Charles L. Kilgore
Muskogee, Oklahoma

The Cleansing Power
Dedicated Salesman

neral Service School in Evanston, Illinois; holds membership in numerous state funeral supply salesmen's clubs, and is a past member of the sales and marketing executives of Tulsa, Oklahoma.

At home in Muskogee, Kilgore lives with his wife Goldie and their sons, Mike 21 and Mark 10. Mike is a graduate of Evangel College, majoring in chemistry. For enjoyment, Kilgore loves to read biographies of famous men. He also collects Bibles for his library.

With the challenge today for the laity to involve themselves in spreading the gospel of Jesus Christ, Kilgore responds with every fiber of his being to meet that challenge. He recognizes the responsibility that is his to take the gospel to those men within his sphere of influence who might not otherwise be confronted with the gospel message, and he is doing something about it.

Summer and fall are ideal times for Royal Rangers Powwows and Leadership Training Camps. A Powwow campcraft training class (above) is a part of the camping experiences, and so is learning by practice (right)—as putting up a tent. The Leadership Training Camp in New York still remains to be held. Applications for this can still be received.

Training to witness is essential for every Christian. Workers at the Harbor Assembly of God, Costa Mesa, California (above), improve their skill by practicing with each other while engaged in an Action Crusade with William J. Wind as the trainer.

J. P. Jones (right above), chairman of the National Action Crusades Council, held an Action Crusade at the First Assembly in Bartlesville, Okla.

One of the most treasured memories from any Royal Rangers camping experience is the early meeting as the rays of sunlight break through the trees and cast light across the rows of boys.
