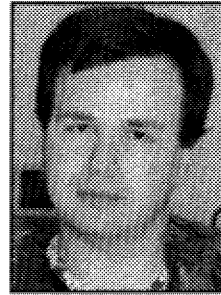

If you're caught up in this mess, and have struggled to find three loonies every day, there may be another solution besides the bus. Marie Essery, Parking Clerk, says you can still get a permit for parking at the Municipal Airport—NAIT rents stalls from them to compensate for lack of parking on campus. Essery says there are about one-hundred spots left. "The cost is $30 plus GST per month and includes a plug in (remember winter?). All the student is required to do is fill out an application form, we give them a parking permit and bus permit for the shuttle right away. The shuttle runs all day now approximately every 15 minutes starting at 6:45 am and ending at 5:45 pm. It drops you off at the bookstore and picks you up there."

Essery says, "Parking Services tries to be fair to every student that needs parking. If you have a concern with any parking issue, please contact us at 471-7539," oh, and don't park at Kingsway Garden Mall—"they will ticket."

Shine Day

Mark Cappis

NAIT has surpassed its Shinerama Day goals! $5,335.00 was raised for the Canadian Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Of course, a few individuals did a lot better than others. The number one car wash location was at the Armoury. The group down there pulled in $790.56. The top shoe-shine location was down at West Edmonton Mall. The gang down there pulled in $513.25.

The Tech Challenge was won by the folks over in Biological Science, who managed to pull in an extra $500 before Shinerama Day. Their plan? They played

'I'm Too Sexy' by Right Said Fred until enough people paid them to stop. Now, I have to correct a little error I made last week. I thought that the Tech Challenge would be running all year, but no! It was just for the week before Shinerama Day. So, the BioSci folks have won themselves the Molson House. But, not to fret, it was so successful that NAITSA is thinking about possibly doing it again.

But this is not the end of Shinerama fundraising this year. NAITSA is planning a series of monthly cabarets, the first one of which is currently deep within the planning stages. And, don't forget, the majority of Shinerama fundraising comes from the VIP cards! Good for VIP treatment at 21 clubs and pubs in the city, you can still grab one at the NAITSA office for $15.

Chaos in Print

Letting Go with Galileo

MARK Cappis

I'm going to be honest with you. I'm just doing this to impress women. This whole "writing for the Nugget" thing. I mean, have you seen any pictures of me? I'm this chubby little nerd in dire need of a haircut and cursed with a perpetual five o'clock shadow. All I got going for me is this big brain. It is my gift, my curse. I try to use it to impress women, but it constantly blows up in my face. As I've learned from just sitting back and overhearing conversations between my classmates, you do not impress women with words like, "The glimmer in your eyes is like that of the morning star." No, you impress her with, "Geez, you're hot. I know a place where we can get some twenty-five cent draft. Ya in?"

So, I'm sure the last thing you want to read is another rambling tale of an ancient physicist. In fact, I know you don't want to read it. Just turn the page. I'm sure there's some particularly filthy Grape Vines this week. But, what can I say? Mr. Editor Guy, Collin Perillo, asked for it. In our last meeting, he said to me, "Ever since you ended that first one with 'Next week: the story of Galileo,' I've been waiting for the story of Galileo! WRITE IT ALREADY!" Now, here I am, trying to track down a NAIJA exec so I can write a piece on how well Shinerama Day did, desperately trying to get my contractually-obligated three articles together. And since the good Mr. Perillo signs my paychecks, I should be more worried about impressing him rather than <name deleted to protect her identity>. Therefore, welcome to the story of Galileo.

You have to love Galileo. This guy was the first true physicist. He paved the way for what Newton and Einstein eventually did. The first story I read about Galileo was how he was really, really bored in church one day. He looked up and saw that the fire-and-brimstone sermon of the day was causing the chandelier to sway back and forth. Since Galileo was really, really bored, he started timing the swings of the chandelier, using his own pulse as a stopwatch. Did I mention he was really, really bored? And that boring sermon led to the whole study of simple harmonic motion, which governs everything from clock pendulums to waves. Sadly, this wasn't the last time that Galileo would be making waves in the church.

