First Royal Ranger LTC Training Camp in Malawi

In March, as part of an event put together by Royal Ranger International (RRI), an instructor from the USA flew over to Malawi to run a training camp for the future Royal Ranger leaders of the nation. He was joined by Patrick Kawe, national commander of the Royal Rangers of Kenya, and together they trained 95 new leaders. A television news crew interviewed some of the trainees and church leaders and the event received positive coverage on the national news of Malawi. Two Ugandans were also able to join in the training, thanks to help from RRI and some American sponsors.

Royal Rangers is quickly going forward in Malawi. In fact, the Assemblies of God of Malawi plans to host the next Royal Ranger Africa Summit from April 24- 28, 2009. This will take place right after the 6th annual RRI Council meeting convenes in Nairobi, Kenya.

Royal Rangers Growth in Uganda

The Royal Ranger ministry is quickly spreading in Uganda. Two more national leaders were recently trained at the LTC camp in Malawi and have continued to grow the work among orphans in their hometown. In the meantime, new Royal Ranger outposts have been springing up, and Uganda now has 100 new leaders ready to receive Royal Ranger Basics training. This will be one of the first big RRI projects in Africa this fall when Andy Whitman, the RRI Africa Liaison, reaches the mission field with his family. He plans to travel to Uganda with a team of Kenyan instructors and hold this much needed training event. Please pray for the fledgling ministry in Uganda as RRI and the Rangers of Kenya make the needed preparations.