All great physics discoveries have come from boredom. I mean, we wouldn't have astronomy if it weren't for physicists, at home, on a Saturday night, bored mindless, looking at the stars saying, "Why can't I get a woman?" Eventually, they see something weird in the stars; dig out their telescopes, and boom! They've discovered a comet. Trust me, the vast majority of comets have been named after women that astronomers were hot for.

This brings us back to Galileo. He, too, saw something weird in the stars, namely these moving stars that had been dubbed "planets." So, like every other bored, dateless physicist, he dug out his telescope and looked at the planets. He was so bored he even built better telescopes to get closer looks. And before you knew it...HOLY FUCK! He noticed that this one planet, Jupiter, had moons spinning around it! THE PLANETS HAD FUCKING MOONS! Needless to say, this blew his 17th century mind.

He started looking at other things through his telescope. Before you knew it, he'd discovered moons around the other planets, and noticed that Saturn even had rings. He was starting to rock the 17th century with all this stuff. But, he started going a little loopy, too. It wasn't too long before he started staring at the Sun – through his telescope – to learn more about the Sun. He discovered sunspots, but went blind in the process. At least, that's the official reason. Some have speculated that he went blind because of his inability to get dates on Saturday nights and what that leads lonely men to do, but this isn't a forum for such vulgar debate. That's what the Grape Vines are for.

Now, as all this was going on, Galileo soon made what became his most famous discovery. He saw all these moons spinning around planets, and noticed that all the planets were spinning around something. Back then, the Catholic Church knew what everything was spinning around: "Everything spins around the Earth! We are the centre of the universe!" But as Galileo looked at all these spinning planets and moons and started doing the math, he went, "Uhh, sorry, don't think so. The numbers say that everything, Earth included, spins around the Sun."

So Galileo started running around teaching people that the church was fucked and that the Earth revolved around the Sun. As you can imagine, this really pissed off the church. The church started trying to reign in Galileo, but G stuck to his guns. This is the second-most important lesson we can learn from Galileo: when you know the truth; believe in the truth, you must fight for it and stick up for it.

But still, it wasn't too long before the church had a gun to Galileo's head and said, "Shut the fuck up with this 'Earth revolves around the Sun' crap or we'll fucking kill you!" This brings us to the most important lesson we can learn from Galileo: there comes a time

Death by Terry Fox Run? Asthma? Seriously?

GREG Walker

Did any of you read The Edmonton Sun last Thursday? The headlines read of a boy who died at the Terry Fox run. So I'm thinking to myself, "Okay someone dies at a public event, big deal." It was not until I actually read the article and found out how he died. After that, I laughed to myself. It wasn't because he died that made it funny to me, but how he died was what made me laugh.

The kid that died had asthma. Which isn't that big of a deal right? Wrong! It's a big deal if you're going to go do something strenuous to trigger your asthma attacks like say, run 3km! He ran all 3km of the run and came in first place. And what was his prize? DEATH! Now if you have a medical condition with yourself, wouldn't it be the smart thing to do to avoid activities that will trigger the illness of yours? Sounds logical enough to me, however not for this guy. I know that if I have a high cholesterol problem, I am not going to go participate in a burger-eating contest at McDonalds no matter what charity the event is held for. In the paper article, it says that he played AAA Hockey, which is also a vigorous physical activity. However, at least in hockey you get to sit down every few minutes. You're not on the ice for 3 periods straight. Maybe if the Terry Fox run had a 5-minute break in between kilometers, the boy would be here celebrating his first place win. The funniest line about the kid in the paper was, "A couple of his friends said, 'Don't run.' He said" no, we've got to run, that's what the

Terry Fox run is all about. Even his friends knew that he shouldn't be out there running; but no, he had to run all 3km. I guess Terry can give him a pat on the back in heaven because he knew "What the Terry Fox run was all about!" I'm saying that either his friends knew he was making a dummy move by running the 3km with his asthma problem, or they were just lazy and didn't want to run with him. I have my money on the latter.

So some of you idiots reading this are just thinking that this was just a mean spirited article to poke fun at a dead person, which is not entirely the case. It's just that even though you know you have a medical condition, you don't have to go out and try to be a superman by pushing the limits of it. See example, the kid that died in Morinville. Well at least The Edmonton Sun made him look like he was an athlete icon to everyone in that small town. Newspapers are good at making dead kids look like they were teen role models to all of their peers, which is usually the opposite. But come on, great people coming from a small shitty town such as Morinville? That's a laugh. OH wait, now THAT is being mean spirited.

Is There Something Wrong At NAIT?

Dwayne Williams

NAITSA President

Over the last couple weeks many different issues have come to our attention here at the NAITSA office. Many issues have been resolved almost as immediately as we hear about them, others take some investigating and talking to people around NAIT. However, we know there are a lot of issues out there that we are not hearing about!

If you are having issues with fellow students, faculty, or just NAIT in general, please come down and let us know about it! Your Vice-Presidents and myself are here to ensure that you have a memorable and positive experience here at NAIT. When something is happening in the classroom that shouldn't be happening, let us know! Whether it is harassment, abuse, or anything else that ruins the experience that we all pay for.

Another thing to remember is the importance of establishing a class representative. Make sure your class has someone who can bring forward these complaints to us at NAITSA, and then we can work with this person to relay information back to the class as we deal with the issue.

If the issue is instructor related, make sure the instructor is notified of any issues that might be experienced in the classroom. It is only fair to give an instructor a right to work with you and help resolve any issues. However, if that does not work, please come down to our office and notify us of this issue as well.

The academic and student grievances contact at NAITSA is Aleesha Jex, Vice-President of Student Affairs, at 471-7607 or though email at aleeshaj@nait.ca.

I am also available for contact at 471-7608 or dwaynewi@nait.ca. Remember, don't let others ruin YOUR experience here at NAIT.

Ook Of The Week

Jeff Mathers

Trevor Elliott

Jeff Mathers would best be described by his fellow team mates as a very skilled and talented young soccer player who exudes outstanding sportsmanship and comradery that supports his extraordinary efforts on and off the field.

Mathers has returned to the Oaks' soccer squad to play his fourth consecutive season as starting midfielder. Jeff works hard dur-rewarded by being selected as the Ook's player of the game.

Jeff is a fourth year Business Finance student here and is expected to graduate from NAIT in Spring 2006. Mathers is currently in his last year of studies before his practicum year; however, after three years of education, Jeff is still undecided on the direction his education will lead him. Jeff has a wide variety of directions in which he can take his career and hopes to make a decision after completing his practicum.

Mario started playing the sport of soccer at a very young age and his skill and athletic prowess has allowed him to gain valuable experience in the Alberta Major League during the short outdoor soccer seasons.

Jeff Mathers loves the attitude of his teammates and feels that Coach Wood, one of the better coaches he's played for, does an outstanding job ensuring that the team continues to play in the same direction from the start of training camp through to the end of the season. Jeff has enjoyed his career as a NAIT student and has always found the campus to be a friendly place to play and go to school.

Jeff feels that the team has suffered quite a few bad breaks this season; however, he is still confident that the team can turn their play around and finish the season very strongly in hopes of making the playoffs.

ing practices and throughout each and every game; however, Mathers does not get recognized for his contributions to his team quite as often as he should. Other players such as Jimmy Nfor, last season's ACAC MVP, generally receive more recognition than Jeff. Coach Wood feels, however, that there would definitely be a huge hole to fill without Mathers on the team. Jeff Mathers is definitely an asset to the team as he proved in the Ook's 1-0 loss to Concordia last Wednesday. Jeff played an outstanding two-way game and, as a result, was

Nait Cross Country Running Club

With a new fall term comes another chance to workout with the NAIT X-Country Running Club. This is a mixed student and staff running club. The NAIT X-Country competition team will be made up of students from this club.

Runners of all levels are welcome. The emphasis is on getting exercise and enjoying the support of running in a group. Those who wish can test themselves in competition against the other colleges in Alberta and on a weekly basis against some of Edmonton's best cross country runners.

We meet twice each week at 4:30 at the NAIT Gymnasium. Workouts will be Mondays for a group work out in the NAIT area. Wednesdays we run in the weekly Edmonton Open River Valley Fun Races.

ACAC Championship run is Saturday, October 30, 2004 at Gold Stick Park in Edmonton.

Doing Nothing

A Daring Exposé

With the hippies getting the ball rolling, the seventies picked up doing nothing with a vengeance. However, the new slogan of nothing had a make over, turning it into 'Do nothing... except for chicks, booze, and rock 'n' roll!!!!' Many garage bands were formed and 'hanging out' made its first appearance. The fashion industry also embraced the nothing mindset, creating livable clothing items such as leisure suits. The people of the seventies embraced this new alteration of doing nothing, and ended up doing way more than what is implied by 'doing nothing'. For example, people started caring about things. And doing stuff. Like acid. They did a lot of acid...

The eighties, unfortunately, was a 'do something' era. In fact, it was more like a 'Do something, anything! Do it all! Make everything loud and obnoxious!' kind of era. Most of us would like to forget being a part of this totally extreme decade, but the evidence is apparent. Spiky hair, skinny ties (à la 'Footloose'), and poofy sleeved prom dresses plague our past.

Luckily for us, the early nineties saved us from doing things with the introduction of the Simpsons. Our favorite 'do badder', Bart Simpson, revitalized doing nothing with the hilarious catch phrase, 'I didn't do it'. Soon, doing nothing was once again 'en vogue'. The mid nineties continued with the 'do nothing' mindset. Grunge bands exploded onto the scene with their lazy, sloth-like attitudes. Teens everywhere adopted the fashion of their favorite musicians, sporting baggy, unwashed jeans and dirty plaid shirts. On a somber note, this fad was destroyed by the influence of spandex biking shorts, thus ending 'doing nothing' in the nineties forever.

The art of doing nothing has since lost its luster for many Canadians. Presently, there haven't been any increases in doing nothing in any Edmontonian households. So much emphasis is placed on doing things that the blissful silence of nothing has been forgotten. Hopefully, the message will grow strong and doing nothing will again resurface. Lord knows it has already shown itself on my brother's days off. He's always been a forward thinker.

"Temp" Christians Get Me Angry

GREG Walker

So a few days ago, I was bored at my house on the Internet and for some God-unknown reason, I found myself on a Christian forum. I decided to input my 2 cents about the new R. Kelly album, which I thought, had a great spiritual message, because I thought that people who don't normally listen to his music should check out. Three minutes after my post, a swarm of Christians with hatred criticized me towards my taste of music, and R. Kelly. They told me that, all artists only pretend to worship God and that music should only be to praise Jesus. At this time, I was super pissed at all of them until I realized what type of Christians I was talking to.

You see, there are two types of Christians in the world. One is the regular Christian. These kinds keep to themselves and don't try to preach towards other people or make anyone feel uncomfortable when the topic of religion comes up. They're super, I love them. The other ones we will call the "temp" Christians. The "temp" Christians are the bunch that usually do something bad in their life, are about to kill themselves until a "temp" Christian recruits them. After being recruited, they're high off Jesus. They feel that they are better people now because they have eliminated all bad things in their life. They spend their Sunday, Wednesday, and Fridays at youth group trying to form bible studies in schools, at work, and other local gatherings. All their old CD's are boxed up, or thrown out and replaced with overpriced CD's of religious bands from the local Christian store. They fill their wardrobe with shirts that are blatant rip-offs of name brand companies with some spiritual message tagged on. Remember those "CK" shirts that read Calvin Klein in between the letters? Remember the religious company that made the EXACT same shirts only with "Christ our King" written on them? That company made a killing off poor old Calvin. Christians are SO creative. The "temp" Christians also like to remind you of their religious status and inform about what they can, and cannot do at a function you would invite them to.

For example: Regular Girl: "Hey Sally want to go to the bar tonight?"

"Temp" Christian Girl: "Well, I used to drink a lot, but ever since I let Jesus into my heart, I don't drink."

Regular Girl: "Okay that's fine. Want me to pick you up at 10?"

"Temp" Christian Girl: "10 seems pretty late. I can't stay out past 12."

Regular Girl: "Why is that?"

"Temp" Christian Girl: "Because I'm Christian."

Regular Girl: "Shit! Are all you Christians this lame? I'm gonna hang out with some devil worshippers!"

The "temp" Christians I encountered on the Internet, block out any opinion or comment directed towards them that is not coming from their religious figure. It will go in one ear and out the other giving them ample time to preach the word of god from the 7 bible verses that they know. Damn, these "temp" Christians don't have a creative bone in their body. Well, the most creative item "temp" Christians have ever come up with are those "What Would Jesus Do" bracelets, which spawned license plates, t-shirts, coffee mugs, etc. And what would Jesus do? HE DAMN SURE WOULDN'T LEND HIS NAME TO EVERY SINGLE PRODUCT IMAGINABLE. That's blasphemy! "Temp" Christians sure know how to milk a product though. Talk about using Jesus as a cash cow instead of spiritual inspiration. Then after about three months, these Christians realize that God isn't a magic genie that makes all your problems disappear at the drop of a hat, so they stop the religious game and go back to the way they were just as their "temporary Christian" pass expires.

Now please don't misunderstand as though I were hating on Christians. I've been baptized, I go to church every Sunday, most of the time when you see me walking around school, you'll see me wearing two Jesus necklaces, so I have no reason to bash them. However, your actions demonstrate how you are a Christian, not by marketing it to everybody. Plus God hates "temp" Christians. He told me himself in a dream. You can't sell him bullshit people; he knows what the price is.

Confessions From Internet Pimps

GREG Walker

We already know that girls are stupid. However, what most people don't know is that they become even stupider in front of a computer. What most people ALSO don't know is that they become complete morons if that computer has the Internet. A girl's time on the Internet consists of three things: Hotmail, playing Bejeweled, and using MSN. Now using MSN is the worst thing for them because this is the time for most guys to shine. Most guys know what to say to get naked photos from them, get live webcam shows, or phone sex from them on MSN. I know this because I have done this as well. What guy hasn't? So upon taking comments from guys from NAIT just like myself, and to make you all a little more conscious and aware when using MSN, ladies, I would like to bring you "7 Confessions From Internet Pimps."

• Chicks online need to realize that they are just one-step below the same chicks I see at a strip club when it comes to really caring what the fuck their problems are.

• Bitches online need to realize that just because I say I would fuck you, doesn't really mean I want to. I am just saying that to get nudes to send them to all my friends.

• Bitches also need to realize that at parties, I have a PowerPoint of their nudes playing on my computer for all to laugh at.

• Oh and sluts, if you did a webcam show for me, do a search on KaZaa for your name. You will find that same show.

• That's not really my dick you see me rubbing on webcam, it's the end leg of a broken chair.

• Don't bitch at me for not talking to you anymore either. You gave me your nudes, you're just a single serving whore to me. Move along.

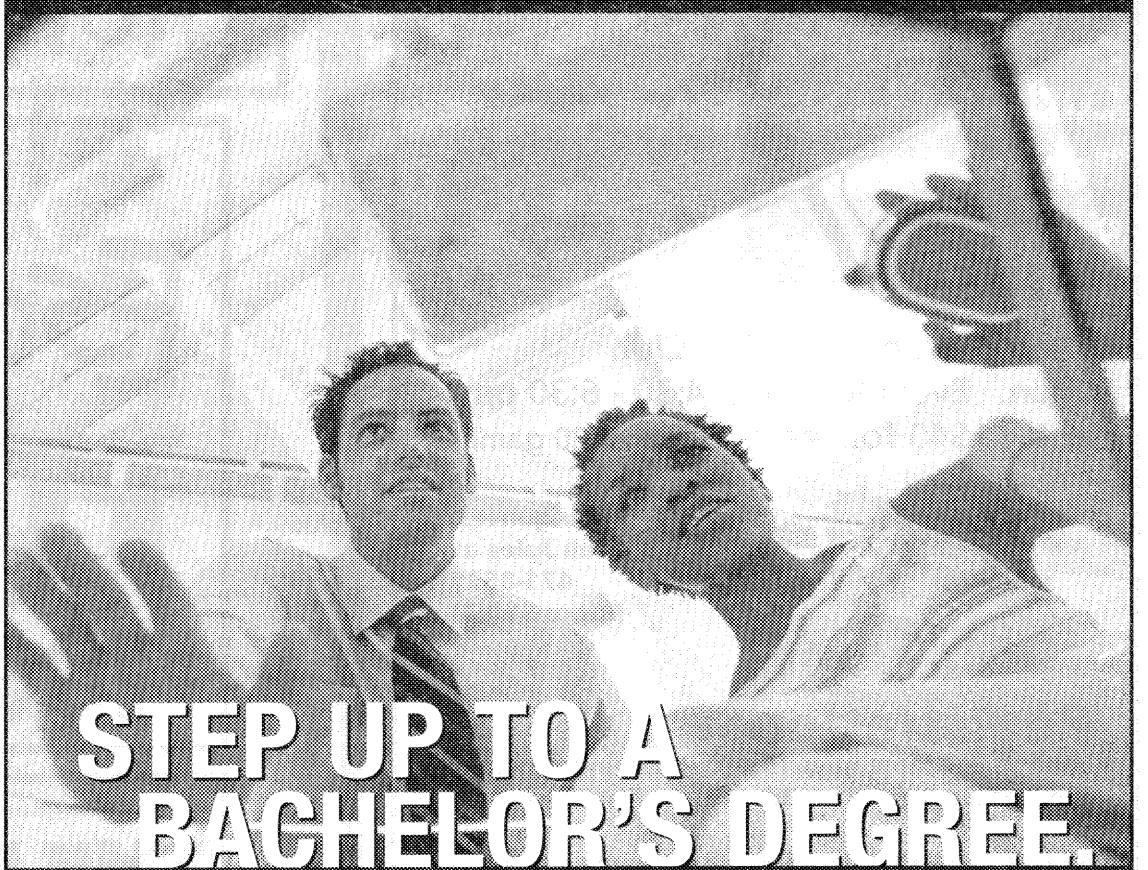

• Oh yeah, and chicks when we phone bone and I say I am about to cum, I'm really just laughing and all my friends are listening in too. Dumb Bitches.

• Finally, bitches, you're all just some online skank. I don't care what's on your mind; I am faking it, let's cut to the chase. Don't try get to know me and fall in love with me, just send your nudes and you won't get hurt.

I bet most of the girls are thinking, "Well now I know their secrets and I just know what and what not to do." Oh please, don't take me as a moron. I just listed 7 truths of about 800. I can't give all guys' secrets away. I still want to continue getting and sharing naked photos of girls that go here, and there are a lot that I have seen. Oh and girls, if you feel offended by this article and want to send hate mail, sell me drugs, or solicit casual sex, add me to your MSN!! bpwally@hotmail.com! I will do my best to resolve any problems you have with me! ☺

Classifieds

I am a Christian student here at NAIT. It is very difficult to find Christian fellowship in a secular school such as this one. I am wondering if there are any Christians out there who I can talk to or potentially form a Bible study group with, have lunch with, and/or play a sport with, etc. If you guys and girls are out there, please e-mail me at forgrivensinner20@hotmail.com I will try to e-mail you as soon as possible. Take care and God bless!

Letters

To all those people who were completely annoyed in the cafeteria and throughout the school last Thursday by the obnoxious BioSci girls blasting 'I'm Too Sexy'...Thank you!!!

In just a few short hours, we managed to raise $500 for Cystic Fibrosis. Of course, our major contributors played a huge role in our success. A special thanks to Bob Teskey, All-Sport Chiropractic; and John Ulici Petrut for their large contributions. All of our volunteers worked extremely hard and we appreciate their time and effort.

Thank you again for all of your toonies, loonies, quarters, and pennies, whatever you were able to give. The children suffering from C.F. will greatly benefit from your coffee money. Cheers!

Letting Go with Galileo

when you have to let it go. And trust me, when someone has a knife to your throat and is saying, "See it my way or you die," that's a good time to let it go.

So, Galileo recanted. He told the good people of old Italy, "Hey, I was wrong. Turns out everything doesn't revolve around the Sun." And then, as the church's officials led Galileo to the edge of town, with a gun pressed to Galileo's back to make sure he didn't change his mind, Galileo is reported to have muttered under his breath, "Fuck you. It does."

But still, he let it go and lived happily ever after. History proved him right. In fact, the Church even eventually apologized for what they did to Galileo...in 1969, after men landed on the moon and there really was no more excuse.

So, I'm going to try to learn from Galileo again. I'm letting it go. Yeah, I want to write stuff like this, but you don't want to read it. I would love to say that these rambling tales are the best part of the Nugget, but they aren't. I'm letting it go. I'm going to stick to writing the hard news and try impressing women some other way. Let's see if I can get the hang of this. *ahem* "Hey, baby, I know a place where we can get some twenty-five cent draft. You in?" But, under my breath, you know I'll really be saying, "The glimmer in your eyes is matched only by that of the morning star."

Next time, the story of Plato and how a night of binge drinking turned into the most influential political text of all time. When you write my next paycheck, Col- lin, remember, I love you.

Dear Bonny and Guest

The hilarious column where you can seek advice from a normal, unaccredited NAIT student and her zany weekly guest! To submit your questions, email us at BonnyandGuest@hotmail.com

This week's guest: Luigi from Brooklyn

Dear Bonny and Guest,
I like this little blond girl that sits in front of me in class. The other day, she left her laptop open and I noticed it is loaded with pornography. I really want to ask her out, but now I'm worried I might not 'measure up'. What should I do?
-Nice Guy with a 'little' problem

Dear Nice Guy,

Bonny: It is completely okay for you to feel uncomfortable with your discovery. It is hard enough to ask someone out without the weight of trying to live up to the 'actors' in pornography.

Luigi from Brooklyn: Hey! Don't be so upset that she likes the 'bing bing'. This could be an excellent opportunity for you to learn something you could adore! 'Bing! Bing!'

Bonny: Um, Yes. This could merely mean your girl is curious and maybe a little shy in the bedroom. This could be her way of being more open with her sexuality.

Luigi from Brooklyn: Your little tart could be sending you a message! 'Bing! Bing!' Maybe she wanted you to see the laptop to hint that she wants to 'hey bada boom bada bing' with you! 'Bing! Bing!'

Bonny: I have to agree with Luigi from Brooklyn. I think your girl really likes you and doesn't know how to tell you. I would suggest talking to her, and not worrying about the 'little problem' you mentioned.

Luigi from Brooklyn: Hey! Even if you have a little 'bling' you could watch some of her pornography to learn a few tricks. (If ya know what I mean). 'Bing! Bing'

Bonny: I would suggest asking her out on a date first...

Luigi from Brooklyn: Naw! No time like the present, Nice Guy! You'll have her singing 'La la! La la la LA la!' in no time. 'Bing! Bing!'

Bonny: Uh huh. Well, start with that date, and who knows, Luigi from Brooklyn could be right.

Luigi from Brooklyn: Of course I'm right! Just tell her you took advice from Luigi from Brooklyn. Hey bada boom bada bing! She'll thank you many times over. 'Bing! Bing!'
